PUBLIC SAFETY

Curbing police station hours

Town officials discuss possibility

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In 1962, the Cohasset public safety facility as it exists today first opened its doors. The building has been staffed 24-hours-a-day, seven-days-a-week ever since. But 50 years later, there's a chance the station could go dark for the very first time.

As Cohasset prepares to transition to the regional dispatch center in Hingham, joining a handful of neighboring towns, concerns have been raised about what will happen to the public safety facility after dark.

The South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center (SSRECC) opened last October, meaning that the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset would soon rely upon a centralized 911-call center for emergency assistance. So far, the other towns have all joined in; Cohasset is expected to fully join by Memorial Day.

"If the station goes dark, we're going to have to secure the facilities physically, replacing doors and securing windows, alarm the building, add video surveillance..."
Chief Mark DeLuca

While the new call center features state-of-the-art technology that state Rep. Garrett Bradley has called a model for other Massachusetts communities — moving dispatchers over could very likely result in an unmanned police station in Cohasset.

Google the term "unmanned police station," and pleasant stories simply don't come up. This fact is not lost on Cohasset officials who have taken the matter into consideration and are exploring options.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting that in the Local artist is Renaissance woman

Manuel dips her brush in multiple fields

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The old adage states that one can be a "Jack of all trades" but master of none. Challenging the expression is resident Dr. Shelli Jones Manuel, who as a painter, harpist, singer, composer, author, playwright, journalist and ordained minister proves that one can, in fact, be a "Jane" of all trades... and master of several.

"You don't need to be good at just one thing," Manuel smiles during a tour of her portrait gallery in Cohasset. "You can learn and be a student your whole life long."

Manuel runs Harps, Tea & Me, a gallery, studio/workshop, and local headquarters for her personal business, out of the James Brook Crossing building next to the railroad tracks.

Here, people can observe Manuel's work, set up appointments with her for portraits, or book her to play the harp at weddings or parties. She also frequently meets clients for tea at the Windsor Tea Shop down the hall.

Dr. Shelli Jones Manuel sings and plays the harp. Manuel said she learned to play the instrument at the age of 35. COURTESY PHOTO

A Cohasset resident for the past year, the self-described jetsetter says she splits her time between Cohasset, Tulsa, Okla., and Washington, D.C. Prior to moving into town, Manuel and her husband David, an author, lived in Hull for five years. She originally came to New England for college, eventually met her husband and settled in Massachusetts — but more on that as the artist's story unfolds.

Some might call a person with Manuel's accomplishments a "Renaissance" woman; it's not much of a coincidence, then, that the artist, musician and writer said that she holds classical painters in high esteem.

It was during a high school class trip to France in 1973 that Manuel says she decided art was her calling. The then 16-year-old was wowed by the art she saw displayed at the Louvre, from artists like DaVinci and Michelangelo. As they stood near a fountain waiting for their bus, her fellow classmates began making "bold declarations of the impact they would have on society," Manuel recalls. "My turn slipped away when the bus arrived. I threw my head up at the sky and saw

WEDNESDAY

Brush fires' forum

Experts answer questions in live blog

By Frank Mand
fmand@wickedlocal.com

It's high noon in Cohasset and communities across the region.

The shock of a winter without snow has given way to the realization that these past several months were devoid of moisture in any form, transforming abandoned lots, woodland glades and marshlands into kindling for a potential brush fire.

On Wednesday, April 25 at 12 noon Wicked Local will present a live blog event titled "High Noon: Brush Fire Survival for Communities and Homeowners."

Featuring National Fire Protection Association's Michele Steinberg, Plymouth Fire Chief Ed Bradley and area fire chiefs, "High Noon" will offer the latest information on brush fire prevention and mitigation and give you the opportunity to have your questions answered live, by the experts.

Brush fires are nothing new: The history of Eastern Massachusetts is replete with stories of large-scale brush fires.

Just to the south Plymouth is actually the home of a fire dependent ecosystem – almost entirely encompassed by Myles Standish State Forest – known as a Pine Barrens.

Most of the major brush fires we have experienced have taken place during periods in which the region was sparsely populated.

But today a massive brush fire has the potential to do millions of dollars in property damage and put thousands of present-day inhabitants at risk.

UPS Store offers recycling solutions

In celebration of Earth Day, on April 22, The UPS Store, located at 759 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset is encouraging consumers to help protect the environment by bringing in clean, foam packaging peanuts in all sizes, shapes and colors for reuse. This is part of an ongoing effort by The UPS Store to increase peanut recycling throughout the year.

According to the Plastic Loose Fill Council, an organization founded in 1991 to promote the reuse of polystyrene loose-fill, more than 30 percent of plastic loose-fill is used again.

In addition to domestic and international shipping, The UPS Store offers full-service packaging; digital and online printing; black-and-white and color copies; document finishing, binding, laminating, etc.; printing services, business cards, letterhead, rubber stamps, etc.; notary; custom crating and shipping for large items, furniture, artwork, motorcycles, etc.; mailbox and postal services; office and packaging supplies; and more.

Cohasset K-9 unit rescues autistic boy

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Wednesday (April 18), the Norwell Police Department requested mutual aid from the Cohasset Police Department's K9 Unit. A 14-year-old Norwell boy, who is autistic, ran away from his parents in the area of Hemlock Road in Norwell. Officer Pat Reardon and his K9 partner Erik responded immediately.

Approximately 45-minutes after the boy ran from his parents, Officer Reardon and K9 Erik found him hiding behind a tree in the woods. The boy was in good health and was turned over to a Norwell Police officer.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca said incidents like this demonstrate why the K-9 is such a valuable tool.

"An incident like this makes all the time and effort that goes into establishing a K-9 unit worthwhile," he said.

While he does not wish for anyone to get lost and need K-9 assistance, DeLuca is happy to have the unit in place.

"I am sure there will be more incidents," he said. "Therefore the K-9 is a great tool to have in place now."

Officer Patrick Reardon and K-9 Erik found an autistic Norwell boy who had run away from his home. COURTESY PHOTO

Eggs thrown

Police are summonsing three Cohasset teens and one Scituate teen, all age 18 and seniors at Cohasset High, to Quincy District Court to face charges of vandalism and being minors in possession of alcohol.

Police said one concerned citizen walked into the station and two others called after their cars were egged while traveling on North Main Street on Sunday night by Woodside Cemetery.

Police responded and said the four teens took off running.

Police located the teens behind the skating club off East Street in Hingham. Police found eggs and beer in the cemetery.

In one of the incidents, the car window was open and the egg hit a dog inside the car causing quite a mess. The dog was not injured, police said.

Check

Police gave advice to a local business last week about how to handle a check they had received for $900 in merchandize that had insufficient funds.

Intoxicated

Police responded to a report from Curtis Liquors at 3:56 p.m. on Monday (April 9) about an intoxicated woman, age 40, who had left in a 1999 Dodge Caravan and headed north on Route 3A. Police said the liquor store had refused her service. Her car was registered in Leominster, Mass., police said. They checked the area and notified Hingham and Scituate right after the incident.

ID theft

A 41-year-old Cohasset woman was provided an identity theft packet at the police station on Wednesday (April 11) after reporting that her social security number had been compromised.

Road rage

Police responded to reports of a report of a verbal altercation in the parking lot outside Walgreen's at 1:20 p.m. on Thursday (April 12). Police said a 64-year-old Norwell woman told police she had been the victim of a road-rage incident. The other driver, who drove a black truck and was about 55 years old, got out and yelled at her in a very aggressive manner. The man had left the area by the time police arrived.

Campfire

Police and fire broke up a small campfire behind the water treatment plant off King Street last Friday at around 8:20 p.m. A caller reported seeing a group in the woods. The campfire was extinguished and the trio – three Scituate males ages 16-23 – were sent on their way. There was no malicious intent by the group, police said.

Restraining order

A Cohasset woman went to police to obtain a restraining order last week against her ex-husband, who had sent her threatening text messages and nude photos taken during the marriage. He also made serious threats against her, police said. Police contacted a judge who issued the restraining order.

Dog in boat

Police responded to calls about a dog in a rowboat behind Atlantica last week. As it turned out the dog was not in any danger, police said.

Not stolen

A caller reported on Sunday that the employee's ex-boyfriend had stolen the employee's vehicle. As it turned out, the employee's new boyfriend had borrowed the car.

UPDATE

Counterfeit credit card scheme uncovered

On Tuesday (April 3), Cohasset Police patrols conducted a motor vehicle stop and field interviewed two male subjects after they attempted to purchase $900 worth of gift cards at Stop & Shop with numerous credit cards that were declined. The subjects were identified and determined to be from Connecticut and New York. No credit cards or other evidence of a crime were located during the stop and the subjects were released.

A week later on April 10, a citizen notified Cohasset Police that he had observed numerous credit cards in the vicinity of the motor vehicle stop on the side of Route 3A in Cohasset. A responding patrol officer collected 11 credit cards on the side of road from various credit card issuers.

Coordination with the credit card issuers determined that the credit cards were counterfeit. Detectives contacted a security investigator from a major credit card company who came to police headquarters and used a card reader to download the magnetic-stripe data from the cards, which disclosed that the numbers encoded on the cards were inconsistent with the numbers embossed on the cards. These findings suggested that the subjects stopped on April 3rd were involved in a scheme to produce counterfeit credit cards and encode these cards with stolen credit card numbers belonging to other persons.

A counterfeit card is an illegally manufactured and embossed card with an encoded magnetic-stripe, which has been electronically compromised. Through new, easy-to-use technology, criminals are now capturing data contained on the magnetic-stripe of a legitimate card, and using it to encode a counterfeit card. When an electronic authorization attempt is made with the encoded card, it can result in an issuer approval of a fraudulent transaction.

Data theft of legitimate credit card numbers that are later encoded on counterfeit cards can occur at any location where a legitimate card is swiped for authorization. The most common skimming scenario involves track data compromised at a merchant location where the owner or a collusive employee skims full-track data during a legitimate transaction.

Other potential points of compromise for skimming include anywhere account information is stored either on a short or long-term basis. This includes point-of sale terminals, personal computers, and mainframes. As in the other skimming scenarios, criminals hack into these data storage systems to retrieve and copy valid account data. This information is subsequently encoded on counterfeit cards or re-encoded on stolen cards.

The incident is still under investigation.

Drought advisory issued

Water levels in both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir remain adequate, but have started dropping due to the lack of precipitation.

Cohasset Water Department, Drought Management Plan phase remains at the "advisory" level as the region continues to experience drought conditions. The U.S. Drought Monitor recently upgraded all of eastern Massachusetts from a "moderate" drought to a "severe" drought. In the latest update, issued on April 10, 51 percent of the Bay State is now in the "severe" drought category.

Cohasset Water Department regularly monitors precipitation, reservoir levels and flow in Bound Brook and Aaron River. Precipitation year to date is about 50 percent of normal. Water levels in both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir remain adequate, but have started dropping due to the lack of precipitation. Both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir are down about 15 percent of their maximum capacity and consistently dropping each day. The Water Department recently increased releases from the Aaron River Reservoir to maintain Lily Pond water levels, and continues to meet minimum release requirements at both Aaron River Dam and the Bound Brook Control Structure.

The Ellms Meadow well station has been returned to service for the season to minimize the production demands from our surface water supplies.

Cohasset Water Department encourages prudent use of water by all customers. It will take a prolonged, significant precipitation event to return conditions to normal. Visit the website at www.cohassetwater.org home page banner on a regular basis for updates on the drought status.

POLICE STATION

current fiscal 2013 budget, Cohasset does not have the funds to maintain 24/7 coverage of the public safety building. Once dispatch moves to the SSRECC, no one will be manning the station at night or in the early morning hours.

"We are stuck in a position where we do have to make the building go dark," said Milanoski. But on Wednesday, the town manager said that this is not necessarily a done deal.

"I don't think it's official yet. We're going through a cost analysis and now have to plan for the cost of turning it dark through the SSRECC agreement for regional dispatch."

According to an official police document on the transition to the SSRECC, the town of Norwell's police department had a similar analysis done. The cost of fortifying their police station if they, too, go dark, could cost an excess of $100,000 to install alarms, video, locks, and unbreakable glass in their station lobby.

While the Capital Budget Committee has approved a request for $80,000 worth of repairs to the police and fire station (see related story) to go before the May 12 Town Meeting, the cost for securing the station at night is still somewhat unknown. Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer said the security upgrades would likely cost $20,000 for minimum requirements ("Although we had some other estimates that were much higher," Gaumer said); this would involve replacing wooden doors that lead to the evidence rooms with steel-frame doors. As a firm cost has yet to be discussed, Gaumer said that his committee has yet to vote on the additional upgrades.

Selectman Leland Jenkins suggested adding an outside emergency phone linked to the SSRECC as "a minimum start" for folks who come to the station for assistance and find it empty. Fire Chief Robert Silvia agreed that it's a start.

"Presently... there's just a big sign that says if the station's empty, go to the other side of the building," said Silvia. The fire side of the house does not have a lobby like the police station does, and the fire chief said that they have not yet explored what adding a lobby would cost. But an outside phone sounded like something they could "absolutely" do, Silvia said.

Milanoski brought up the possibility of obtaining a grant from the SSRECC to help cover the costs of security upgrades.

"The final numbers haven't been set right now, but [SSRECC] is providing some money to each community to video link back to the SSRECC," Milanoski said Wednesday. "It's still in progress."

Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray was on site at the SSRECC during its opening in October. The Cohasset Mariner asked him about the transitional grant for communities facing the possibility of an unmanned station.

"That's something we're willing to look at," Murray said at the time. "We want to hear these types of issues and needs... [Regionalization] has obviously been successful to date. We're saving taxpayer dollars and enhancing public safety."

Police Chief Mark DeLuca is hoping that public safety is in fact the top priority. The chief discussed the risks of leaving the station unmanned overnight.

"If the station goes dark, we're going to have to secure the facilities physically, replacing doors and securing windows, alarm the building, add video surveillance — there are items in the building that have to be safeguarded," DeLuca said Wednesday.

The police chief's preference would be "manning the station with a full-time professional trained in medical aid and CPR." Station attendants would be paid from $13 to $17 an hour and would be trained in first aid, CPR, and suicide prevention.

Last month, the police department released a cost analysis with three options for the station: 1) having a mixture of part-time and full-time attendants, 2) hiring all part-time personnel for night shifts, and 3) closing the station from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. on weekdays and all day on weekends.

Option one listed the following as advantages: being able to use existing personnel for day shifts, maintaining the station 24/7, and no need for further security upgrades. However, this would require hiring two full-time employees and four to six "floating" personnel. At a median pay rate of $15 an hour, this would cost approximately $1,920 per week or $99,840, according to the department's analysis.

The second option would cost less overall, as only part-time employees would be hired, eliminating the cost of providing benefits. Cited disadvantages include, still, the cost of hiring and training new employees, along with a "lack of scheduled personnel for evening shifts" and "lack of commitment" to shifts.

Both options one and two also must contend with the fact that the SSRECC savings will not be realized immediately.

According to the analysis, the disadvantages of option three far outweigh the advantages of cost savings from the SSRECC. Among the cons listed:

- Capital outlay for security upgrades could be as much as $100,000.
- The public might perceive that "the police department is a part-time operation."
- Loss of the department's Criminal Justice Information Sharing (CJIS) terminal, which links the department to other police departments and federal law enforcement agencies. By law, this computer must be monitored 24/7; Cohasset would instead rely on the SSRECC's CJIS terminal, which is currently the town of Hingham's; the SSRECC is applying for its own through state and federal agencies. For the Cohasset officers, this would mean relying on the SSRECC to process arrests and print warrants, so all paperwork would need to be picked up in Hingham. Police would also be unable to enter stolen items such as cars or jewelry into the terminal; investigations would also be handled through the SSRECC.

Overtime would be required for prisoner watch, since state law requires that specially trained personnel monitor prisoners. If an arrest is made while the station is unmanned, an officer and cruiser would have to be taken out of service while the prisoner is in police custody; or, an officer would have to would have to work overtime to watch the prisoner.

While the police chief is worried about the message that's being sent to the public, the fire chief has cited the benefits of moving over to the SSRECC.

Silvia said during the SSRECC's grand opening last fall that he believes moving to a regionalized dispatch center will streamline the emergency response process and provide better care to the community.

"In Cohasset, you have a single dispatcher answering phones, dispatching police, fire, taking calls, working the window — anyone short of Superman can't accomplish all that," Silvia said at the time.

No matter what happens, it's clear that the Cohasset public safety facility is in for some major changes ahead. As of press time, the police department was on the agenda to present their fiscal 2013 budgets to the Advisory Committee in advance of Town Meeting.

Town-owned property up for auction

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that the town-owned property at 821 Jerusalem Road will be auctioned on Thursday, May 10. The town acquired the property through a tax title foreclosure.

The auction will take place in the Board of Selectmen's office on the second floor of Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Registration is at 5 pm and the auction will begin at 6 pm. The auction will take place in the Board of Selectmen's office on the second floor of Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Anyone interested in purchasing the property is encouraged to attend the open house on Thursday, May 3 from 3. to 7 p.m. Please contact the Town Manager's office at (781) 383-4105 to sign up for the Open House.

Bidder's Information Packages are available at the town manager's office starting Monday, April 23, for $25 in print; electronic copies are free by contacting tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org.

The town manager's office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and until 1 p.m. on Friday. The office is open until 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Upon successful bid, the minimum required deposit will be $5,000*, non-refundable, payable in money order or bank check.

*As of press time, the minimum amount is still being finalized.

FLAGS

Cohasset to honor veterans

For the sixth straight year, Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118 of Cohasset, will host a Field of Honor flag display honoring veterans. In what has become an annual Cohasset tradition volunteers will post hundreds of United States Flags at Veterans Memorial Park on Saturday, May 19, beginning at 9 a.m.

A dedication and wreath laying ceremony scheduled at 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 26, will be a special tribute to those who have defended the nation. World War II veteran, Robert G. Noble, will tell of his wartime experiences while serving in the Infantry and Air Corps including a period when he was held captive in a German prisoner of war camp. As the numbers of surviving World War II veterans decline, Robert G. Nobles' participation at the Dedication Ceremony is especially meaningful.

Within sight of the Cohasset Harbor, the flags will fly on the lawn facing the Veterans Memorial from May 19 through June 4. Residents of Cohasset and the surrounding communities are invited to visit the Field of Honor display to share this view of red, white and blue flags waving in the breeze. This memorial is free to the public.

For $25, individual flags may be sponsored in honor of family or friends who have served in the military. Sponsored flags can then be kept as a memento of Cohasset's Field of Honor display at the event's close, and will be available for pick up at Veterans' Park on June 4, after 1 p.m.

For more information or to sponsor a flag online, visit www.healingfiled.org/cohasset-ma-2012. Details on becoming an event sponsor and applications to obtain flags displayed at the event can be obtained by calling the Legion at 781-383-9657 or by stopping by at the Squadron at 98 Summer St. anytime weekdays after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after noon.

To become a volunteer and take part in presenting this Field of Honor event, contact Thomas Wigmore. Checks should be made payable to the Sons of the American Legion with a note on the memo line of the check indicating Field of Honor. All proceeds with go to veterans programs of the Sons of the American Legion of Cohasset.

Everyone is invited to sponsor and enjoy the sixth Annual Cohasset Field of Honor.

"The Travail of the Flag" mural is Manuel's most famous painting and has been displayed at government facilities ranging from State Houses to the Pentagon. The painter has been invited to present it at many patriotic events and on TV programs over the years. COURTESY PHOTO my destiny in it; I said, 'I'm going to throw a coin in the fountain anyway.'"

MANUEL

Rather than make a wish, Manuel says she whispered a prayer: "God, if you would teach me to paint like the great masters, I will serve you all of my life."

The aspiring painter went on to earn a Master's in art from the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD) and eventually became the Master Artist at Large at Oklahoma's Oral Roberts University. Manuel has spent the past 30 years painting portraits of people from all over the world. The artist has also worked as a film animator and children's book illustrator; she's even dabbled in clothing design.

But Manuel says that she really knew she'd "made it" as an artist when her childhood dream came true.

What is perhaps Manuel's most famous piece of work is the mural "The Travail of the Flag," copies of which have been presented all over the world (she also penned a book with the same title). Manuel said the painting has been in the hands of everyone from government officials in China, Malaysia, Finland and Russia to former President Bill Clinton during a memorial trip to the site of the Oklahoma City bombing.

The painting has also made the rounds at the Pentagon, Capital Building, Senate Rotunda and Lincoln Memorial; often, Manuel has been invited to sing at patriotic events with the painting on display behind her. The painting was displayed at the Mass. State House in 2007 when Mitt Romney was governor; he granted Manuel use of the State House for a "Boston Bless Israel" event and remarked that both her painting and singing "stirred his heart," Manuel recalls.

Perhaps the biggest honor bestowed on Manuel regarding her work of art was having it displayed at the Sacred Art Museum in Eureka Springs, Arkansas. For 28 years, the painting hung alongside a work by Rembrandt.

When Manuel saw this, she says she was back at the fountain in France in her mind. "God had indeed answered the prayer of a 16-year-old," she says. "He had hung my work with the great master."

Berlin

Manuel's story – and dizzying career path – doesn't end there.

The painter was in Berlin, Germany in 1989 when the wall came down between the eastern and western blocks. Manuel found herself in the midst of the excitement, tension and triumph as she was invited to paint on the iconic wall. Using a mixture of egg tempera and a watercolor set she purchased from a local Woolworth's (which in itself was an experience, seeing bewildered Germans "flooding in" from the communist eastern side in tears to be in a western chain store that had been previously forbidden to them, Manuel recalls with tears in her own eyes), Manuel painted a depiction of Jesus on the wall. To this day, she wonders what happened to her piece of history that thousands laid eyes upon.

"I'd love to find out who got that portion of the Berlin Wall," she says.

Manuel has managed to make her career by fusing her passions together, from art to religion and even political activism. In 2005, she became involved in a human rights campaign to aid the people of Nagalim; her work on the "Free Nagaland" project, during which Manuel served as assistant to the ambassador to Nagalim, Grace Collins, Manuel was knighted "Lady Sheldon" (Sheldon is her first name, abbreviated "Shelli"). The campaign was also filmed as a news documentary, which earned Manuel as an on-air reporter a spot in the National Press Club.

Manuel uses her first name as part of her pen name, Sheldon Maxwell, which she has used in writing historical fiction with her husband; the two have co-authored several books.

Manuel says that she and her equally prolific spouse decided to move to Cohasset after working for years in the South Shore area. At one point, she worked in radio broadcasting with her own show on Salem Radio Boston.

Of moving to Cohasset, Manuel says, "It seemed nice to be on the quieter end of things," adding that the location is convenient due to her frequent travels: "I can get to either airport [Boston's Logan or Providence's TF Green] quickly."

But Manuel explains that Cohasset is more to her than a place to rest her head after her constant travels (for a "week in the life," see sidebar). She has been working on a series of portraits to best capture "life in Cohasset."

Manuel invites anyone in town who has events they'd like her to capture – "weddings, horse shows, car shows— I love to do that" – to commission her to paint them. "I guarantee a likeness," she says.

When she isn't capturing local life on canvas, Manuel is also pursuing her musical passions. She is composing a musical titled "Dream Ship" and writing a script for a documentary film about the national anthem called "Star Spangled." Manuel is also working on a major national anthem project commemorating the song's 200-year anniversary in conjunction with the National Parks Department. Manuel is currently developing an iPhone app called "Sing It America"; those who download it can use it as a game or as a contest entry. The app allows users to record themselves singing the national anthem; canon balls bounce along as they sing. The version of the "Star Spangled Banner" that the app plays is none other than Manuel's own arrangement. Those who decide to record their voice with the app can submit their recording as an audition to become part of a 100-voice choir that will perform at a Fourth of July celebration in St. Louis, Mo.

Surprised the artist, musician, writer, etc. is also an app developer?

"I used to build websites," Manuel says by way of explanation. Jane of all trades, indeed.

A week in the life

Jetsetter Dr. Shelli Jones Baker Manuel describes her cross-country traveling during a one-week period:

- In Hollywood working on movie script "Star Spangled" with Movie Guide
- Fly to Midwest; visit Harps, Tea & Me gallery in Branson (Manuel hopes to soon open a branch in Maryland, her home state, where her parents still reside)
- Travel to Texas for political rally
- Fly to D.C. to meet with Steering Committee of National Press Club and National Parks Department for national anthem project; interviewed by Washington Times
- Back in Cohasset: play harp gig at Windsor Tea Room; hold own tea for Harvest Project International (Manuel's humanitarian non-profit)

AROUND TOWN

The Sardinas have a new granddaughter!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

So lucky

Hello Cohasset! I hope this week has been a good one for you and for many, vacation has been fun. I have heard that many families are traveling and cannot wait to hear of those adventures and have also heard of so many families who have stayed close to home, taking day trips etc. We are so lucky to have a "vacation in our backyard" with the ocean, beaches and coastline right here that I know a lot of the time, I take it for granted. With the spectacular weather we had earlier this week, wow, how lucky are we!

Special ladies

I have two very special ladies to recognize this week. First, Mary Ford, the Editor of both the Cohasset Mariner and the Hingham Journal is celebrating her 20th year of being in this role of Editor. For me, it has been a true honor to work with Mary and learn so much each week. I wanted to thank you Mary, for all that you give to your job each day (and night) and for providing the communities with a quality newspaper each week and for staying in touch with so many people, events and hoopla that is happeninng 24/7. It has been a pleasure working with you. Here's to 20 more...

I also want to wish Callie Piepenbrink, our daughter a very happy 18th birthday on Monday, April 23. It doesn't seem possible at all that 18 years have gone by but they have and Callie Coconut, you have made every one of those years a fun, entertaining and always interesting to boot. We love you sweet girl and I am so proud of the lady you have become. Happy 18th Birthday Callie, love, from all.

New arrival

Susan and Michael Sardina proudly introduce their first grandchild, Abigail Elizabeth Cosulich, born on October 16, 2011. Abigail was recently here visiting from San Francisco with her mom and dad, Lauren Sardina Cosulich and Jared Cosulich.

This was Abigail's first East Coast visit, but certainly not her last: she still needs to experience Sandy Beach in summer! Upon their return to California, Lauren returned to work as a private wealth advisor with Barclay's, while Jared is a tech entrepreneur, having created several internet companies, including WeddingMapper, CommunityWalk, and CharityBirthday.com.

If you see Susan and Michael around town smiling more than usual, be sure to congratulate them on their new granddaughter!

Marine Corps Pvt. Dominic J. Royce, son of Carla M. Royce of Cohasset, recently completed 12 weeks of basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C.

Designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally, Dominic and fellow recruits began their training at 5 a. m., by running 3 miles and performing calisthenics. In addition to the physical conditioning program, Dominic spent numerous hours in classroom and field assignments that included learning first aid, uniform regulations, combat water survival, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat and assorted weapons training. They performed close order drill and operated as a small infantry unit during field training. Dominic and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values – honor, courage and commitment, and what the core values mean in guiding personal and professional conduct.

Dominic and fellow recruits ended the training phase with The Crucible, a 54-hour, team evolution culminating in a ceremony in which recruits are presented the Marine Corps Emblem and addressed as "Marines" for the first time in their careers.

We are proud of you!

The Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) is announcing their popular summer drama workshop program, which will hold registration for The Little Mermaid Jr. for kids ages 8-13 (who have completed 3rd grade) on Saturday, May 12th at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater from 9 to 11 am.

Performance dates for this new musical based on Sidney's 2009 Broadway hit are July 13, (two performances,) 14 and 25. Teens and young adults ages 14-20 will perform in Legally Blonde the Musical which takes the stage with four performances over July 20, 21 and 22.

This year's program workshops will include acting technique, working with professional animals on stage and in film (taught by Bill Berloni who trained the original "Bruised Woods" for the Broadway production of Legally Blonde, and who is now in rehearsals training Sandy for the upcoming Broadway revival of Annie. Bill will have two dogs with him at his workshops) and finally, a special workshop taught by Andrew Wells, t he current Broadway Orchestra Conductor for Jersey Boys about the role that instrumentalists play in musical theater and music as it sets the mood. Miracles

Some Modern Day Miracles have been happening at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common. The church kicked off it's "Be the Miracle" campaign on Easter Sunday by surprising each attendee with an envelope containing $10. The recipients were encouraged by the Reverend Gary Ritts to forth and spread the wealth in any way they saw fit. Though the amount was small, some parishioners have been thinking big when it comes to how they are using the gift.

One nine-year-old parishioner is researching children's relief organizations in Egypt. Another, sent a donation to a community vegetable garden project in Inglewood, Calif. Some are working to grow their seed money by starting charitable projects that will attract more volunteers and donations.

For those in attendance on Easter, the church would love to hear how you are using your "Miracle" money. Please send an email to scc@2ndcc.org. If you are looking for ideas, check out the "Be the miracle" section of the church website, www.2ndcc.org. I can't wait to hear more of the stories, what a great idea.

OUR VIEW

Police station 'going dark'?

In Cohasset lately, everything is coming down to dollars and cents.

That is not necessarily a bad thing. The town needs a balanced budget, town finances need to be fully aired and examined, and any inefficiency clarified and cleared up.

But there are still quality-of-life issues that Cohasset citizens should be willing to pay for.

In our view, one of those is manning the police station 24/7.

We think any cost-benefit to having the station "go dark" — perhaps as long as 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and all weekend — is putting public safety at risk. Public safety should be at the top of everyone's priority list.

We believe the Selectmen promised a public process in terms of how the police station is going to be manned once dispatch goes over to the Hingham-based South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center (SSRECC). Questions about just how much savings Cohasset is going to realize and what the trade offs are need to be presented and discussed in a special meeting – or at the very least, a long agenda item – with input from police, fire and local citizens. The March 2012 Cohasset Police Department proposal and cost analysis provided to selectmen last month needs to be reviewed publicly and discussed in detail.

We've been around long enough to remember when the fire department was on the "hot seat" back in the early to mid-90s. Some in Cohasset decided that the fire department was way too expensive for a small town. Discussion and concern resulted in a regional study to develop a regionalized fire district. Today, the study which determined that set up costs of building new fire stations on Route 3A would be hefty – is somewhere collecting dust.

We remember a resident saying at a public meeting that while having a ladder truck is expensive – he still wanted one should his house catch fire.

Other parts of our country have had regionalized public safety services – and school districts, too – from the get-go. They were there from the start. Retrofitting regionalization is far more complicated.

We ask our town officials and readers to stop for a minute at 4 p.m. this week. A month down the road — when Cohasset moves over to SSRECC — the sun would still be shining, the weather might be great – and maybe, just maybe a young child on a bike needing assistance, a motorist being "road-raged," or someone in need of help with a domestic issue – heads to that safe haven, our police station, and finds the door locked. A special phone with a direct line to Hingham is no substitute for a person who can help.

In the road-rage example, police now tell victims to drive right to the station and not to pull over at the scene if they feel threatened. That advice would have to stop "after hours."

Think about it, please.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Day-to-day operations oversight needed

Last Thursday (April 5) I returned to Town Hall for the first time since the selectmen's vote on March 19 to listen to the presentation by former Selectwoman Karen Quigley on her petition to make changes in the management of water, sewer and public services at the upcoming Annual Town Meeting. In light of the Interim Town Manager's decision to disband the Operations Department and lay off Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber this is now a pivotal discussion for the future of Cohasset. The citizens petition calls for a professional position to oversee water and sewer.

The decision to disband the Operations Department represents a major step backwards in improving professionalism, enhancing oversight and ensuring transparency in day-to-day public service operations. Both the MMA Consulting Report of 2004 and the Melanson and Heath of 2010 called for such a position. The MMA report called for the town to establish a Manager of Municipal Infrastructure to "oversee and manage the Department of Public Works" while the Melanson and Heath audit called for "the hiring of a Water and Sewer Superintendent to manage a professional staff capable of developing and implementing the control systems necessary to properly run the departments."

Prior to recent controversies, there appeared to be a consensus that such a position was needed. According to the minutes of the Joint Meeting of the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee of Feb. 17, 2011, while there were differences on the future of the presently elected Water and Sewer Commissions, there appeared to be a strong support for a public works professional.

While I drew of my experience in Southbridge, I looked more on our neighbors in Hull and Scituate which were also listed as models in the Melanson and Heath audit. I reasoned if the concept of a public works professional answerable to the town manager was working for our neighbors why would Cohasset be an exception? The Operations Department was introduced to the Board of Selectmen on Sept. 23, 2011, drawing closely off the lessons of Scituate whose own "Greenbush Guy" Al Bannert became community's first DPW Director.

Selectmen approved the concept and even made changes to the organization chart. It was expected that Town Meeting action would come in the spring. In many communities reorganizations do not need town meeting action except for budget.

With respect to funding professional oversight, I advised in FY 12 funding would be piecemeal. As to FY 13, a majority of funding would be provided by the enterprise funds. For example in Southbridge, the DPW Director was funded 33 percent by Water Enterprise, 33 percent Sewer Enterprise and 33 percent from the General Fund since the position oversees that town's highway and building function.

In any event, Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber had been providing the professional oversight called for by our outside auditors and in line with best practices adopted by most communities in the Commonwealth. Why now the change? Why were they dismissed?

Last Thursday, I sat stunned when I heard that water and sewer were routine while professional oversight was only needed for projects as opposed to day-to-day operations. In my nearly 12 years as either a Town Manager or Town Administrator I can tell you that water, sewer and public works are not routine but need day-to-day professional oversight. Even in communities where DPW directors have ascended to the position of Town Manager – professional public works supervision remains a separate discipline. For example, in Oxford where Joe Zeneski – former Dean of Central Mass DPW directors was promoted to Town Manager – that town still maintains a DPW Superintendent and Town Engineer.

Recently members of the Capital Budget Committee have suggested that we try to emulate Brookline for its fiscal stability. Fair argument but it also important to note that Brookline has a DPW director and its operations department was just accredited by the American Public Works Association (AWPA) in a process akin that presently underway at our Police Department. Similarly, the Capital Budget and School Committees recently visited Burlington to see how they can learn from that community's technology policies. With respect to the supervision of water and sewer, Burlington has both a Public Works Superintendent and Town Engineer. Why should Cohasset be any different?

In short, most every community in the Commonwealth has accepted that professional oversight is needed and these functions are far from routine. Just talk to Dave Hanlon – long serving and retired DPW director of Reading and Co-Chair of the APWA New England Chapter Leadership and Management subcommittee – supervision of water, sewer and public works is far from routine and is essential to protect the taxpayer.

The professional expertise provided by Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber needs to be brought back. We need the safeguards and the checks and balances provided by the Operations Department also to be restored. They are essential to assuring that taxpayer monies are properly spent. To that end, I ask the voters to support the citizens petition at Town Meeting. If Cohasset does not, the problems and issues of the past will likely only repeat themselves.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Movie Night

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's April movie will be "King Corn: You Are What You Eat." The movie will be shown at 7 p.m., on Friday, April 20, in the meeting room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

In this 90-minute documentary, directed by Aaron Wood, friends Ian Cheney and Curt Ellis move back to America's Corn Belt to plant an acre of the nation's most-grown and most-subsidized grain and follow their crop into the U.S. food supply. What they learn about genetically modified seeds, herbicides and the realities of modern farming calls into question government subsidies, the fast-food lifestyle and the quality of what people eat. Corn products are an ingredient in foods from soda, to spaghetti sauce to grass-fed beef.

With the continuing rise in obesity and Type 2 diabetes, could high fructose be the "smoking gun?" Come watch Ian and Curt make high fructose corn syrup in their kitchen.

Yard sale

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its annual yard sale from 8 a.m. to noon Friday, May 4 and Saturday, May 5, at the home of Donna McGee, 23 Hill St..

The proceeds from this yard sale go to fund the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship, awarded to a civic-minded, Cohasset, graduating senior in good academic standing. The committee depends on donations to make this scholarship fundraiser a success each year. So, while you're doing your spring-cleaning please check your tool sheds, closets, jewelry boxes, bookshelves, kitchen cabinets as well as your children's toy boxes and sports lockers for re-usable items in good condition. Like-new designer clothes are appreciated. Electronic items, with some exceptions, are generally not good for resale.Small household furniture and children's furnishings — car seats, strollers, baby carriers, etc. — are gladly accepted.

Call Donna 383-9114 to request a pickup, or leave items on the porch at 23 Hill St.

HEALTH NOTES

Being inspired to volunteer in town

STEVE BOBO

People need to be inspired to donate the time - they need to understand "why does the Town need me for this project?"

For 200 years, Cohasset as a town has been managed by a few people. Originally management was done through Hingham and owners who divvied up 11 strips of land roughly a mile wide, the evidence may be seen by walking in White's Farm and looking at the rock walls therein. Later, overseers farmed the land until about 1784 when Cohasset became a town. Over the span of years until modern times, Cohasset has been governed by selectmen and other boards with accompanying votes defined by terms like majority, supermajority and others. The most recent and longer term of quiet governance was at the hands of Bill Griffin who left us a year or two ago.

It seems that in times of uncertainty, actual size of the various committees giving input to Selectmen and others responsible for governance tends to grow. Other factors seem to change the numbers of people needed to run a Town like Cohasset.

Of course, Cohasset is not the only town to have problems with their respective government. In fact, the Feds have studied small town governance in other venues like Chittenden County, Vt., with an emphasis on the Town of Richmond with respect to an increase of complexity of issues facing towns as a result of mandates from higher governments, increasing populations, etc. The particular problems were misunderstandings within the committee and the fact that word of mouth appeared to lead non-volunteers away from civic service due to the exaggerated time requirements outlined in combination with the sporadic frustrations of the volunteers.

Another problem; Inspiration: People need to be inspired to donate the time - they need to understand "why does the Town need me for this project?" Be sure inspiration doesn't come from feelings of prestige without the application of a lot of hard work and study. If you're not going to work at the job, you'll soon find you're getting a bad reputation by people in town you may not even know. It's called small town politics.

The United States Department of Labor released its report: Volunteering in the United States based upon approximately 60,000 households, age 16 and over. The particular Volunteer Supplement released the following figures:

- Approximately 59 million people volunteered from September 2011 to September 2012
- The volunteer rate was higher in women than in men.
- Employed persons were more likely to volunteer than persons who were unemployed or not in the labor force.
- Among persons 25 years of age and over, the volunteer rate of college graduates was four times that of high school dropouts.
- The main organization for which the majority of volunteers worked was either religious or educational/youth-service related.
- Volunteers spent a median of 52 hours volunteering during the year.
- 35 to 54 year olds were the most likely to volunteer.
- Parents with children under age 18 were more likely to volunteer than persons with no children of that age.
- Nearly 30 percent of all employed persons had volunteered during the previous year. Without dedicated volunteers, small town governments cannot succeed. They depend on volunteers to function and, subsequently, volunteers be-come an added value to the communities in which they serve.

It's important to establish the right size committee/board for each task. There were a number of discrepancies in the data between comparable towns and the numbers of volunteers/non-volunteers surveyed about committee size. On the one hand, some expressed concern for too many committees or too many committee members on some groups and not enough on others. Juxtaposed with that opinion, another source voiced an issue with the lack of committees designed to handle one area and/or too few individuals manning the post. The constructive solution and proposition by the Team would be that immediately following the establishment of the core mission statements for each group an initial determination of the number of committees handling a certain question.

People do volunteer but need to be inspired to contribute their time above and beyond any inherent duty of civic responsibility. The Town has a great deal to offer its inhabitants above and beyond a beautiful scenic backdrop. It is loaded with social capital that is untapped. Most of us have learned to maintain healthy lives and seem to have found the way to be respected, keep busy and feel good about the things we do.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

RECYCLING

Recycle your good latex paint

CLAIRE SULLIVAN

Last year they diverted 1,000 gallons of good paint from the incinerator at 12 collections. This has saved our member towns thousands in disposal costs.

Do you have leftover latex paint from an indoor project that you want to get rid of? Not sure what to do with it?

Latex paint (as opposed to oil based, or "alkyd" paint, and stain) is messy but not hazardous. Until now, residents have been advised to absorb the liquid with cat litter to keep it from dripping out of the trash truck, then disposing with household trash. Paint should never be poured down any drain, unless you want an excuse to call your plumber.)

This year, usable latex paint has a chance for a second "life." Thanks to a grant from the Mass. Department of Environmental Protection in 2011, the South Shore Recycling Cooperative is partnering with The Paint Exchange LLC of Scituate on a pilot paint-recycling program.

Last year they diverted 1,000 gallons of good paint from the incinerator at 12 collections. This has saved our member towns thousands in disposal costs. Collection events have been scheduled this spring at which usable latex interior paint will be collected for recycling.

What is considered "Usable" paint? :

Interior latex paint

Original container and label

1 gallon size or greater (no quarts please)

Limit of 15 gallons per household

Before bringing it in, dust off and pop the lid. "If you would use it, we can use it". Check that the following have not occurred:

- Mold or mildew growth
- A foul odor (putrification)
- Solidification or skinning - if the paint is solid or overly thick it cannot be recycled
- Curdling (semi solid lumps of paint)

If any of these things have occurred, stir in some kitty litter, leave the lid off, put it in a bag and dispose with your trash.

If your paint passes muster, The Paint Exchange (TPE) will accept it from 9 am-1 pm at the following locations:

- April 28 – Hanover Transfer Station, 118 Rockland St. (Route 139),
- May 12 – Kingston Highway Garage, 32 Evergreen St.
- May 19 – Hingham, Transfer Station, Sam Ryder Rd. (off Hobart St.)
- June 16 – Scituate Transfer Station, 280 Driftway

TPE also accepts usable paint at its Scituate storefront for a charge of $2/can. Visit their website www.RecycleReuseRepaint.com, or call 781-545-1272 for more information.

TPE strains, batches, processes and repackages high quality, beautifully colored "reColor" paints. The product is available for sale at well below the cost of "virgin" paint at the Welch Company in Scituate, and at Boston Building Resources. ReColor paint is on the walls at Abington High School and the Nathaniel Morton School in Plymouth (and in the SSRC Director's living room).

Hopefully, residents of the member towns of Abington, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Kingston, Middleboro, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth and Whitman make the choice to recycle their good quality interior latex paint, and keep the cycle going by using reColor paint.

Claire Sullivan is Executive Director, South Shore Recycling Cooperative that includes Cohasset.

FOR THE RECORD

A good headline is more than a title

GREGORY MATHIS

Some headline writers favor clever puns and clichés, others draw on their knowledge of pop culture for witty titles, while some are content to stick with "just the facts."

A headline can make or break a story, whether it's in the newspaper or above the story you're reading on Wicked Local. And believe it or not, there's a difference between the two.

Let's start with the print side.

A good newspaper headline draws the reader into the story. That can be easier said than done. The headline writer, generally the editor, has many factors to consider, including the allocated space for the headline to fit, the size and font the headline needs to be depending on where it's placed on the page and how the headline works with the overall design of the newspaper page.

That's a lot to consider when an editor may have up to six words to work with for a headline. Throw a long word into the equation and she or he has even less wiggle room. Taking a 500-plus-word story and trying to summarize it in a finite amount of space so you will want to read it takes skill and talent.

Not all great writers are good headline writers. We have some terrific reporters who struggle to put a decent headline at the top of their story. That doesn't make them bad writers, just not good headline writers.

Like writing styles, there are headline-writing styles. Some headline writers favor clever puns and clichés, others draw on their knowledge of pop culture for witty titles, while some are content to stick with "just the facts."

A good headline writer, just like a good writer, can draw from various styles and write headlines appropriate to the subject matter of the story. Serious stories — reporting on crime, death, government, for example — require more sensitivity from the headline writer. Features and fun stories may lend themselves to a pun or cliché, or a witty reference to pop culture.

Writing online headlines is much different. Instead of drawing a reader into the story on a newspaper page, the No. 1 priority of a website headline is to make sure readers find our stories online. While many folks have our Wicked Local website bookmarked and return on a regular basis, much of our website traffic still comes from online search engines such as Google, Yahoo and Bing.

To make sure our stories are appearing high up on that first page of search results, our headlines need to have specific keywords folks might be typing into the search box to find a particular story, column or photo.

Search Engine Optimization is the popular catchphrase, and it's critical because of all the content available online from multiple local and regional news sources, as well as other websites.

Therefore, you'll notice our website headline is often different from the headline on the story in the newspaper. The rule of thumb is to always stay away from clever and cute, ditch the clichés and stick with the facts. As a matter of fact, by focusing on specific keywords relating to the story, our website headlines are generally pretty bland. But the story is no good if you can't find it, right?

In either case, headlines are such an important piece of the puzzle, whether your preference is holding a newspaper or scanning the Internet.

TOWN MEETING ARTICLE

Window worries

First Parish project continues to court controversy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The separation of church and state was once again the center of debate concerning the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee's warrant article, which proposes giving $65,000 to First Parish Meetinghouse for their window restoration project.

CPC chairman Russell Bonetti came before selectmen Tuesday to present his committee's articles for Annual Town Meeting on May 12. The most noteworthy – and controversial – is the matter of replacing church windows with CPC money.

Last week, the Advisory Committee voted 3-2 to reject the article; chair Peter Pescatore and member Nan Roth were the two who voted to support it, saying they were torn because First Parish is a historic structure.

Resident and attorney Howie Altholtz was on the agenda right after Bonetti to ask the selectmen to consider voting against this article.

"I'm happy to hear work is being done [on First Parish] at a high quality," said Altholtz. "The only problem is that the wrong person is writing the check for the project."

The matter first came up during a January CPC meeting. First Parish approached the committee for the funds; the committee voted 7-1 to give the church the money. Selectman Leland Jenkins, who also serves on the CPC, was the lone member who spoke in opposition, saying that giving the funds would open the floodgates for other churches to ask the CPC for money.

The issue has been debated at several CPC meetings. Altholtz, himself a former member of First Parish, raised concerns on what he has stated is a clear violation of the separation of church and state.

But the CPC holds that their decision was made because First Parish is a historic structure that sits on Cohasset's common and is part of the landscape of the town.

Tuesday's selectmen meeting once again set the stage for a debate, although chairman Ted Carr said that is was not supposed to turn into one. But after Bonetti presented that article and Altholtz came forward to rebut it, Carr invited Bonetti back to the front of the room to offer his response.

Bonetti argued to selectmen that the church is part of the National Historic Registry. He explained that the CPC, which was established 11 years ago, has funded several similar projects around the Commonwealth. The CPC chair also noted that the CPC has funded plenty of private projects before.

"You can use CPC funds for a surprising amount of private projects," said Bonnetti. "We've taken the issue very seriously."

Altholtz countered that the CPC was wrong to fund churches and thereby violated the Constitution. He cited a letter sent to the CPC from the national chapter of Americans United for the Separation of Church and State in Washington, D.C. calling the CPC grant to a church unconstitutional.

After receiving this letter, the CPC brought the matter to Town Counsel, who opined that the CPC is not in violation of the statute. Altholtz told the selectmen that he felt Town Counsel's was a "sloppy opinion" given in less than 24 hours.

Bonetti told the selectmen, however, that he felt the letter from Americans United "did not address historical preservation."

First Parish is seeking to fix the windows "to maintain the integrity of the building," said Bonetti.

Altholtz disagreed with Town Counsel's opinion and said he agreed with Jenkins that this sets a bad precedent. He added that the statute separating church and state exists for a reason; one of the reasons is to protect churches from government interference.

Advisory chair Peter Pescatore told selectmen that the members of his board who voted against the article were not so concerned about the fact that First Parish is a religious institution, but rather that they "didn't want town money going to private property."

That wasn't the only issue Altholtz raised; he said the article has three strikes against it, one of which is the church/state issue. The other two: According to the Mass. Municipal Association, since the building is private, CPC monies may only be used to restore private buildings that have a public benefit (restoring church windows does not benefit the community at large, he argued); also, he stressed exercising "common sense in a time of diminishing public resources."

"We should be using the money for town property or projects with very wide public benefit," he said.

But Bonetti contended that towns funding churches "is very common in New England villages."

"Up until 1820, the town used to vote to pay the minister," Bonetti told the selectmen. He cited several examples of similar projects around the state, including a large grant Nantucket gave to replace windows in St. Paul's.

However, Altholtz raised the question: "What did religious institutions do before the CPC?" He further noted that the Unitarian Universalist Association has grant money and loans available to fund such projects. He argued that the church should maintain their separation from the government and raise the money for the window restoration project as a congregation.

"I would be the first to write them a donation check," Altholtz said.

According to First Parish's website, the congregation ceased being the "town church" following the separation of church and state enacted in Mass. in 1820 and stopped receiving tax support.

"This grant would break an 188-year-old contract," said Altholtz, "the first and only church in Cohasset to do that."

While the selectmen did not vote on the article, selectman Fred Koed commented that he believed all of the articles for Town Meeting would be reviewed by the Attorney General's office, and that the AG would raise any flags if they felt the CPC article was unconstitutional.

Altholtz followed up with a call to the AG's office Wednesday and was told that the AG only reviews articles involving bylaw changes.

"Town Meeting has the final say," said Bonetti.

CPA funds

The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.

CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

The Community Preservation Committee reviews projects and makes recommendations to Town Meeting where voters have the final say.

Question of the Week

For selectman candidates: Because Avalon is a rental complex that has a percentage of affordable housing, all the Avalon units "count" towards Cohasset's affordable housing inventory and therefore the town may have some breathing room before another large 40B project comes down the pike. But with that being said, economic diversity is in danger of disappearing in Cohasset. People, who grew up here, and many town employees cannot afford to live here and some seniors struggle to stay in town. What proactive steps can selectmen take to encourage more affordable housing in Cohasset?

SELECTMAN

Martha Gjesteby

There is not much selectmen can do about this, other than to support legislation recently drafted by the Massachusetts Area Planning Council (MAPC) that has a bill before the legislature that would amend the state's affordable housing statute to reflect recommendations issued by the 40B Reform Task Force.

If passed, it would amend the states zoning act to authorize the use of inclusionary zoning – meaning any affordable unit in nonconformance with local zoning would be maintained as affordable pursuant to the comprehensive permit. It's always been said that if all the non-conforming housing in Cohasset were counted, the Town would much more than 10% of its population living in affordable housing.

Even with low cost housing, the issue of economic diversity continues to become a greater challenge as the premium to live in Cohasset (taxes, water, sewer) becomes so high and the cost of land continues to increase.

Avalon apartments have an affordable component, but we have no sidewalks for lower income residents to access to get to shopping; no public transportation to the train. Lower income residents without autos have no way of leaving their apartments unless they and their children walk across a four-lane highway.

Because of Avalon, the town is now in compliance until the next census so there is breathing room. However, Avalon, Cook and Cedermere have/will add(ed) housing units to our stock so the compliance percentage is a moving target. Perhaps efforts to get 40B revised or repealed will be successful in the coming years. But without the threat of compliance, without a leader such as the MAPC, there will be no discussion of affordable/moderate housing in Cohasset.

SELECTMAN

Ted Carr

I strongly support a diverse housing mix to allow affordable living options for citizens of our Town. Although predominantly single family homes, almost one-third of housing offers alternative options:

Single Family	2,277
Condos	211
Multi-Family Residences	293
Mixed-Use Properties	214
Sunrise Assisted Living	62
Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home	80
Total Living Units	3,137

Of these units, Cohasset currently exceeds state expectations for affordability with nearly 11 percent meeting eligibility requirements.

I have significant and relevant experience to be helpful to make sure Cohasset maintains and nurtures a diverse housing stock to allow for affordable options. As the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, Governor Patrick's Chief of Staff for Housing and Economic Development, and Director of Operations for Housing and Urban Development (HUD) in the Federal Government, I have extensive experience in addressing housing issues. However, the leading way to allow for affordable housing is to keep taxes down.

I have championed strategic policies to achieve the objective of low taxes, including managing town finances, pursuing infrastructure grants and finding relevant ways to grow our local economy. Over the next few years, the Cohasset tax rate should decline due to sound financial management, debt roll off and our active participation in maintaining a bond rating of A++ to allow access to low cost funds when needed.

The population of Cohasset grows older; 28 percent of active voters are seasoned citizens over the age of 70. They have spent their lives here, contributing to the local economy, raising children and making a strong personal commitment to our beautiful town. If they choose to sell their houses, they should and will have several options to stay in Cohasset. If they choose to stay in their family homes, polices I have helped put into place will help them to afford to do so.

Next week's question

For selectman candidates: When Cohasset switched to using a large law firm rather than a local lawyer for Town Counsel, it was supposed to save money. A glance at the annual town report shows a lot of money is going for "legal." Is Cohasset spending too much on lawyers? What can selectmen do to bring those costs under control?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon p.m., Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

Candidates, opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, may submit a formal announcement with a photograph. There is no word limit on the announcement but longer submissions may need to be held due to space constraints.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

TOWN MEETING

Health Board bylaw changes

Pending Town Meeting approval, soon it will be illegal to purchase cigarettes at pharmacies in Cohasset.

The Board of Health is proposing articles that will change the town bylaws to restrict where tobacco can be sold; this would affect stores like Stop & Shop, Walgreens and CVS in town.

Health Inspector Tara Tradd told the selectmen that these establishments have already been impacted by these changes in towns across the state and will have to abide by the changes, or else pay steep penalties.

"We're promoting health and well-being," she said of the Board of Health. "We all know cigarettes cause cancer."

The selectmen voted to support the Board of Health's warrant articles for the May 12 Town Meeting.

Senior Center back on forefront

Four articles for the proposed Senior Center building project that were originally drafted for the Special Town Meeting in December were rescheduled for Spring Town Meeting (Saturday, May 12).

Glenn Pratt came before the selectmen Tuesday to present these articles, which involve land swaps between the Social Service League, the project's proponent, and the Swim Trust (the land will be borrowed by the SSL for a few years and then returned to the town). Another article asks to grant easements and a sewer connection on the donated parcel of land.

Last week, the Advisory Committee voted not to recommend these articles, with members stating that they did not want to vote in articles on the project "piecemeal" before the project is officially underway.

The Mariner reported last week that the Social Service League recently presented plans to erect the center in two phases, which will cost less than the originally proposed project ($4 million versus $6 million). They have hired an architect and hope to open the center, which is designed to look like a large Cohasset home, next winter.

The selectmen decided to wait until their joint meeting with the Advisory Committee next Tuesday, April 24, before voting on the articles.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Gjesteby runs own campaign

Martha Gjesteby said she would be her own campaign manager. People wishing to help on the campaign with signs, coffees or standouts should call Martha at 781-383-1614 or email her at ARMAGJ@comcast.net.

People interested in supporting Gjesteby's campaign should write a check to Elect Martha Gjesteby Selectman and send it to Joan Brown, 546 Beechwood St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Carr planning 10 events

I am honored to have the opportunity to run for Selectman. The primary strategy of my campaign is to raise awareness about our town government. I hope that those in Cohasset who already are involved in the community stay involved, and encourage those who are not to get involved. As I have done in the past and continue to do, I will go door to door to talk to voters about the issues.

My campaign will hold a series of at least 10 public events in the homes of supporters between now and Election Day on May 19th. These events will be held across town, and will provide you and I with an opportunity to talk about the issues that affect all of us. I hope to see you there.

Orders can also be placed at Aquarion's open house 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 5, at 900 Main St., Hingham.

CITIZENS' PETITION

Joint management?

Town Meeting to vote on future of water, sewer

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

How to manage Cohasset's water has been a major point of discussion lately in selectmen's meetings, newspaper editorials, and a public forum held by the Water Commission. As the commission has published requests for proposals for a new water contract (the current contract with American Water ends this June), it's clear that Cohasseters from all walks of life are concerned about the future of the water department and the plant's management moving forward.

Former selectman Karen Quigley has entered the realm of discussion by preparing a citizens' petition to be voted on at the May 12 Town Meeting. The petition proposes joint management of the water and sewer departments under a full-time supervisor and recommends changing the structure of both the water and sewer commissions. Under the joint management system, both water and sewer would be overseen by the supervisor, who would be employed by the Town; the water and sewer would be consolidated into one commission of five appointed, not elected, members who would have an advisory role over their respective departments rather than controlling rates.

The petition also seeks to add three additional town employees: an assistant public works supervisor, which would be filled and funded by the present administrative assistant position in the sewer commission; and two clerical positions that currently exist in the water department.

The petition also asks for the water and sewer enterprise funds to be managed by the town's finance director and town manager.

Quigley presented the petition to the Advisory Committee last Thursday, April 12. Her presentation was followed by a robust discussion from both members of the board and the audience.

The Advisory Committee lobbed several questions Quigley's way. Chairman Peter Pescatore wanted to know what the bottom line benefit for Cohasset residents would be should the petition pass at Town Meeting. Quigley said the major benefit would be "having a qualified, experienced town employee there nine to five to oversee" the management of water and sewer. Quigley said that the town should not rely solely upon part-time volunteers (the commissioners) to oversee these departments but rather have a full-time expert.

When the Advisory members asked Quigley how the town would pay for this new full-time position, she said that the funds would come from monies that currently pay for engineering consultants.

There was also discussion on whether such a position could also provide in-house engineering support for the Department of Public Works and building/facilities department.

Neither the sewer nor water commissions have yet weighed in on the matter; representatives from both were present at the Advisory meeting last week. Both commissions will have a chance to discuss the petition during the April 23 Advisory meeting.

Quigley said that she had reached out to both groups but had not yet gotten responses. "My gut feeling is that they are not in support of it," she said last Thursday.

One reason the commissioners might balk at Quigley's petition? If passed, it would drastically change the scope and structure of the commissions.

"The crux of the matter," said Pescatore, "is putting two functions under common management, changing the commission structure from elected to appointed, adding a layer of salary to the town... It's changing everything."

Quigley defended the need for such a change because of "deficiencies in having part-time volunteers managing our utilities as opposed to full-time supervisors." She explained that she drafted this petition to comply with recommendations from a 2004 report by the MMA Consulting Group and the 2010 town audit by Melanson and Heath, which suggested the town combine both water and sewer operations and the commissions as well as hire a full-time public works supervisor, who would report to the Town Manager as department head.

The citizens' petition, said Quigley, is "reflecting what was recommended to the town by hired, paid-for professionals."

When one Advisory member asked Quigley if she was advocating for the concession contract the water commissioners are trying to ink, she said that her petition has nothing to do with what the commission is proposing; whether Cohasset Water ends up with a concession contract, management contractor or in-house operations "makes no difference at all" to the petition, said Quigley.

A full-time supervisor would oversee the contractor at the water plant, she said, to "make sure the contractor is doing what needs to be done... I as a citizen am not in favor of giving control of the water company over to a private vendor. Local control would remain with the water commission or, under my petition, with the supervisor."

While the Advisory committee did not take a vote to recommend or reject Quigley's petition, Pescatore did not seem to agree with Quigley's reasoning behind the petition.

Calling the water and sewer plant management "pretty routine business," Pescatore said that he did not see the need to "add a layer of salary to the town." The change in management would also "put the financial burden back on the town finance person," Mary Gallagher. Under the petition, the finance director and Town Manager would co-manage the water and sewer enterprise funds.

Pescatore said that "maybe it's the right thing to do at some point," but that he did not advise putting the burden on Gallagher in the near future, as she is sorting through the town's current financial issues.

Regarding whether the water and sewer commissioners should be elected or appointed, the Advisory chair said that he does not "have any quarrel with appointing people with the criteria to be on the commission... Why does it matter if they're appointed or elected? In this proposal, they're not even responsible for rates."

Pescatore further challenged Quigley that the recommendations from the 2010 audit had to do with the crisis the water department was in back in 2009; that crisis, said Pesacatore, "is behind us."

But the problems "did not happen in a vacuum," countered Quigley, adding that they happened because the commissions lacked proper checks and balances. The town should not "continue to rely on volunteer individuals who are hard-working, dedicated and want to do the right thing for the town" but who "don't have the expertise, aren't there nine to five, and rely on consulting engineers to make decisions that affect taxpayers and ratepayers." Quigley added that she feels that the consultants do not have Cohasset's best interests at heart, but are rather concerned with "making as much money as they can for their firm."

The bottom line of Quigley's petition? "We need qualified, experienced professionals running our utilities."

The audience at the Advisory Committee meeting included selectman Leland Jenkins and former Town Manager Michael Coughlin. Coughlin, who was removed without cause from his duties last month, continues to live in town and has been vocal on his opposition to the concession contract that the water commission hopes to sign next month. Coughlin did not speak up during the meeting, but has expressed his thoughts in a letter to the editor (see editorial page). The former town manager advocated for a similar full-time supervisor position and created the Operations Department last fall, promoting retired, part-time engineering consultant Mark Brennan to the full-time position of department head. Under the new contract Coughlin signed with Brennan, the engineer would have jointly managed these four departments. The selectmen voted to approve the department's creation in the fall, but also said that new departments and contracts must be voted on by Town Meeting.

Ultimately, the Operations Department did not survive the town wide spending freeze enacted by interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Both Brennan and fellow part-time consulting engineer Tom Gruber were laid off, although Brennan recently signed a new contract to do some consulting work on a tide gate project.

Jenkins weighed in on the matter and seemed to agree with Quigley on some aspects of joint management. "I support a program similar to this," said Jenkins. "There's no question the town needs engineering services in-house." However, the selectman said that he believes the supervisor should oversee not only water and sewer, but also DPW and buildings "to fully utilize the person's time."

Quigley said that having one full-time manager of all four departments "would be my preference." She did not add that into her petition because she felt such an initiative was "too far-reaching." However, "If Town Meeting wants to do that, I would be happy if that were the final outcome."

As Cohasset residents consider the citizens' petition, Quigley wants them to know that the concept of a public works supervisor is nothing new. She told the Advisory board that looking through the Mass. Municipal Directory, "Ninety-six towns in Massachusetts have some kind of public works supervisor... It isn't new; it isn't unique; it's tried and true. It works in other towns and is widespread for a reason."

Water Commission Chairman Peter DeCaprio said in a phone call that while he has not had a chance to discuss the petition with his fellow commissioners (the petition came out after their last meeting), he fully supports combining the water and sewer commissions and operations. However, "I don't think the floor of Town Meeting is the appropriate place for discussion... the subject ought to be studied at great length and explored by the Governance Committee."

The petition was discussed during Wednesday night's sewer commission meeting; the commission voted unanimously "not to support the article as it is presented," said chairman Wayne Sawchuk. Like the water commission chair, Sawchuk said that the sewer commissioners could be in favor of combining the water and sewer commissions into one board; however, he too feels the discussion does not belong at Town Meeting.

The matter will be discussed again, with input from the water and sewer commissions, at the Monday, April 23 Advisory meeting. In the meantime, both DeCaprio and sewer commissioner John Beck are writing reports on their respective commissions that will be issued to both the Advisory Committee and selectmen.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

UPDATE: EMPLOYEE CONTRACTS

TM reaches an accord

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A matter that recently caused a rift between the Planning Board and Board of Selectmen could be on the mend.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced at this week's selectmen's meeting that he has signed a letter of agreement with Jo-Ann Pilczak, consistent with the terms of her fiscal year 2012 contract.

As approved by last year's Annual Town Meeting, Pilczak, who was hired on Jan. 5, 2004, will receive approximately $56,000 in the next fiscal year. Milanoski said that there is an opportunity for Pilczak to receive an additional $5,200 stipend if she takes on the role of coordinator for the inspections office in addition to managing the planning and buildings offices.

The Planning Board may not be pleased with the decision, as it means no raise and promotion for their assistant; they've been advocating for higher compensation for Pilczak for the past few years. Milanoski maintains that the promises former town manager Michael Coughlin made her, along with other employees who received new contracts, simply weren't fair.

"Coughlin agreed to pay her to make her a department head without town meeting approval, to compensate her $65,000 without town meeting approval, and provide additional vacation and other benefits not consistent with her peers," Milanoski explained.

By the way of background, selectmen voted to rescind 10 employee contracts that had been issued by Coughlin and asked Milanoski to reach an agreement with those affected by that decision. The Planning Board issued a vote of no confidence against the selectmen during their March 28 meeting. The Planning Board members said that they felt the selectmen were unjustly punishing Pilczak, who entered into a new contract with the town in good faith.

There was extensive debate at the March 28 Planning Board meeting about Pilczak's $10,000 raise – bumping her up to a $65,000 annual salary and taking her out of the clerical union.

Four of the five members of the Planning Board also attended the April 3 selectmen's meeting and voiced their disapproval of the selectmen's decision to void Pilczak's contract.

As for the other contracts? The town manager is still working to unravel the issues; the selectmen have been meeting in executive sessions before every meeting for the past several weeks to discuss negotiations with union and non-union personnel due to unfair labor practice charges that were brought forward in light of the contractual changes.

Milanoski recently signed contracts with Town Assessor Mary Quill and Facilities Director Mark Kelly.

"Two [contracts] needed to be done right away because once the contracts were rescinded, the two people didn't have any documentation," Milanoski said of Quill and Kelly. "Those were the two critical contracts that had to be done this year."

For those with existing contracts, Milanoski said he plans to reach agreements through a new personnel plan that is still in the works but will be presented at Town Meeting.

"A lot of things are going to be resolved through new personnel plan," Milanoski said.

The town manager laid off "Greenbush Guys" Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, both retired engineers who were working for the town as consultants, whose contracts had also been voided. Both were being paid the equivalent of full-time salaries, officials said. Coughlin had promoted Brennan to department head status by making him Operations Director. The Operations Department would have been voted on at the upcoming Town Meeting, but Milanoski said that there is no money in next year's fiscal year budget to accommodate such a department.

Milanoski announced last week that he has signed a new contract with Brennan, brining him on as a consultant to close out the James Meadow tide gate project.

TOWN MEETING PREVIEW

Fiscal '13 capital expenditures

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

School buses and public safety building repairs and equipment are capital expenditures to be voted on during Annual Town Meeting on Saturday, May 12.

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer came before the Advisory Committee last Thursday and the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday to present the list of capital projects that his committee has voted to recommend. Capital Budget reviewed requests from the school department, police and fire departments, the Department of Public Works (DPW) as well as the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager's office.

The funding for these projects will be paid out of the fiscal 2013 budget, pending Town Meeting approval. Gaumer reported that the cost of these requests totaled over $1 million, exceeding the available budget.

After prioritizing the requests, Capital Budget is asking Town Meeting to approve a total of $419,000 of new expenditure; this number includes $162,000 in debt service for previously approved articles, Gaumer reported.

If Town Meeting approves these funds, the ending fund balance for fiscal 2013 will be $289,000, with $184,000 of that set aside for fiscal 2014 obligations.

Starting with the fire department, Gaumer said that they have requested replacing their second thermal imaging camera; they replaced their first one earlier this year after approval from the December Special Town Meeting. This cost was originally estimated at $15,000, but Chief Robert Silvia was able to obtain a camera for $10,000, which is the budgeted amount Town Meeting will vote on.

While the selectmen questioned the need to replace both cameras in one year, Gaumer explained that the chief had asked to replace the cameras years ago as a preventive measure; both cameras were purchased at the same time through a grant and reached the end of their lives at the same time.

Gaumer explained at the Advisory meeting that the camera is one of the most frequently used arsenals by the fire department and is a necessary expenditure. Another request: replacing the department's hydraulic extraction equipment, AKA "Jaws of Life." The department currently uses one that is 23 years old; replacing it will cost $25,000.

Chief Silvia has noted that some of the newer vehicles the public safety team regularly encounters in accidents are resistant to the older cutting blades of the Jaws of Life; some newer car designs use materials that the Jaws of Life simply can't cut through. Newer blades are diamond-tipped and capable of cutting through the more modern material.

Gaumer said that his committee voted unanimously to approve these requests.

The police have requested funds to replace a frontline cruiser for $33,000; the chief is also asking for an unmarked vehicle for the same price. The replacement "falls within the replacement policy structure" for the department, Gaumer said.

The car Police Chief Mark DeLuca currently drives is an Expedition that has been in the fleet for a number of years, and reportedly has over 200,000 miles on it; Gaumer said that it "is inefficient to operate as a take-home vehicle."

Capital Budget approved the expense for the vehicle without defining what type of car will be purchased; "it's best left to the Town Manager and the chief," said Gaumer.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski told the Advisory Committee that he is looking into hybrid vehicles.

K-9 car

A discussion was raised during last week's Advisory meeting about the K9 officer's vehicle, which was donated by the city of Quincy and equipped with a cage for the K9. This car is a take-home vehicle and obviously requires maintenance and upkeep by the department. The Advisory board noted that the K9 unit, which has been largely paid for by the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, will in fact cost the town money, at least where the vehicle is concerned.

Speaking of vehicles, both the schools and DPW are requesting vehicles this year as well.

The schools asked for two 77-passenger buses at a cost of $190,000; Capital Budget voted to support the purchase of one bus.

DPW has asked to replace its utility truck for $66,000. This is the department's most frequently used vehicle and requires constant repair; Gaumer quipped that DPW director Carl Sestito has had to spend more time repairing the vehicle than actually using it.

Roof

A few other requests require further review.

The roof of the Middle-High school requires up to $1 million in roof repairs in order to install a proposed solar array. Gaumer said that the committee felt this needed to be investigated further before giving it their approval; since the solar panels are expected to save the schools around $30,000 a year in energy savings, Gaumer said Capital Budget is not yet convinced the $1 million repairs would be worth it. The largest part of the requested repairs involves protective resurfacing, which Gaumer explained would not otherwise be needed since the roof is currently only halfway through its life.

The school department also asked for $200,000 to begin the latest wave of its technology implementation; however, Capital Budget did not vote on the matter at the Superintendent's request. Two members of the committee, Gaumer and vice chair Jack Keniley, recently accompanied Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and School Committee vice chair Jeanne Astino to Burlington Public Schools to see their new paperless, tablet technology platform, which Cataldo hopes to implement in Cohasset schools soon.

Gaumer said that so far, Capital Budget is generally supportive of this initiative, but "a number of questions remain to be answered; it's a work in progress."

The town side of operations is also asking for money for a technology implementation. From the Board of Selectmen/Town Management budget, there was a request for an additional $52,000 to complete an MIS software implementation.

While Capital Budget did approve the expenditure, they noted that money was wasted when the implementation was delayed, personnel were reassigned and the implementation had to start over. The committee approved the additional funds "with the caveat that this time it has to be enough," said Gaumer.

Capital Budget also approved funds to pay for repairs to the public safety facility, which Gaumer said are badly needed. The police department requested $100,000 for repairs, of which $80,000 was approved by Capital Budget; that amount should cover the costs of replacing all of the exterior windows and several exterior doors, take care of the flooding in the basement, upgrade the electrical service and add new flooring.

The department also requested funds for a security upgrade in the event that the station should go dark during the transition to the South Shore Regional Emergency Contact Center (SSRECC; see related story; page one). While a cost analysis is still being done to determine the total cost of such upgrades, at the very least the police will require steel-framed doors to replace the wooden doors that currently lead to evidence rooms. This cost is estimated to be around $20,000; since the cost is still unknown, Capital Budget has yet to vote on the matter.

Cohasset players sign with Rox

Doonan, Cavanaro, McCunney join Rox for summer

The Brockton Rox of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League (FCBL) have added three more locals to their 2012 roster, as they inked a trio of Division I products from the Atlantic-10 Conference: Fordham University sophomore infielder Rob McCunney (Cohasset/BC High), University of Rhode Island freshman pitcher Brendan Doonan (Cohasset), and University of Massachusetts freshman outfielder Jeff Cavanaro (Hull/Cohasset).

McCunney, a slick-fielding infielder who can play multiple positions, saw action in 28 games as a freshman for the Rams of Fordham University in 2011. He started 16 of those games at third base, compiling 10 hits, a home run, eight RBI, six runs scored, and three stolen bases. McCunney's season was highlighted by a career-day against the University of Massachusetts on May 14, as he went 2-for-5 with a home run, two runs scored and four RBI. As of April 11, McCunney had started seven games for the Rams in 2012, totaling four hits to go along with a run scored and an RBI.

The Cohasset native was a three-year starter at Boston College High School, where he helped the Eagles to back-to-back Massachusetts State

Cohasset battles in Chowda Cup

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The numbers have shown things may be a little tough for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team at the moment, but looking a little deeper, the outlook is brighter.

After five games, the Skippers check in at 1-4, but have shown no quit despite a rash of injuries.

Last week, Cohasset played in the Chowda Cup at Scituate High School and left everything on the field.

In the opener, Scituate, who won the tournament, used the fast break well and overpowered Cohasset's young group in a 17-4 Scituate win.

That type of game could have been a killer, but Cohasset fought and gave Marshfield a battle, taking the Rams to double-overtime before falling 11-10.

"I'm proud of the kids," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said. "After that Scituate game they could have checked out, but they didn't. They showed a lot of character. It's easy having character when you're 4-1, but the true test is having it at 1-4."

Flanagan, a former Marine, won't make excuses, and feels that when his players start getting back that his team will be tough.

"I think we'll be a great story at the end of the year," he said. "We have so many kids out that I have never worked kids harder than in the first two weeks. It was right off the deck. We built chemistry. No one is running us off the field. We've had trouble in transition. We're young. The kids make great plays, and they make young kid plays. As a coach it's one of those things. When we get our veterans back, we'll be dangerous. There are no excuses. The boys know you go to battle with what you've got. That's something I learned at Parris Island."

One injury that has hurt is Kyle Livingstone with a broken collarbone. He is hoping to be back for the end of the season. Livingston will play Div. 1 lacrosse at UMass. next season.

While players have been out, Flanagan said a potential leadership void has been filled by a couple of experienced players.

Jamboree success

Winchester trip a success for third grade boys team

In their second set of games for the season, the Cohasset third grade boys lacrosse teams traveled to Winchester to take on Winchester and Needham in a jamboree format.

On an unseasonably warm day, the two teams played three games apiece and compiled four wins against just one loss and a tie.

The "White" team played teams from Needham in all three of their games. Unfortunately, they came out a little bit flat and lost their opener 5-1.

Regrouping, the team came out fired up for their second game and started dominating ground balls, forcing bad passes, and moving to get open without the ball on offense. Zach Donovan and Connor Comerford really provided the spark, scoring and assisting each other on several goals. Reid Hosp came up with a solid performance in goal and the team came out on top, 6-2. The third game was a physical contest, but Cohasset played a little tougher. Noah Jones and Merrick Ronzoni set the tone with some hard-fought ground balls and Whit Swartwood and Teddy Lucier heated up with some nice feeds and quick cuts to goal to lead the team to a 5-3 win in their final game.

The "Blue" team got off to a faster start against a Winchester squad, dominating their opener with an 8-0 victory.

Skippers win mistake filled game

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It probably didn't look pretty, but the Cohasset baseball team kept their opening-season win streak alive at 7-0 with a 6-4 win at Cardinal Spellman on Tuesday.

Jamie Faber picked up his third win of the year by going the distance, allowing three earned runs, while striking out 13. Faber allowed five hits and just one walk.

Offensively, Cohasset garnered eight hits, with Faber getting three and catcher Conor Goetz notching two.

The mistakes were plenty.

Four Cohasset runs scored on passed balls, including three in the second inning.

Still, after four innings, the game was tied 4–4.

The Skippers broke it open in the seventh on errors.

The Skippers scored the winning run on a dropped third strike and a bad throw to first that went over the first baseman's head.

The two team played at Cohasset yesterday (results were unavailable at press time).

For the Skippers, the early win streak has come from a combination of solid pitching, balanced hitting, and with the exception of Tuesday's game, solid defense.

John Collins has led the attack with a .579 average. He's scored eight runs and has knocked in five and has a .615 on base percentage.

Chris Murphy has also been an on-base machine with a .409 average and a .509 on base percentage.

In the power numbers, Connor O'Brien has led the way with a .333 average and nine RBI.

Goetz and Jamie Timothy each have knocked in eight runs, with Timothy hitting .435 and a .519 OBP.

Mickey Barry is hitting .389 with six RBI, a double a triple and a .560 OBP.

N. E. Lacrosse Classic returns to Gillette

No. 1 UMass faces Hofstra and Bentley plays Merrimack

The third annual New England Lacrosse Classic will be played at Gillette Stadium this Saturday, April 21, with two games. No. 1 ranked University of Massachusetts squares off against Hofstra and Bentley University plays Merrimack College.

UMass (11-0) is tied for the No. 1 ranking in the USILA Division 1 Coaches' poll, with Loyola College (Md.) for the first time in its history. This is the first time a UMass program has been ranked No. 1 since the 1995-96 basketball team.

In Saturday's first game at 2:30 p.m., Bentley and Merrimack play in an important Northeast-10 Conference game that will help determine the teams that will participate in the conference championship that begins May 1.

The second game begins at 5 p.m. and features two Colonial Athletic Association teams. Hofstra (6-6) is vying for a CAA playoff berth while UMass would claim the CAA regular-season championship with a victory.

Tickets for the New England Lacrosse Classic are $15 (including parking) and can be purchased via www.ticketmaster.com or day of game at the Gillette Stadium Ticket Office Saturday beginning at noon. Group tickets (20 or more) can be ordered by calling 508-549-0178.

New England lacrosse fans looking to watch all the lacrosse action, including the No. 1 ranked UMass Minutemen, should plan to arrive at Gillette Stadium in time to park and purchase their tickets before the faceoffs. Long lines are expected at the ticket office. Fans also are encouraged to enjoy all that Patriot Place (www.patriotplace.com) has to offer for restaurants, retail and entertainment during the day.

In May, Gillette Stadium will host the 2012 NCAA Men's Lacrosse Championships with Harvard University serving as the host school.

The NCAA championships previously were played at Gillette Stadium in 2008 and 2009 when three attendance records were established. Information about all lacrosse events at Gillette Stadium can be found at www.gillettestadiumlacrosse.com.

Sunday showdown

Teams to square off this weekend in SCHL playoffs

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The playoffs are set for the winter season of the South Coastal Hockey League at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Sunday.

The Black Hawks worked their way into the Classic Division playoffs as they got a four-goal performance from Tony Rota and rolled past the Red Wings by a 6-1 score. Paul Lyons of Pembroke and Tim Fallon added a goal each, and John Dunn had two assists for the Black Hawks, who will play the Rangers in the Classics Division semifinals.

Scott Varley scored for the Red Wings, who will be seeded fourth and play the top-seeded Maple Leafs in the semifinals.

Rockland's Marth DeCourcey scored three goals, Shawn Malloy added one, Marshfield's Jack Carrig had two assists and Andy Pelly of Hanover recorded the shutout in the Maple Leafs' 4-0 win over the Rangers.

Ed Burke of Marshfield scored the game-winning goal in the shootout as the Crusaders stunned the Legend's top-seeded team the Sharks by a 2-1 score.

Holbrook's Richard Buckley scored a power play goal in the second period for the Crusaders, and Norwell's Dana Dolabany scored for the Sharks who will play the fourth-seeded Saints in the Legends Division semifinals.

The Saints lost to the Stingers as Pembroke's Steve Lemish had a goal and an assist, and Pembroke's Mark Frano recorded the shutout in the 3-0 victory.

Scott Kelly of Pembroke and Tom Williams added a goal each, and Pembroke's Dave Christensen had two assists for the third-seeded Stingers in the Legends Division. The Stiners will play the Whalers in the playoffs.

Steve Concannon of Scituate, Marshfield's Chuck Morrison, and Duxbury's Kevin Mackin had a goal each for the Whalers in their 3-2 win over the Toros. Peter Cleary and Jim Holmes, both of Pembroke, scored the goals for the Toros.

Steve Berlo scored on the final round of the shootout as the Canadiens rallied for a 4-3 win over the Bruins in a Classics Division matchup.

Glen Harnisch and Tim McCrystal, both of Marshfield, and Pembroke's Mike Fahie scored for the Canadiens in regulation.

Marshfield's John Zimmer had a goal and an assist, while John Dougenik and Steve Anzuoni added a goal each for the Bruins. The Bruins got two assists from Pembroke's Jim Stone.

Championships in 2008 and 2009. McCunney captained the baseball team as a senior, while receiving the 2009 Unsung Hero Award as a junior.

He also was named the Division I Regional MVP in 2008 as well. During the summer of 2010, McCunney hit .286 with three RBI and four runs scored for the Brockton Dirt Dogs of the Cranberry League.

Doonan, also a Cohasset native, is midway through his second year at the University of Rhode Island after redshirting in 2011. The multi-talented 19-year old has seen most of his playing time come as a relief pitcher this season, but can be utilized as an infielder as well. Through April 11, the right-hander had posted a 5.06 ERA in nine appearances. Doonan registered nine punch outs, while scattering six hits and four walks through 10.2 innings of work.

Prior to his collegiate career, Doonan captained the baseball, hockey, and football teams while at Cohasset High School, and helped guide the Skippers to the 2010 Massachusetts Div. 4 State Championship in baseball as a senior. During that season, Doonan hit .330 with 28 RBI and 21 stolen bases, while notching a perfect 6-0 record as a pitcher.

In summer of 2011, Doonan played 29 games as an infielder for the Lake Norman Copperheads of the Southern Collegiate Baseball League. He hit .267 with one home run, 15 RBI, two doubles, 23 runs scored, and five stolen bases.

Cavanaro is in the midst of his freshman season at UMass-Amherst.

As of April 11, he had appeared in eight games, starting three of them. So far in 2012, the 19-year old recorded a single, an RBI, and a run scored for the Minutemen.

Cavanaro, who's family moved to Hull after graduation, attended Cohasset High School, where he boasted a .375 career batting average and helped the Skippers to back-to-back Massachusetts State Championships. The speedy outfielder swiped 21 bases as a senior in 2011, while boasting a 1.34 ERA on the mound.

He was named the South Shore League's MVP following his senior season, while also earning All-SSL honors as a junior. Cavanaro also played football at Cohasset High and broke the single-season school record for passing yards and touchdowns thrown during his junior year.

Last week, former Cohasset Post 118 player Jordan Berry signed on with the Rox. All four players have spent time with Post 118.

Cohasset baseball coach Pete Afanasiw is thrilled to see his former charges playing close to home.

"It is very exciting to see two such quality players get the opportunity to play excellent baseball so close to home," he said. "And at the same time, it makes me very proud to see them continue on after their time at Cohasset and serve as great role models for the youngsters in town."

Faber also has a 1.27 ERA for the season with 22 innings pitched.

When he's not pitching, O'Brien and Goetz have been excellent.

O'Brien has only allowed one earned run in 12 innings for a 0.58 ERA, while Goetz has a 0.54 ERA in 13 innings, allowing just two runs, one of them earned.

After the break, Cohasset will head into the heart of the South Shore League season with games at Rockland (Tues.), against Harwich (April 30), followed by road trips to Mashpee, East Bridgewater and Abington.

East Bridgewater is considered a favorite in the league this season and could be the deciding game in the teams' final game of the season.

South Shore Vo-Tech to hold Talent Show

The South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School Student Council, under the direction of teachers, Suzanne Mathisen and Emily Cook, are sponsoring the first annual Talent Show on Friday, April 27 at 6 p.m.

The Talent Show involves 28 contestants made up of 12 artists and 16 performers. The program includes singers, dancers and musicians. Admission is $4 per person.

Superintendent Tom Hickey praised the event organizers, sophomores Jakob Hyde of Whitman, Olivia Swaitek of Rockland and Payton Brown of Hanson.

South Shore Regional includes the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Whitman, Hanson, Hanover, Abington and Rockland and is located at 476 Webster St., Hanover.

Cohasset Public Schools conduct 'Child Find'

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.0, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: autism, developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability, or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 6 to 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school. Call the Cohasset Public Schools Student Service Office at 781-383-6104 for more information.

In addition, screenings for 3-to-5-year olds are held on Fridays at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Preschool staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

CAMP OPEN HOUSES ARE HAPPENING: GO IF YOU CAN!

by, Bette Bussel, Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

How interesting can traipsing around a camp in its off season be? Very interesting! Discovering new places delights children of all ages; checking out a camp open house is definitely a process of discovery! But summer camps are not just places—they are worlds designed especially for children. There's a lot to see, to explore, to hear and to think about at a camp open house. Really? Yes! In the late winter and early spring when the weather is far from summer-like? Yes! When camp is not running and the place may be filled with mud rather than with laughing, singing children and the wonderful staff members who power the program? Yes!

You're right. You won't see the camp truly in action. (If you want to do that, visit during the summer before your children will attend!) You can see a lot at an Open House that will help inform your decision making process. Meet the director and/or key administrators. Gather lots of information about the program, the facility, and the people who run it. Tour around. Meet as many staff members as possible. Look for returning campers—perhaps some older campers in leadership roles, like counselors-in-training (CITs). Ask questions that pertain to your child and your family's camp search. You'll gain a lot if information about the camp's vibe, personality, and sense of community and you'll have a chance to gauge your child's reaction to it all.

How do directors and administrators and the staff on hand interact with each other? How do they relate to your child? How does your child respond? What are parents (especially returning ones), camp staff and administrators, and current campers and their families talking about? Try to discover what people enjoy and love most about the camp.

Another type of camp Open House is hosted in a private home or in a public meeting space, such as a museum, school or restaurant. Of course, the chance to poke around the actual facility is not possible, but you still benefit from interaction with the camp's staff and leadership and from the photography, videos or slide shows or the program they present. And, you will get a sense of the camp's vibe, personality and sense of community.

Open Houses give camp seekers a bit more to base a decision on than a website alone can. And, with so many camp options, and lots to consider as you search for a best-fit summer camp experience, the kind of information found at Open Houses is extraordinarily helpful. For a list of local Open Houses visit, www.ACANewEngland.org.

GIMME SHELTER

Trixie loves people and cats

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find a home for Trixie, a black-and-white, Tuxedo shorthair female. Trixie is just about a year old, but very kittenish. She is extremely friendly and doesn't appear to have any issues. She adores human contact and gets along well with other cats.

If you've been looking for that "purrfect" cat, then look no further, but come on down to the shelter and meet our beautiful Trixie.

Spring is here and so are the kittens, fluffy, purring, adorable babies, waiting for their very first home. They go quickly, so if interested, please give Judy a call. You'll find her number below.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

If you've been looking for that "purrfect" cat, then look no further, but come on down to the shelter and meet our beautiful Trixie.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Two oboists in harmony

ROY HARRIS

When an orchestra has been around as long at the South Shore's Atlantic Symphony – 15 years in its all-professional form – some wonderful musician "back stories" take shape. But it's hard to top that involving former principal oboist Turner Bledsoe and current ASO principal oboist Andrew Price.

The 49-year-old Price, whose oboe mastery underlies a brilliant career, will be appearing Sunday, April 22, at 5:30 p.m., in one of the ASO's most intimate, and delightful settings: a "Classical on Tap" one-musician presentation at Bridgeman's Restaurant in Hull.

The intergenerational story of Price and Dr. Bledsoe – retired physician, educator and medical administrator – is something rare, though, offering insights into the special bond between musicians that often grows from working, and "playing," together. Here it is in their own words: from Dr. Bledsoe, a self-described "aging amateur musician," trained at Rochester, N.Y.'s Eastman School of Music before discovering what he calls the "technical limitations as an instrumentalist," and deciding on a medical path. And then from Price, now on the Boston University School of Music faculty, whose playing the Boston Globe describes as "beautifully sensitive and eloquent."

Turner Bledsoe

For young music students at Eastman the most common alternative choices were studying multiple instruments, to become a high school music teacher, or to pursue orchestral conducting. My choice was seek a career outside music, but to keep what skills I had as an oboist sufficiently honed to enjoy an active musical life as an amateur. This choice was remarkably facilitated from college onward by marriage to an excellent clarinetist of like mind.

From Eastman, I returned to Stanford University in California to court that clarinetist, Muriel, and finish a BA in Music. The next call was pre-med, and I was accepted at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, first my residency and then the faculty, and eventually pursing an administration career. Eventually, I came to Hingham with the Blue Cross/Blue Shield organization. Here I took the principal oboe position at the struggling Hingham Civic Orchestra, which was to become the Atlantic Symphony. I retired as a medical administrator in 1999, after Muriel's death. Besides oboe, I focused on boating, skiing, and volunteering at Hingham's Old Ship Church. (I met Joan, to whom I am now married, while we both were on the Old Ship Board of Directors.)

Within a few years it became clear that Hingham's orchestra needed a new conductor and professional musicians if it was to survive. This is what we did by choice, although "professionalizing" meant that amateur players had to give way to their new professional colleagues. For "first chair" musicians, this can be painful or – as I was to learn — it can be delightful, depending on personalities involved. As the outgoing amateur principal, that's how I met incoming pro Andrew Price.

Andrew Price with Turner Bledsoe, is featured in a wide-ranging discussion of the oboe, and his career playing it, at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, April 22, at Bridgeman's Restaurant, 145 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Adults and seniors admitted for $20, youths for $10. COURTESY PHOTO

As phenomenal an oboist as Andrew is, the idea of competition between new and old – even when the "old" was me – vanished instantly. He was generous helping improve my performance skills, for example, and helping me extend my solo experiences in a vastly improved orchestral environment. Indeed, the transition evolved into a warm, collegial relationship, in part because Andrew is a remarkably outgoing conversationalist, making him an ideal companion for a non-verbal introvert like me.

Through it all, Andrew and I have remained dear friends and colleagues. As Muriel and I once did, now Joan and I follow his career with great interest. We try to be present at his big performances whenever, and wherever, we can. We occasionally have been able to capture him for dinner after concerts.

Andrew Price

I first met Turner when I was asked by my fellow BU classmate Jin Kim to play in what was then called the Hingham Symphony Orchestra, where Jin was conductor — and remains as ASO conductor. Turner and I split the two oboe positions. What a fascinating person I encountered at my first rehearsal: an oboist as well as a medical doctor. (I didn't know one could have two such careers successfully intertwined.) I especially remember performing together the "J.S. Bach Orchestral Suite No. 1" -- one of my favorites, though we both nearly collapsed from lack of breath due to the demanding oboe parts. And, on the same program, I remember Turner's playing in "Ravel's Pavane for a Dead Princess" — the most beautiful I ever heard him play.

Fourteen years later, even though he has retired from performing, I consider Turner to be a great friend and musical colleague.

Every time I perform with the ASO, I am not only honored to be part of a great musical ensemble, I am truly honored to hold the Turner and Joan Bledsoe chair in the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra.

Regarding Turner being a benefactor, I looked up the word benefactor; it comes from Latin bene (good) and factor (maker). What an appropriate description of Turner and his relationship with the ASO.

Roy Harris is a Hingham-based journalist and author who serves on the Board of the ASO. For more information or tickets, see www.atlanticsymphony.org or call 781-331-3600.

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

Clock is ticking toward registration

Now that the holidays and spring recess are behind us and April showers are upon us, summer is literally just around the corner. In Cohasset, summer is equated with sailing season, and next weekend, the Cohasset Sailing Club will hold its annual registration from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, April 28, and noon to 2 p.m., on Sunday April 29, at the clubhouse on Government Island. The combined membership application and class registration document is available on the website, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also contains more detailed information about the club and the classes it offers for the town's young people, teens and adults.

It is easy to take the CSC for granted as just another one of the special town's amenities, but there was a time that the club did not exist, and hence Cohasset residents did not have an equal and affordable opportunity to access the water. Over the years CSC has strived to keep fees reasonable, and despite the inevitable cost creep since its founding in 1960, we still offer much more bang for the buck when compared with other South Shore sailing organizations. For instance, Hingham and Duxbury also offer children's lessons on a three- or four-day schedule, but these sessions take place over four weeks in Hingham and three weeks in Duxbury at a respective cost of $385 and $449. CSC offers an eight-week session at $300 per child. In Hingham, free sailing is available for three hours on two weeknights and a few hours on Saturday afternoons for a $195 fee, while in Duxbury adults can free sail for two hours every day during the season, but at a cost of $525 and a few days notice on reserving a rental boat. By joining CSC at the basic seasonal membership fee of $200, which applies to individuals and families with children younger than 23 years of age, kids and adults can free sail for three hours every weekday evening and from 1 to 8 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. And CSC doesn't charge people to rent a boat or require that they reserve one ahead of time.

The one area where the CSC has fallen short, compared to peer organizations, is in the physical quality of the facility. A year ago we launched a fundraising campaign to build an environmentally friendly and aesthetically pleasing new clubhouse, design donated by local architects Hoadley and Martinez. Through the generosity of past and present members we have made good progress towards this goal, but in order to break ground this fall, we need to get more donations and pledges. You can check out the plans for the new clubhouse on our website. Our aim is to offer Cohasset a beautiful long-lasting addition to the town's waterfront while maintaining a reasonable fee structure for all our residents. Please consider helping us achieve this goal and leave a legacy that will endure for decades to come.

HAPPENINGS

Kitchen Tour

The kitchen is the true heart of the home. On Friday, May 18, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., visitors of the Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting are offered a glimpse into five stunning homes located along the Cohasset seacoast while enjoying a sampling of gourmet foods from local area restaurants and caterers.

The tour will be held rain or shine. Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting the center's at www.southshorecommunity.com or calling the South Shore Community Center directly at 781-383-0088. The cost for the tickets will be $35. The South Shore Community Center is a not for profit organization, and relies heavily on the community to support their efforts.

'Movie Queen'

Cohasset Historical Society welcomes a return visit from "The Movie Queen." On Saturday, April 28, the Historical Society will offer a limited engagement of the film "The Movie Queen."

The film was produced in the late 1930s as part of a local talent production. The plot involved a "movie queen" making a return visit to her hometown where she visits stores, churches and other local sites. The film crew follows the "queen" as she makes her way through town. Local residents were cast in the roles that welcomed the "queen" home. "The Movie Queen" was produced by filmmaker Margaret Cram Showalter who traveled to a number of towns in New England to make local versions of their towns "Movie Queen."

This fundraising event will feature wine, beer and "Cohasset Punch" as well as 1940s style hors d'oeuvres. Cost is $50 per person and since space is limited, it is best to make reservations as early as possible. Join in the fun and call Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434 for reservations.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 30, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures soon will ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

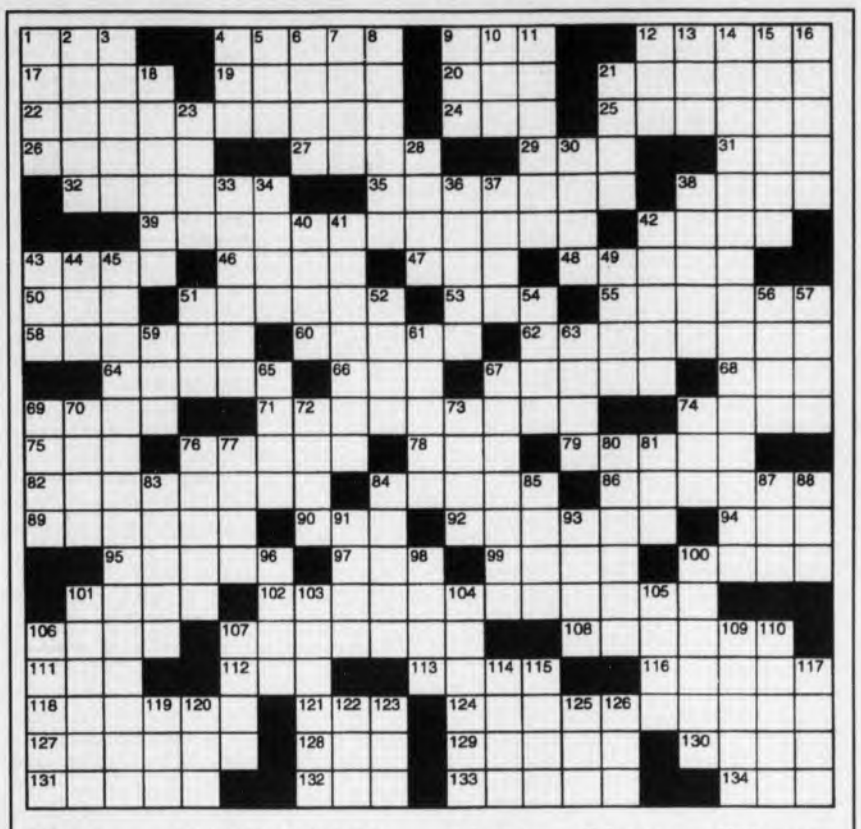
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

SKY Vacation Bible School

A summer kids' event called Sky will take place at St. Stephen's, Cohasset, from June 25 to June 29. At Sky, faith and imagination will soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids will participate in Bible-learning activities, sing songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into treats, experience Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test the Science gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day will conclude with Fly Away Finale – a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned. Family and friends are invited to come at 11:30 a.m., on June 29, for a Fly Away Finale.

Sky is for kids from preschool (age 3) through fifth grade, and will take place from 9 a.m. to noon each day. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Charlotte Pfaffmann

Charlotte Pfaffmann

HINGHAM – Charlotte Frost "Sharlie Pfaffmann, age 78, of Hingham, formerly of Cohasset passed away on April 4, 2012 in Chelmsford. She was the widow of John "Fritz" Pfaffmann who died in 2000

She was born in Albany, NY on August 22, 1933, only daughter of Charlotte White Frost "Sis" and Robert Frost. She enjoyed the fast pace of real estate on the south shore, loved animals, enjoyed tennis, sailing and spending time with her family. Her wit, humor, character and loving presence will be sorely missed.

She is survived by her three children, Robert Pfaffmann of Pittsburgh, Sarah Griffiths of Chelmsford, and Charlotte "Lee" Connor of Lexington. She also leaves four adored grandchildren, Robert Dahlquist, Jonathan Dahlquist, Sarah Connor and Charlotte Emily Connor (and her beloved dachshund, Winnie).

A private memorial service will be held later this spring.

In lieu of flowers please send donations to the Dachshund Rescue of North America @ Arrangements by the J.A. Healy Sons Funeral Home in Westford, MA. www.HealyFuneralHome.com.

Donald F. Ainslie

COHASSET – Donald Francis Ainslie, age 84, of Cohasset, passed away April 11, 2012.

He was the brother of Robert E. Ainslie of New Hampshire and Richard D. Ainslie Sr. and Sherwood Ainslie, both of Cohasset.

Don was the retired custodian for Cohasset schools and was a veteran of World War II, serving in the U.S. Navy.

A graveside service will be held Friday, April 20, 2012, at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset, at 11 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory may be made to South Shore Hospice, 100 Baystate Dr., Braintree, MA. 02184, or to the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Sewer tie-in deadline looms

Health Board warns homes in Little Harbor

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Time is running out.

Despite the state-mandated Second Amended Final Judgment requiring hookups to the municipal sewer, many homes in Cohasset's Little Harbor watershed district have yet to connect.

Cohasset's Board of Health reported this week that 94 homes in Little Harbor have yet to pull permits to connect; 30 homes have applied, but have not yet connected. There are 124 that must connect by the deadline.

Nearly three months away from the deadline to connect – July 1, 2012 – town officials worry that residents in Little Harbor who are required, by state law, to connect, may not be able to get the work done in time if they wait much longer to apply. Residents who do not meet the deadline will face fines, as will the rest of the town.

"Who knows what will happen with the hammer of the mighty Commonwealth coming down," Sewer Commissioner John Beck told the Advisory Committee Monday.

"Who knows what will happen with the hammer of the mighty Commonwealth coming down."
John Beck, Sewer Commission

Percentage-wise, 74 percent of the homes in Little Harbor are permitted to connect, while 65 percent of those are actually connected, according to the Board of Health and Sewer Commission. There are five homes that are in the process of being torn down and rebuilt that will not make the deadline; those houses will not receive occupancy permits until the connections are completed.

AFTER 32 YEARS

Saying goodbye to Cohasset High

Mike Gill to head to Sacred Heart HS

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For Cohasset schools, it's the end of an era.

After 32 years of serving the school district, Middle-High School Principal Dr. Michael "Mike" Gill announced recently that he is moving on.

Gill has served as interim principal for the past school year following former principal Joel Antolini's departure last summer; prior to that, Gill worked as assistant principal, a role he took on in 2004. Most of his career, however, was spent teaching and coaching as the Health Education Coordinator for each of the schools.

While Gill is moving on from Cohasset and the public school system, he will soon begin a new position as principal of Sacred Heart High School in Kingston.

The decision to leave Cohasset and complete his career elsewhere was a difficult and emotional one, said Gill, but he explained that it was time.

"I've spent almost my entire career here, and to me that's a really neat thing," Gill said.

"It's really allowed me to

PUBLIC SAFETY

Worth a study?

Mass. Chiefs Assoc. weighs in

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

While it seems almost certain that Cohasset's public safety facility will close its doors during weekday nights and all-day weekends following the upcoming transition to the regional dispatch center in Hingham, surrounding communities who are also regionalizing their dispatch still plan to keep their stations manned around the clock.

The Patriot Ledger reported this week that despite moving to the South Shore Regional Emergency Contact Center (SSRECC), the towns of Norwell, Hingham and Hull all plan to keep their stations staffed 24/7. It has been reported that Cohasset's station could go dark from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. on weekdays and all day on weekends.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the amount of time the station is unmanned would vary, since there will be officers on patrol at all times.

"We have detectives that work from 4 p.m. to midnight that could be in the station... not to mention the chief, deputy chief, lieutenants, shift commanders... We don't know when there's not going to be someone in the station; it will depend day to day," said Milanoski.

Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades confirmed that the Hingham station would still be manned at all hours — despite the fact that the SSRECC is right upstairs.

"The Hingham station is not going to be dark; we will have people there 24 hours a day," Alexiades told the Mariner in a phone call. "I can't comment on the public safety implications in Cohasset, but in Hingham we need to have 24-hour coverage. The SSRECC is not geared to receive the public in WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

Pill take-back day is April 28

What
The Cohasset Police Department and the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) are giving the public an opportunity to prevent pill abuse and theft by ridding their homes of potentially dangerous expired, unused, and unwanted prescription drugs.

When
Bring your medications for disposal to Cohasset Police Station at 62 Elm St. on Saturday, April 28 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The service is free and anonymous, no questions asked.

PRINT EXTRA

Why
This initiative addresses a vital public safety and public health issue. Medicines that languish in home cabinets are highly susceptible to diversion, misuse, and abuse. Rates of prescription drug abuse in the U.S. are alarmingly high, as are the number of accidental poisonings and overdoses due to these drugs. Studies show that a majority of abused prescription drugs are obtained from family and friends, including from the home medicine cabinet. In addition, Americans are now advised that their usual methods for disposing of unused medicines — flushing them down the toilet or throwing them in the trash— both pose potential safety and health hazards.

More
Last October, Americans turned in 377,080 pounds (188.5 tons) of prescription drugs at over 5,300 sites operated by the DEA and nearly 4,000 state and local law enforcement partners.

Water Dept. issues drought advisory

Cohasset Water Department, Drought Management Plan phase remains at the "advisory" level as the region continues to experience drought conditions. The U.S. Drought Monitor recently upgraded all of eastern Massachusetts from a "moderate" drought to a "severe" drought. In the latest update, issued on April 10, 51 percent of the Bay State is now in the "severe" drought category.

Cohasset Water Department regularly monitors precipitation, reservoir levels and flow in Bound Brook and Aaron River. Precipitation year to date is about 50 percent of normal. Water levels in both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir remain adequate, but have started dropping due to the lack of precipitation. Both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir are down about 15 percent of their maximum capacity and consistently dropping each day. The Water Department recently increased releases from the Aaron River Reservoir to maintain Lily Pond water levels, and continues to meet minimum release requirements at both Aaron River Dam and the Bound Brook Control Structure. The Ellms Meadow well station has been returned to service for the season to minimize the production demands from our surface water supplies.

Cohasset Water Department encourages prudent use of water by all customers. It will take a prolonged, significant precipitation event to return conditions to normal. Visit the website at www.cohassetwater.org home page banner on a regular basis for updates on the drought status.

Poppy Drive in Cohasset

The annual Poppy Drive will take place this year on May 24, 25 and 26.

Each year the VFW's success in performing this drive can only be achieved with volunteers taking the time to man tables at Shaw's, Stop & Shop and Curtis Liquors.

This year the VFW is asking for volunteers to call Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079 to donate the times one can sit at locations.

Veteran's agent contact number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F). To make an appointment, call 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Accident closes road for two hours

At 1:10 a.m. On Saturday (April 21) the Cohasset Police Department responded to a repot of a single car motor vehicle crash in the area of 726 Jerusalem Road.

When officers arrived, the found a National Grid pole broken in half in the roadway and a 2002 Mazda pick-up truck with heavy damage. Officers interviewed the driver, who was identified as a 24-year-old Cohasset man. The driver stated that he was traveling south on Jerusalem Road when he lost control of his truck and struck the pole. The driver was issued a citation for failure to drive in marked lanes.

The pick-up truck was totaled in the accident and Jerusalem Road was closed for approximately two hours while crews removed the pole from the roadway. No injuries were reported.

BRIEFLY

VSO position posted

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that a new veterans' service officer (VSO) will be hired at the start of the new fiscal year.

Sergeant Garrett Hunt has been serving as interim since former VSO Joe McElroy retired from the position in December; Hunt will serve as interim until the end of June. The new VSO will begin on July 1, 2012.

Milanoski confirmed that the town is advertising the position, which pays a yearly stipend of $10,400, or $200/week.

POLICE BEAT

Head-on crash in parking lot

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a two-vehicle crash in the parking lot at Cohasset Plaza near Feng Sui at 7:16 p.m. on Saturday, April 21. Police said a 2001 Chevrolet pickup truck operated by a 44-year-old Scituate woman misjudged the speed of a 2001 Audi , operated by a 66-year-old Cohasset man, in the parking lot aisle.

She turned in front of the Audi to head into a parking lot and the two vehicles hit, head-on. Police said the Audi had to be towed; there were no reported injuries. No one was cited because the accident occurred in a parking lot, police said.

No-trespassing

A 49-year-old Jerusalem Road resident, who lives on Straits Pond, reported to police on Monday (April 16) that six of her "no-trespassing" signs were stolen. Apparently, people trespass across her property to get to the pond, police said.

In an unrelated incident this past weekend during the Straits Pond cleanup on Saturday, the same homeowner's father spotted two men collecting trash near the water on his daughter's property. He called police who went to the scene. The two men, ages 52 and 79, respectively, who are both from Cohasset explained they were part of the cleanup effort sponsored by the Straits Pond Watershed Association, were collecting trash and meant no harm.

Parked Jeep

Police responded to a call from a concerned resident of Haystack Lane at 8 p.m. on Monday (April 16) who reported that a 2008 Jeep Wrangler with juveniles was parked at the end of the cul de sac and there had been evidence of drinking. Police said the car was listed to a Cohasset man whom they contacted and he said his daughter had the car and was en route home. Police said there is evidence of drinking in the woods but not around the vehicle. The incidents do not appear to be related.

Lost bicycle

A walk-in to the police station on Tuesday (April 17) at 11:44 a.m. reported he had lost a silver Pacific bicycle. Police allowed him to go through the bicycles at the station but he could not find it. Police have about a dozen abandoned bicycles at the station. Residents who have lost a bicycle are encouraged to stop by and find out if one of the bikes is theirs.

Past accident

A Centerville woman reported a minor accident that she had been involved in at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street eight hours after the accident occurred on Tuesday (April 17). She reported the accident that occurred at 8 a.m., at 3:45 p.m. Police logged the incident.

Teen charged

Police on patrol spotted a 17-year-old Cohasset boy on the ocean side of Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue on a private beach at about 5:38 p.m. on Tuesday (April 17). He was carrying a backpack and a towel. Police have had numerous complaints from property owners about trespassing and drinking in the area. Further investigation revealed the boy's backpack contained six cans of beer. He was arrested and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and trespassing.

Not suspicious

A caller reported that a car driven by an elderly woman with a young male passenger looked suspicious. The car headed to Norwell where police went to the house, the driver was 91, police said

It is not clear what the caller thought was suspicious, police said.

Illegally parked

Police issued a $100 ticket to the owner of a gray Subaru parked illegally in a handicapped spot in the town parking lot at 8:20 a.m. on Wednesday (April 18). A caller reported the illegally parked vehicle, police said.

Backed into

Police said a 1994 Ford Escort, operated by a 20-year-old Whitman man, was waiting in line behind several cars at the red light on Forest Avenue at North Main Street, when a 62-year-old Halifax woman in a 2009 Nissan Rogue, who was visiting a friend, backed out of a driveway on Forest Avenue into the side of the Escort. There was minor damage and no reported injuries. Neither vehicle had to be towed, police said. No one was cited in the accident, police said.

Cut-through

Police responded to a complaint from a caller on Black Rock Road at 5:16 p.m. on Wednesday (April 18) about teens with backpacks headed into the woods. Police talked to the teens, who were just cutting through the area.

Single-car crash

Police responded to a single-car accident on North Main Street at Forest Avenue at 1:33 a.m. on Friday (April 20). Police said a 21-year-old Cohasset man in a 2009 Toyota SUV was headed north on North Main Street and when he tried to turn onto Forest Avenue (toward the water) he misjudged the turn, hit the traffic island and went off the road. There were no reported injuries but the Toyota had to be towed. The driver was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

Verbal warning

A Cohasset officer gave the 22-year-old Pembroke man driving a 2000 Mercury Grand Marquis a verbal warning after pulling the car over on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) at 9:44 a.m. on Friday (April 20). The car had been reported as being driven erratically and passing cars through Scituate.

Window smashed

A 20-year-old Bridgewater man reported that the rear window to his Chevrolet Blazer that he had left for repairs at a local car shop had been smashed overnight. The incident was reported at 11:16 a.m. on Saturday (April 21).

Illegal dumping

Police responded to a complaint from a shop at Shaw's Plaza at 4:38 p.m. on Saturday (April 21) about illegal dumping in the store's Dumpster. Police traced the plate of the Jeep Cherokee that came back to a 27-year-old Scituate man. They notified him and asked him to return to the rear of the store and retrieve his trash. He complied and said he would not use the Dumpster again.

Sightseeing

A caller reported at 6:41 p.m. on Saturday (April 21) that the car in front of her was traveling below the speed limit, hugging the side of the road and swerving at times. Police followed the car into Scituate and pulled it over on Booth Hill Road. As it turned out the operator, who had rented the car, was from the Czech Republic, had been in the country for a week, and was sightseeing, taking the long way to Cape Cod.

Consensual

The former boyfriend of a 39-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Sunday (April 22) at 7:08 p.m. that his ex-girlfriend had called him to report she had been raped and the man would not leave her Cohasset apartment. Cohasset police went to the apartment where they found the woman and her 41-year-old current boyfriend. There had been some drinking going on and the sex was consensual, police said.

NEW HEADCOUNT FOR FY '13

Town manager to hire new employees

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During presentations of the fiscal year 2013 budget to both the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen this week, interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that he plans to add the equivalent of three full-time employees to the town.

There will be a new part-time, 19 hour/week position in Elder Affairs to assist with the Meals on Wheels program, which Elder Affairs took over from the Social Service League this year.

The Department of Public Works will have a new part-time CDL driver, which Milanoski explained is refunding a position that has been unfunded due to a retirement a few years ago.

The town manager also plans on funding a part-time accountant to assist Finance Director Mary Gallagher. This position will focus on special projects, said Milanoski, including audits of town departments. He explained that auditors have recommended the town add this position.

Finally, Milanoski plans to hire a full-time Director of Project Management, Planning and Inspection. The person in this position will be tasked with planning, organizing, coordinating, and overseeing all project management, grant applications for capital projects, as well as general oversight of the Planning, Conservation, Building and Health departments. This position will provide general support to the department heads and report to the town manager.

While Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore told the selectmen during the boards' joint meeting on Tuesday night that he was surprised by the new headcount, he did understand the need for these positions.

"The good news," said Milanoski, is that the town budget is able to fund these positions while still living "within expected revenues."

The town manager said that these new positions would be discussed on the floor of Town Meeting during his budget presentation, along with an organizational chart of all the departments and department heads "so Town Meeting will be fully aware of what the proposal is."

AUCTION UPDATE

Jerusalem Road property up for action

A two-family waterfront home is up for auction in Cohasset.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced recently that the town-owned property at 821 Jerusalem Road will be auctioned on Thursday, May 10. The town acquired the property through a tax title foreclosure.

Registration is at 5 p.m. and the auction will begin at 6 p.m. The auction will take place in the Board of Selectmen's office on the second floor of Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Anyone interested in purchasing the property is encouraged to attend the open house on Thursday, May 3 from 3 to 7 p.m. Please contact the Town Manager's office at (781) 383-4105 to sign up for the Open House.

Bidder's Information Packages are available at the town manager's office starting Monday, April 23, for $25 in print; electronic copies are free by contacting tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org.

The town manager's office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and until 1 p.m. on Friday. The office is open until 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

Upon successful bid, the minimum required deposit will be $5,000, non-refundable, payable in money order or bank check.

NORFOLK COUNTY

First Quarter Real Estate Activity Report

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported on real estate activity in Norfolk County during the period Jan. 1, 2012, through March 31, 2012.

"The first quarter of 2012 revealed positive signs of growth and potential" said O'Donnell. Specifically, O'Donnell pointed to the 3,209 Norfolk County deeds recorded during 2012s first quarter, representing a 19 percent improvement from 2011s first quarter. O'Donnell explained that sales were not the only area to experience growth. "Over the past three months 44,491 documents were filed at the Registry compared to last year's total of 39,114. Part of this 14 percent spike in activity is owed to renewed Norfolk County mortgage activity." During the first three months of this year, 10,213 new mortgages were recorded, 29 percent more than 2011's first quarter. Total mortgage indebtedness jumped 74 percent and settled at $2.2 billion. Also contributing to the number of records filed, Norfolk County homeowners filed 3,040 Declarations of Homestead between Jan. 1 and March 31, 64 percent more than the same period last year.

In comparison to the sheer volume of activity during the year's first quarter, total dollar amounts connected with property sales remained low. The total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County topped at $773 million. This figure, which encompasses both commercial and residential sales, represents a drop from 2011's $832 million amount for first quarter sales. The average sale price of deeds fell countywide as well. For sales higher than $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) the average price was $506,545, 21 percent less than the same period last year. O'Donnell said, "It will be interesting to watch the next quarter of the year as to whether prices follow sales and begin to improve."

One aspect of the Registry of Deeds recordings increase viewed closely is foreclosures. Foreclosure activity in Norfolk County contributed to the first quarters' raised document count with 170 filings from January 1 through March 31. This represents a 102 percent spike from last year. The 170 homes foreclosed upon during this period are not necessarily new to the process but most likely part of a backlog formed in response to a judicial mandate that banks and lenders clean up their record keeping prior to foreclosing. "Regardless of whether you just received your first Notice to Foreclose or have been living with the prospect of losing your home for more than a year the reality is frightening," said O'Donnell, "so here at the Registry we provide homeowners by way of our website www.norfolkdeeds.org important state and federal resource information regarding foreclosures and mortgages as well as contact information for agencies offering assistance and counseling services."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Registry land records go back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 and are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. Complementing the Registry's efforts to expand and increase the accessibility of land records the Registry now accepts electronically transmitted documents. E-filing allows a real estate professional from not only Norfolk County but from across the country to send and record documents within minutes at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. To learn more about this technology and/or the other services offered by the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call the Customer Service Department at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Windows woes still under review

CPC, citizens continue church-state debate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

With Town Meeting a mere two weeks' away, one of the hot button issues on the warrant is still getting heat at public meetings.

As the Mariner has reported since January, Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee approved a request from the First Parish Meetinghouse to replace the church windows using CPC funds of $65,000. This item is a warrant article for the May 12 Town Meeting, and the town will ultimately decide the outcome; however, officials continue to vacillate on whether or not the matter violates the separation of church and state, or whether or not a public entity should fund a private building project.

The argument from the CPC, who voted 7-1 to approve First Parish's request: the CPC has historically funded several similar projects.

The case made by those in opposition: The CPC should not fund the project of a religious organization or any other private entity, for that matter.

"I still think it opens a can of worms," selectman Leland Jenkins said during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting. Jenkins, who serves on the CPC, was the sole member who voted against First Parish's request.

Howie Altholtz, a resident, attorney and former member of First Parish has appeared before both the CPC and selectmen several times to debate the issue. Last week, he explained his concerns about setting a precedent for funding religious-oriented projects, adding that maintaining the separation of church and state protects both parties.

While the CPC said that funding First Parish's project is within the scope of their committee because the Meetinghouse is a historic structure, Altholtz argued to the selectmen that the church is not part of the National Historic Registry but only lies in the historic district.

"It's an incorrect characterization," he said.

CPC chairman Russ Bonetti countered that, according to CPC guidelines, there is little distinction between the two. "If it's in the Mass. Registry – and I believe it is – the local historical society deems it to be of historic value. It's hard to argue what building in town is more historical [than the Meetinghouse]."

Last week, selectman Fred Koed wondered if the Attorney General's office could weigh in on the matter; Town Counsel has opined that the issue does not violate church-state separation, while the national chapter of the Americans United for Separation of Church and State wrote a letter to the CPC calling the proposed grant to First Parish unconstitutional.

Altholtz said that he called the AG's office himself last week and was told that they will not review all of the town's warrant articles — only the ones that have to do with bylaws. "They don't get into policy issues," Altholtz told the selectmen.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr made plans to contact the AG's office to learn more on the matter. The selectmen decided not to vote on the article that evening, but to add the discussion to the agenda for their Thursday, April 26 meeting.

While the Advisory Committee voted 3-2 last week to reject the window restoration article, some of the selectmen seem inclined, so far, to support it.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said, "In terms of the public-private issue, public money supports all kinds of private buildings, like it or not... My personal belief is that the community has a responsibility to support historic icons and buildings."

For more on this issue, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

STATION

the same fashion as our police station."

While there will still be three full-time Cohasset officers on the road, and an officer would be there in the event a prisoner is taken into custody, there will not be someone working the desk in the police station lobby while the station is empty.

Milanoski has said that this should not pose a threat to public safety: the police station lobby will continue to serve as a safe haven for residents who need assistance; they can lock themselves in the lobby, using it as a "safe room," and can use a monitor to communicate directly to the dispatch center in Hingham.

"There will be contact people can make at the station. We will start with a motion alarm so that when someone opens the door, the computer scans the [security] cameras and automatically connects with someone at the SSRECC," the town manager said. "That person will then be able to respond directly to the individual. Cruisers can be there in two seconds if someone needs medical attention, and the fire department with EMTs is 10 seconds away."

Police Chief Mark DeLuca said, however, that his preference is to keep the police station manned 24/7 with at least one attendant trained in emergency response and first aid. Last week, he told the Mariner how the town would need to expend money to keep the station fortified during the "off" hours.

"If the station goes dark, we're going to have to secure the facilities physically, replacing doors and securing windows, alarm the building, add video surveillance — there are items in the building that have to be safeguarded," DeLuca said.

As reported by the Capital Budget Committee, it will cost at least $20,000 for security upgrades; this is the estimated cost of replacing wooden doors that lead to evidence rooms with steel-framed doors. A cost analysis done by the Norwell Police Station revealed that such security upgrades could cost upwards of $100,000.

DeLuca emphasized that this problem is a legacy issue from years ago that he and the current town administration have been tasked with addressing.

"We were handed off this with little homework done," the police chief explained. "No feasibility study was done whatsover, as far as any for planning for the impacts [on public safety]. It was never addressed... it was left in our laps to do something with this."

Milanoski agreed, stating that the decision was made prior to the current administration.

"Four years ago, when the Board of Selectmen voted to go to the regional dispatch center, the decision was made [to close the station]. We have to live with it, but we are going to provide a safe and reliable solution."

The selectmen voted on moving to the SSRECC during their Nov. 30, 2009 meeting. According to the minutes, the board voted only to approve the move toward regionalized dispatch, but did not vote on whether the station would go dark. Selectman Paul Carlson, who was chairman at the time, said that he was impressed by the argument of improved service and felt that there was time to deal with the issue of manning the station.

According to the Mass. Chiefs Association of Police, further study would be more than worthwhile.

Chief A. Wayne Sampson of the Mass. Chiefs said that many Commonwealth communities that have undertaken a feasibility study on regionalized dispatch have ultimately decided that the benefits of regionalization do not outweigh the risks of leaving their local stations unmanned.

"It's a very important issue to us because we have a lot of communities researching going to regional dispatch," said Sampson. "The problem we're hearing from a lot of communities is that when they do the study, a lot of them are backing out because they realize there's not going to be lot of cost savings."

Despite the fact that "the state is pushing hard for regionalization," explained Sampson, "many communities having done the impact study have chosen not to go that route."

The chief inquired as to the size of Cohasset, then commented that so far, even the smallest towns in the state have continued to maintain 24/7 coverage of their police stations.

"Frankly, I have not heard of any community that has shut down their building yet," said Sampson. "You can take our very smallest community in the western part of state... Citizens expect to be able to go to their station 24 hours a day and get some type of service... I can't imagine a community like Cohasset giving up the security leverage they have."

The crux of the issue, according to Sampson: the cost of realizing savings in the town budget versus the cost of putting public safety at risk.

"It's unfortunate," Sampson said of the catch-22. "We understand it's a very difficult economy and appreciate the difficulties our town administrators have in balancing the budgets, but there are truly public safety issues that cannot be overlooked — we believe this is one of them."

While citizens and town officials have often raised questions about the size of the Cohasset police force, and whether or not 24/7 coverage is truly needed in a town of Cohasset's size, Sampson would like to remind folks that communities must plan for the unthinkable.

"As we all know, all it takes is one tragedy, and the citizens of the community are going to find that the decision [to close the station] was unacceptable," said Sampson. "I would not want to be a town administrator or certainly not want to be a police administrator that would support that decision. I can say confidently that within the Commonwealth of Mass., there would not be a single police administrator that would support the decision."

Cohasset's town manager recently met with the police department's union representatives to discuss potential options.

"I met with the union and they shared with me some of their concerns over what happened with the agreement four years ago to close the station," said Milanoski. "They came up with some good suggestions, and I'm going to fully explore their suggestions. We're going to make it a safe environment to protect people with multiple layers of security in the building."

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Last day of school

Cohasset district's official last of school will be Monday, June 18, as voted on by the School Committee.

Search underway

The search for a new Director of Student Services is still underway; Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that resumes will continue to be collected through May 11.

Those interested in joining the search committee for a new Director of Student Services should contact the Superintendent's office by May 7 at 781-383-6111.

CTO interviews are complete

Another position the schools are seeking to fill: a school- and town-wide Chief Technology Officer (CTO). The position was created by Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski and posted last month. Cataldo announced this week that "we had our interviews, and we are working with somebody to do a contract."

The schools and town will split the workload and the pay for the position 60-40, officials said.

The funding for the job already exists in the school budget, and the town will pick up a portion of the salary through the technology budget. The CTO is expected to earn an annual salary of $110,000 to $120,000, which is about what the Director of Technology position has earned.

The CTO position redefines the current Director of Technology job, expanding on the scope of work to include the town side of operations. The new position is also year-round.

Conor Sheehy is on tops Robotics team

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Robotics star

Conor Sheehy of Cohasset, a freshman at Boston College High School, helped his BC High Robotics team to a twofold victory at the Boston FIRST Regional Robotics Competition at Boston University, Agganis Arena on March 23 and 24.

Conor and 14 other members of BC High's newly-formed Robotics team, under the guidance of Mark Pumphrey of Rockland, faculty moderator, worked the entire year with the help of engineers and parents, to mechanically design, build, wire and program their prized robot, ROOK. The robot was named The ROOK because, like a rook on a chessboard, it can move sideways due to the swerve drive.

The team burned the midnight oil in preparation for the competition. They worked right up to the midnight deadline, ensuring their creation was fit to take on the competition.

Raytheon, a sponsor of robotics teams and competitions across the nation, signed on in the fall to give BC High technical and financial support for the new robotics program.

Have you seen Gigi?

The SABER Alert program is issuing an alert for a missing dog, named Gigi, a 3-1/2 year-old spayed female Chinese Crested Powder Puff dog missing since April 13. She was visiting from New York City and was last seen in Cohasset on April14 and may be trying to find her way home.

Gigi has been devocalized and is shy but may take a treat from an open hand. She weighs 7 pounds and is white with gray eyes and ears. Her collar is pink with microchip tag and New York license.

Have you see Gigi? She has been missing since April 13.

The SABER Alert program, Safe Animal: Broadcast Emergency Response, is an alliance between the Animal Control Officers Association of Massachusetts and its consistent network across the Commonwealth, to assist in the search for, the safe recovery of, and the reunion of a dog with his owner.

The combined membership application and class registration document is available on our website, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also contains more detailed information about the club and the classes it offers for the town's children, teens, and adults.

Mother's Day Walk for PEACE

Community members are encouraged to join our "Compassionate Cohasset" walking team on Sunday, May 13 as we participate in Boston's 16th Annual Mother's Day Walk for PEACE. The Mother's Day Walk for PEACE began in Dorchester in 1996 to support families who had lost children to violence. The Walk is the major fundraiser for the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute – a 501 C3 organization committed to ending violence by offering a nationally recognized Peace Education Curriculum, crises management for families, promoting peaceful resolution to prevent retaliatory violence and training for professionals dealing with families impacted by violence.

Participating in the 3.6 mile walk is a powerful and uplifting experience. If you are unable to walk but would like to pledge your financial support, all contributions are appreciated. For more information, please contact Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

Also, Clementina Chery, President and CEO of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute will give the sermon, this Sunday April 29 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. The service begins at 10 a m. and Ms. Chery's sermon is entitled "PEACE through Pain & Prayer".

Please send in all if your info for next week on Tuesday by 5 pm.

SUNDAY AUTHOR TALKS

'Dante Club' author speaks about new novel

MARYLOU LAWRENCE

Literary historical fiction writer Matthew Pearl will speak at Sunday Author Talks at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on May 6, at 4 p.m. Following Pearl's talk, audience members are invited to a wine and cheese reception for further discussion and book signing. Admission is free, but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library or phone the library to serve a spot 383-1348 ext 1.

Nineteenth century technology, rogue science, and Harvard-MIT rivalry anchor the narrative of Matthew Pearl's most recent novel, "The Technologists." While Dante, Poe, and Dickens were the subjects of Pearl's first three books, Boston, in the full thrush of its industrial fervor, is at the center of "The Technologists." As in his other novels, Pearl draws his characters from historical figures of Boston businessmen and students, professors, and administrators at both Harvard and MIT.

In 1868, MIT graduated its inaugural class of 14 students. Poor MIT – mocked by Harvard for its science focus and lower admissions standards, excoriated by the Boston elite for its dehumanizing technological aspirations, and feared by the workers on the street for its brilliant engineering feats that would replace man with the machine – stood alone and friendless on Boylston Street, with long stretches of nothing around it. Back Bay was still in the midst of creation as heavy machinery dumped tons of stone and dirt into its swampland. Fittingly, MIT was one of the first buildings erected on the renovated fen. (History buffs will know that MIT did not move across the river to Cambridge until 1916.)

As the story unfolds, a series of disasters threaten to destroy Boston – fog engulfs the city while incoming ships' compasses go awry causing them to crash into each other, glass in the windows and clocks of the city melts, and then furnaces suddenly blow up – all calamities designed to instill fear of science and technology in the populace.

MIT students bear the brunt of residents' reactions to the terrors while Harvard boys revel in their rival's certain demise. But a small group of tech students take on the challenge to save the city and their school.

Pearl, a Harvard boy himself, says in the afterward of his book, "The disasters that plague Boston in my novel are my creation; however, each one has a basis in real technologies developed at the time (often at MIT), and my research binders are thick with articles about train wrecks, destructive boiler explosions, early divers and submarines and compass-related shipwrecks."

Matthew Pearl is the New York Times bestselling author of "The Dante Club," "The Poe Shadow" and "The Last Dickens" – all 19th century historical novels. He is also editor of the Modern Library editions of works by Dickens, Poe and Dante. His novels have been published in more than 30 languages and 40 countries around the world. He is considered one of Boston's most esteemed 19th century literary historians.

According to library director Jackie Rafferty, "We are so pleased that Matthew Pearl agreed to participate in our AuthorTalk series. To be able to present a fiction writer of such renown is an honor for our library and Cohasset."

While this event is the last of this season's series, Sunday AuthorTalks will resume in October with a new roster of fiction and nonfiction authors. Visit Cohasset library.org for more information.

The 2011-12 Sunday AuthorTalks series has been sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club. A Taste of Wine and Spirits, located in the Stop & Shop Plaza, has generously donated all wines for the reception.

Girls' lax team pitches in

Helps with cleanup at Bassing Beach

Cohasset students from the girls' lacrosse team picked up trash on Bassing Beach on Friday, April 20. Transportation to the beach was supplied by Harbormaster Lori Gibbons. The weather was perfect for the beach patrol, which started across from the Sailing Club with the turnaround at the breakwater at the mouth of the harbor. In a little over an hour, the girls picked up plastic, bottles and cans that washed up over the winter. Isabel McCarthy found a $20 bill in the beach grass, an extra bonus for her labors.

Other volunteers were Kristin Alexander, Mackenzie Axelson, Kyle Burke, Molly Fitzgerald, Taylor Fredrick, Madison Haggerty, Hope Kissick and Maggie Littlejohn.

Cohasset Conservation Trust has organized this clean up event for the past three years to coincide with Earth Day and to help make the students aware of some of the Cohasset properties owned by the Trust that are open for the enjoyment of the public.

Bassing Beach was the original property purchased in 1967. Today, the Trust's holdings comprise more than 100 acres of shoreline, woodland and meadow in Cohasset and Scituate. It holds a Conservation Restriction (CR) on a 32-acre parcel known as the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary, and has contributed to the purchase of more than 100 acres of land (Brass Kettle Conservation Area) to protect Cohasset's drinking water supply.

Visit the website www.cohassetconservationtrust.org for a complete listing of properties, past issues of newsletters and more information about the Trust including how to donate to help maintain the properties.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Every day Earth Day

ERIN DALE

Last week, the nation observed the 42nd annual Earth Day. As we've noted before here on the Green Beat, we believe that every day is an opportunity to live a conscious, healthy and proactive eco-lifestyle. Still, we're happy to recognize Earth Day and are grateful for the spring rain that finally descended upon the region; it certainly made for an even "greener" day!

Cohasset kids recycle shoes

We would like to recognize the Cohasset Middle School sixth-graders for finding a simple, cool way to go green with the Nike Re-Use-A-Shoe program. Students collected old sneakers in donation boxes around the school to send to Nike; the company regularly recycles old footwear, melting down the materials to create school tracks, tennis and basketball courts.

These kids collected around 300 pairs of shoes, said Middle School Health Educator Maureen Duffy. The next step is to box them up and FedEx them to Nike, who will cover the costs of shipping.

Thanks to these Cohasset students, these old shoes will soon become someone's playground! We applaud them for taking the initiative, helping to lower Cohasset's overall carbon footprint.

Now, it's your turn to find little ways to go green around the house. Once again, we've consulted our local panel of eco-experts who run businesses all over the South Shore. This week, we've got five tips for going green that you can utilize right at home.

1. Online resource for eco-paint products

"There are many different ways to be a little more eco-friendly when working on a home improvement project. We thought this week we would tell you about some great eco-friendly products and ideas.

Purdy Professional Painting tools carries a line of eco-friendly products that we like, such as the Eco-Pro brush, which is made of high quality recycled and renewable materials and that includes the packaging it comes in.

We also think a great online resource for eco-friendly products for painting projects is thepaintstore.com. They offer paint pails that are made specifically to be recycled easily and painting trays that are made of 100 percent recycled material. You can also find Purdy's line there as well. It is a great resource to find all types of eco-friendly painting products in one place, and a time saver if you want to make a difference but are too busy to search all of these products out." - James Wolfe, owner, Wolfe Painting Company (Cohasset), www.wolfepaintingco.com

2. Utilize fresh air in the house, year-round

"Use ceiling fans in the summer and winter. By reversing the direction of the blades, warm air is pushed down, helping to keep rooms warm in winter. Installing a few "whisper fans" high in the corner of a few doorways or above your woodstove will help distribute hot air off the ceiling level throughout your home room volume." - Matt Weaver, Green Designee/Realtor with National Association of Realtors, Jack Conway Realtor, www.jackconway.com

3. Non-toxic flowerbeds

"A great way to enhance the beauty of your yard in the spring is to mulch your flowerbeds. Generally, black and red mulches are color-enhanced, which means they have dye in them. One of the biggest problems with dyes or chemicals in the mulch is that it can leech into the ground, surrounding the plants and flowerbeds. Thankfully, there is an all-natural option that is made right in Scituate.

Go Green Landscape Supply makes a dark brown mulch called Dark Organic Mulch that not only looks great, but also feeds your plants. Organic Mulch gives plants a tasty treat and makes your yard look great." - Tim Lopes, owner, Go Green! Landscape Supply (Scituate/Hanover), gogreenlandscapesupply.com

4. Springy centerpieces from recycled bottles

"Spring has sprung! Weathered small bottles can make an easy table dressing. Grouped together on a fancy plate, cake stand, silver platter or tray, you can fill the bottles and jars with spring's leaves and flowers.

Collect your own small bottles of various shapes and sizes over time—mustard jars, perfume bottles, hot sauce bottles, and jelly jars all work well.

Randomly fill some of the containers with a beautiful leaf or flower and place on a serving tray of your choice, packing the jars tightly together. With some jars that are empty, maybe a few can be filled with tea lights at night for a soft Spring centerpiece. I always like to use the Yankee Candle tea lights because they are in clear casings.

Keep the candles at an odd number for a more well designed "random" look. Change up the cuttings from violets, buttercups, tulips, apple blossoms, Queen Anne's lace, ferns and lilacs, or whatever you may have in your yard during the spring and summer months. Be creative with the gifts from your surroundings, and best of all, the cost is $0!" - Donna Morgan, owner/designer, Donna Morgan Interior Design (Cohasset), dmorgandesign@hotmail.com

5. Local flora and fauna

"Always remember to support your local store owners, including your local retail florist. Their flowers may be fresher, they may have stronger attention to detail, and you probably won't have to travel as far, thus saving time, energy, and, of course, gas.

There are also many Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) programs at local farms where you can support a local farm and receive local produce. Sometimes that will also include locally grown flowers. Locally-grown fruits and vegetables also make create items for centerpieces, and they taste good, too!"— Kelly Dolloff, owner/designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio (Marshfield/Boston), www.artisticblossoms.com

Cohasset Field of Honor taking shape

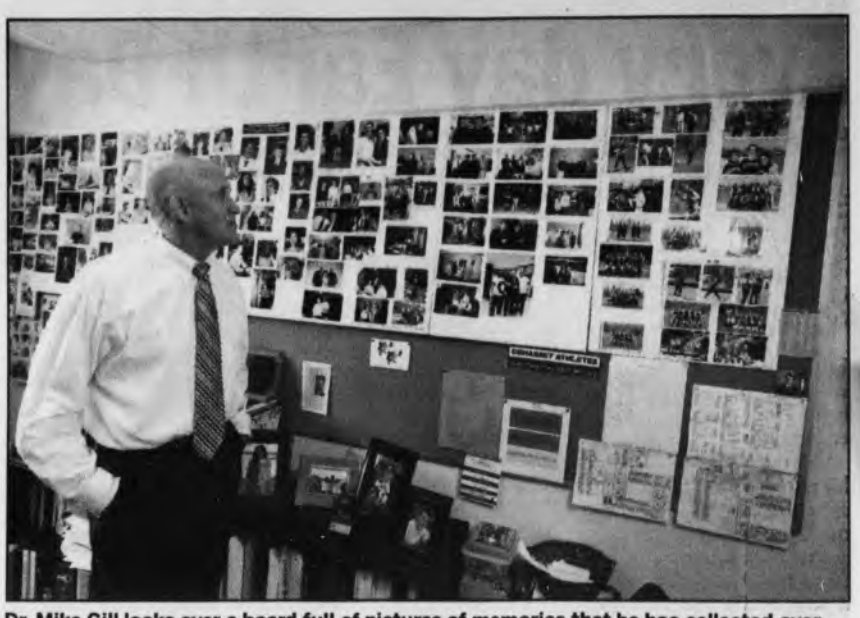
For the sixth straight year, Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118, will host a Field of Honor flag display honoring veterans. In what has become an annual Cohasset tradition volunteers will post hundreds of United States Flags at Veterans Memorial Park on Saturday, May 19, beginning at 9 a.m.

A dedication and wreath laying ceremony scheduled at 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 26, will be a special tribute to those who have defended the nation. World War II veteran, Robert G. Noble, will tell of his wartime experiences while serving in the Infantry and Air Corps including a period when he was held captive in a German prisoner of war camp. As the numbers of surviving World War II veterans decline, Robert G. Nobles' participation at the Dedication Ceremony is especially meaningful.

Within sight of the Cohasset Harbor, the flags will fly on the lawn facing the Veterans Memorial from May 19 through June 4.

For $25, individual flags may be sponsored in honor of family or friends who have served in the military. Sponsored flags can then be kept as a memento of Cohasset's Field of Honor display at the event's close, and will be available for pick up at Veterans' Park on June 4, after 1 p.m.

For more information or to sponsor a flag online, visit www.healingfiled.org/cohasset-ma-2012. Details on becoming an event sponsor and applications to obtain flags displayed at the event can be obtained by calling the Legion at 781-383-9657 or by stopping by at the Squadron at 98 Summer St. anytime weekdays after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after noon.



To become a volunteer and take part in presenting this Field of Honor event, contact Thomas Wigmore. Checks should be made payable to the Sons of the American Legion with a note on the memo line of the check indicating Field of Honor. All proceeds with go to veterans programs of the Sons of the American Legion of Cohasset.

Everyone is invited to sponsor and enjoy the sixth Annual Cohasset Field of Honor.

get to know the culture of the school and the community."

It has also given the educator plenty of time to observe the many changes in the school district, education field, and impact of technological advancements in schools over the scope of three decades, lending him a rather unique perspective.

The collection of photographs on Gill's office wall reflects this passage of time; the principal joked good-naturedly about the full head of hair and mustache he used to sport.

"I came to work here as a young, single guy; now I'm on my way out and am married with two kids in college," said Gill. "Where did the time go? I know it's a cliché.

"Now, I walk the halls I've been walking for 32 years and have students whose parents were students of mine. It's nice to have those connections."

Gill has even saved evidence of his arrival to Cohasset schools in 1980: a yellowed copy of the Cohasset Mariner announcing the hiring of the new Health Education Coordinator. This week, the Mariner sat down with Gill to reflect on the ups and downs of three decades spent working in Cohasset schools.

Teaching Cohasset

Having grown up in Scituate, Gill counts himself as a local. This also made him a Cohasset rival at one point.

"There was kind of a rivalry between certain sports teams in Scituate, Hull, Hingham, Norwell and surrounding communities," Gill admitted. "Growing up in Scituate, we used to stereotype Cohasset; we thought the kids were spoiled."

For Gill, teaching here "proved wrong the stereotype... The most enjoyable revelation [I had] when I came here was how great the kids were.

"Most kids [in Cohasset] come from homes where their parents place a heavy emphasis on education," Gill added. "The kids come ready to learn. They're really nice kids."

Even if the job of an educator comes with other challenges, including financial ones, Gill said, "If you've got good kids to work with, it's a fun job."

While he was a young man when he started as Cohasset's health coordinator in 1980, Gill's first job out straight out of college [he earned his bachelor's from Boston State College] was as a biology teacher at Scituate High, four years after he graduated from there. He went on to earn his Master's from Bridgewater State College, then taught in Canton public schools for nine years. Gill earned his doctorate from Boston University while working in Cohasset.

When asked why he went into education, Gill said that it was always his chosen path.

"I always wanted to teach, coach and work with kids; it's always been my passion. That's the simple answer; that's all there is.

"Ever since high school, I watched my teachers and coaches and wanted to do it," Gill explained, adding that he chose to attend the colleges he did "because they were big teacher schools."

So far Gill said that he is the only teacher in his family, but as his children have grown, it's clear another cliché is coming true in his life: the apple doesn't fall far from the tree.

"My daughter is going to Bridgewater State" to study education, said Gill. "So it looks like we'll have another [teacher] coming up."

Gill has spent the bulk of his career as a teacher, despite the move to school administration 12 years ago. As the health coordinator for grades K-12, Gill taught classes at the Middle-High School and ran programs at both the Deer Hill and Osgood schools. Subjects ranged from child abuse and bully prevention programs to drug/alcohol and HIV/AIDS prevention programs.

His experience as a health educator and program coordinator has served him well as a principal, Gill said.

"Health education deals with students' physical and emotional well-being and social skills development," he explained. "I know the issues these kids today are dealing with... I've always kept up on what the research is telling us about youth risk behaviors, what are kids doing today and how can we support them in the classrooms."

Teaching the health classes also helped Gill get to know the students— nearly each and every one of them.

"I taught a course every student had to take; I've had almost every student here. I run into people all over the place who say, 'I had you back in 1984!' I say, 'I'm sorry!'" Gill laughed.

After 21 years of teaching in Cohasset, Gill transitioned into an administrative role, first becoming the middle-high school's assistant principal in 2004 before taking the helm as interim principal last year.

While he feels that teaching health helped prepared him for the change, Gill said the transition was not always an easy one.

"Once I got into administration, my role changed to a certain degree," he explained. "There's so much more dealing with budgetary, facility issues, faculty conflicts, parent issues" versus when Gill started out his career by "connecting with kids in the classroom; that's the essence of the career, in my view."

This has informed Gill's view of his roles as principal and, previously, assistant principal, he explained.

"I don't ever want to lose sight of the fact that the most important job in the world to me is teaching; it's much more important that of the role of school administrator.

"My role [as principal] is to clear out any barriers that get in the way of optimal learning. Facility issues get in the way, student conflicts, parent or teacher issues — these are the things I feel are important to address to free teachers up to connect with their kids."

For Gill, helping and supporting the students has always been the bottom line; his life's work. When asked if and how his approach to teaching and working with kids has changed over the years to reflect the changing times, Gill smiled.

"People ask me all the time, 'Is it really difficult teaching today's kids? As if today's kids are more challenging.

"Challenges change," said the principal, "but kids are kids."

Never mind the fact that kids now have cell phones, smart phones, computers and even iPads in the classroom. Gill said that while it seems kids these days are communicating more now than students of previous decades, "they're just communicating differently."

It's been an exciting challenge for educators to address the ever-changing world of technology and its impact on the classroom, year the former year's teachings will be reinforced at the present grade level by the classroom teacher.

In Canton, Gill said he dealt with the preventive side of health education. "We introduced programs on alcohol...you've got to reach them at a very young age. Even by middle school drinking becomes a problem. We did some things with nutrition, but not as much as we should have. As the only health teacher in the K-8 system, I was spread pretty thin."

Gill thinks all aspects of health education are important. "But I stress dealing with peer pressure. In Canton I zeroed in on peer pressure...that leads to everything.

"I told many stories to that age (K-8) group. For instance, I told them that Fonzi, on "Happy Days," is super cool and super tough. But he doesn't do drugs or smoke. The morale being that you can be cool and tough without doing drugs or cigarettes." The kids were impressed.

Gill also did a lot of parent-teacher programs in Canton, question and answer type format. And much of his classroom format was based on answering kids' questions. "Kids are like sponges...they pick up information easily. Then they go home and start lecturing their parents. So I tell them: don't yell at your parents if they have a glass of wine during dinner...they love it."

Life sports are something else which Gill stresses as being important to being physically fit later in life. Jogging and swimming fit into this category.

He's in favor of special outside programs being the principal said, adding that he believes the technology improvements are "something we should try and maximize."

"These social issues tie into education," said Gill. In the early days of his career, the educator said, "how to deal with HIV and AIDS in our schools was a big problem for us... For today's kids, that stuff is an afterthought."

The culture is responsible for shaping kids' attitudes on such issues, explained Gill.

"The messages kids receive from the culture and media have changed drastically in 30 years regarding teenage behaviors, sexuality, drugs/alcohol and violence and the way kids communicate through social media."

Gill happened to start his career just before the technology wave of the 1980s, when personal computers first became en vogue and quickly enraptured classrooms everywhere.

"Teachers didn't have computers, PCs, when I started teaching," Gill recalled. "We started getting them here in the late eighties, early nineties." The principal remembers an early workshop on email: "Now I'm inundated with 100 emails a day."

Cohasset schools are now seeking to join in other schools around the state and nation who have implemented tablet and wireless technology in the classroom. Under the guise of Superintendent Barbara Cataldo, who started in Cohasset last summer, the schools have installed wi-fi internet and have iPad carts available for classrooms. Cataldo's vision is even more comprehensive than that, involving an eventual move to a paperless, tablet platform for education. This means even textbooks will be replaced with e-books, said Gill.

While these changes are exciting, he added, the field of education has always been changing.

"There are always new changes and new challenges for schools... In terms of technology, as soon as you become comfortable with something, new stuff is coming out that might enhance the education of our students.

"For years we didn't worry about cell phones," Gill added, explaining that when cell phones first arrived on the market, kids didn't have their own. "Now, we worry if the kids are using them inappropriately. We're trying to figure out how we can use the technology to theirs and our advantage."

The principal said the motto in schools moving forward will likely be "BYOD: Bring your own device, iPad, smart phone, computer... For the most part, we need to embrace new technology and advancements in technology, guide students to use it appropriately, and train teachers to use it appropriately as well."

While Gill has faced many challenges and changes over the years — "I could write a book," he laughed — he admits that he has "never been one that does change well."

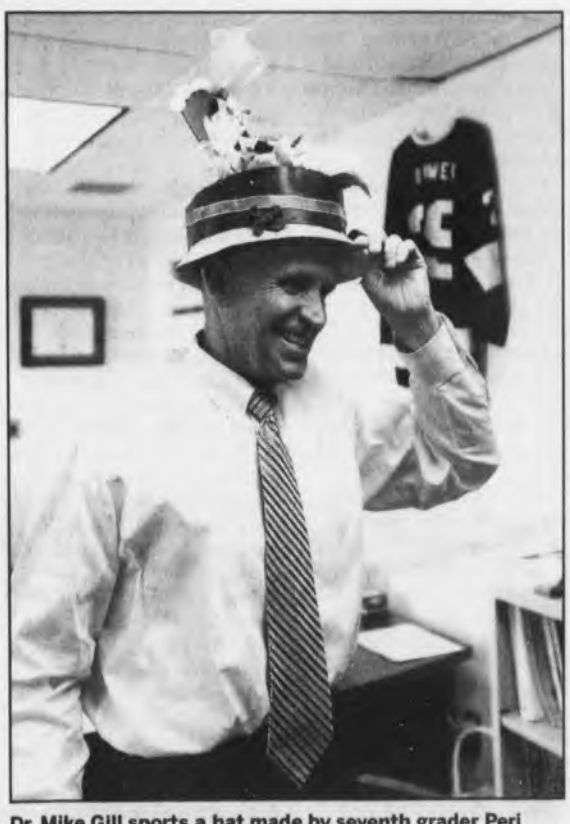
Leaving Cohasset, he said, could perhaps be the biggest challenge of all.

"When I was writing my letter of resignation/retirement, I really felt it — a lump in my throat, in the pit of my stomach," he said. "I'm really doing this... It's not an easy thing."

Showing he is up for the challenge, and maybe a few more changes, however, Gill started the second half of the school year by shaving off his iconic mustache that students over the past 32 years have always identified with him.

As the Mariner prepared to bid Dr. Gill goodbye on the way out of the office, two seventh grade girls, Liliana Astino and Peri Chase, stopped by to present the principal with a special gift they created in art class: a sculpture of Dr. Gill's head, mustache in place, topped with a whimsically decorated hat.

The token cracked the principal up.



"Until Christmas this year, I had the mustache for 37 years," said Gill. "As a Christmas gift to my wife, I shaved it off... It created a bit of a stir in the building."

This gift is likely one of the many memories Gill will carry with him as he prepares to leave Cohasset schools this summer and start his new job at Sacred Heart.

"I know this community so well now," the principal added. "It's a great place to work... I've had so much support from parents in the community. I feel that I owe a great big thank you to this community for allowing me to make a career out of working with their kids."

While Gill explained that he is really only retiring from public schools – "You reach the point in the public retiring system where it just makes sense; it's just the right time to move on" – the educator stressed "how appreciative I am that I had the opportunity to work here 32 years... Now it's time to go, break free, start all over and give it the best shot I can.

"The last day of school," Gill concluded, "will be really hard for me. I love this place."

Dr. Mike Gill sports a hat made by seventh grader Peri Chase during her art class that she made for the papier-mâché likeness of himself.

Making the Most of Summer

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

As we wind down another school year, for many people the best time of year to learn is just beginning. Summer at the University of Massachusetts Boston offers so many possibilities for learning and furthering your career on our beautiful harborside campus, just a few miles from downtown Boston.

Our summer students avail themselves of a broad range of opportunities in subjects across 80 fields of study at our world-class research institution, plus innovative new courses and one-of-a-kind options to travel and explore near and far. It's easy to see why so many students choose to spend their summers with Boston's public research university.

We offer short-term programs, on-campus and online choices, as well as international cultural experiences, taught by faculty from our eight colleges. You can choose to boost your math skills, or study a foreign language—from Arabic to Japanese—or tour the theatre scene in Dublin, Ireland.

If you're a graduate student, you might opt to enroll in a critical and creative thinking course. This intensive course meets four days per week for three consecutive weeks, giving you a chance to put what you learn into practice.

Many students take advantage of the New England summer weather by heading outdoors for field study. In a coastal ecology course on Nantucket, you'll learn about the island's history, culture, and geologic background, in addition to aspects of biology from microscopic to larger organisms.

Or if you want to get your hands dirty, think about joining an archaeological dig: one on the estate of former Massachusetts Governor Christopher Gore in Waltham, another at the field school in historical archaeology at Hassanamesit Woods in Grafton, and a special dig in Central America, where students will travel to Belize to explore Mayan ruins.

Combining tradition with innovation, we are proud to introduce a new discipline called biomimicry, which studies nature's best ideas, then imitates these designs and processes to solve human problems. UMass Boston's first biomimicry workshop will take place on Nantucket this summer.

And if you want to go farther afield, we encourage you to pack your bags and experience different worlds and cultures. Through University College, students can join the Center for Rebuilding Sustainable Communities after Disaster on a trip to Chengdu, China. Hosted by Sichuan University, this two-week intensive learning experience will explore dimensions of post-disaster reconstruction based on Chinese models.

Closer to home, more than 200 of the 680 summer courses we offer will be taught online, making undergraduate and graduate education accessible anytime and anyplace.

These are just some of the many options you can take advantage of this summer at UMass Boston. Whether you're looking for college credit, skills enhancement, or personal enrichment, summer study with us is a varied and rich experience.

To learn more about enrolling in our summer offerings, please call 617.287.6000 or visit us online at summer.umb.edu.

OUR VIEW

What is your opinion?

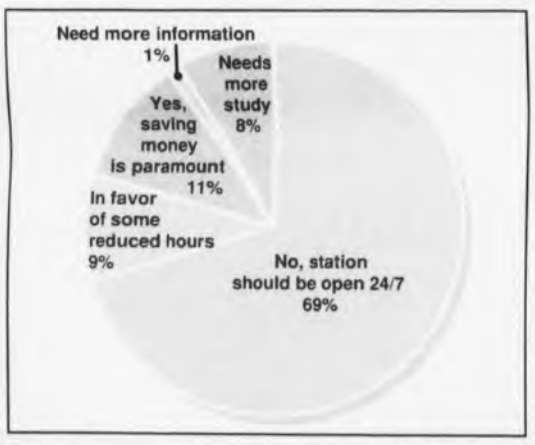
Over the past week, there has been an interesting debate in the "blog-o-sphere" at www.wickedlocalcohasset.com on whether the police station should "go dark" much of the time.

We think this potential policy/cultural shift for the town in terms of the way it staffs its police station is a big issue. Therefore, once again, we are devoting some newsprint to the topic.

This debate is not about whether the South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center, dubbed SSRECC, is a good thing. The decision to ink the inter-municipal agreement that regionalized Cohasset dispatch with Hingham, Hull and Norwell was made back in December 2009 by the Board of Selectmen.

However, what was not, in our view, fully aired – was how the Cohasset Police Station would be manned once dispatch moved to Hingham. Currently, you can go to our police station 24/7, walk in and find a dispatcher there. What is on the table is having a "dark," "closed," "locked" station from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. Monday to Friday and 24/7 on the weekends.

We want to make it clear that police officers would still be on duty during those "dark" hours – but there would be no guarantee that a person would be at the station, as there is now.



At that December 2009 meeting, then chairman, Selectman Paul Carlson, made it clear that signing the SSRECC agreement triggered the release of funds to build the center – but there had never been the intention to close the station and that had not been decided (according to the meeting minutes).

If these plans proceed, Cohasset would be the only town in the SSRECC to "darken" it station.

The SSRECC is at Hingham Town Hall – just upstairs from the Hingham Police Station, which is still manned, at the front desk, "after hours" by a uniformed officer, either a lieutenant or sergeant.

No one is asking to return to the days of the desk sergeant here in Cohasset – but unmanning the station is a big step that needs further study.

Please weigh in on our online poll, which has been up for the past week. Please note that results are not scientific. The same person could vote from different computers. However, that opportunity is available to anyone so the results provide a window, we think, into public opinion.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Darkening station is ill-advised move

To institute a dysfunctionally darkened police, station every weekday, and all weekends, as discussed in the April 20 Cohasset Mariner, makes me wonder as to its advantages.

The primary goal of a police force has to be public safety. Should there be nobody at the station 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. (16 hours) each week day, plus every weekend, this results:

Monday to Thursday, 4 p.m. to 8 a.m., 16 hour times four days equals 64 hours; Friday, 4 p.m. to midnight, 8 hours; Saturday, 24 hours; Sunday, 24 hours; Monday, midnight to 8 a.m., 8 hours.

It occurs to me we are giving up too much local safety coverage to the regionalization project, however late in that game it seems to be.

The Chief of Police, Mr. Mark DeLuca, "hopes" that public safety would continue to be a top priority. The Chief also discloses that significant expense ($100,000) could be necessary to secure adequately the darkened facility – as well as possible additions of part-time personnel options.

The Chief may "hope" so but our citizenry deserves more safety assurance than this gentleman's wish. Daily newspapers and television these days gorge our eyes and ears with tales of crime in the New England villages as well as its cities We have been fortunate in Cohasset with the relatively minimal seriousness of such problems.

It would appear more to our advantage to continue the splendid coverage that our capable police force provides us with its current stature and strength, despite a possibly less expensive regionalization proposal.

Edward F. Woods, 231 Jerusalem Road

Don't gamble with public safety

In my close to 12 years as a Town Manager/Town Administrator I have never seen a more ill conceived initiative than the present plan to close the station at night for budget purposes. This is a prime example of penny wise/pound foolish budgeting. While it is paramount to rebuild the town's reserves, it is foolhardy to place all of the new growth revenue in stabilization at the expense of basic public safety.

While the South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center (SSRECC) was initially sold to the towns as a means of decreasing costs, most public safety professionals were skeptical about that but enthusiastic about the improved capabilities particularly involving medical emergencies that the center would bring. As both as municipal manager and ex prosecutor I can say there is no substitute for no having a police station open around the clock.

The suggestion to close the station is made by officials that either know little about public safety or by those who truly don't understand the risks our first responders face. Cohasset is a small town but crime unfortunately happens everywhere. Last week, a small town buried its Police Chief and I still recall my friend Chief Bobby Morel who was killed in the line of duty in Paxton— a small town outside Worcester.

From my albeit short tenure as Town Manager, I can tell you that Cohasset Police union stand ready to sit down and talk on any issue. However, if negotiations are going to prove successful, those on the other side of the bargaining table need to respect the tough job, risks and dangers that police officers and fireman face.

This starts by respecting the opinions and recommendations of our police professionals like Chief Mark Deluca, Deputy Chief Bill Quigley and Union President Pat Riordan. If that is not enough— how about Chief Wayne Sampson Executive Director of the Mass Chiefs Association who feels a study will help illustrate the issues, which will be encountered by a "dark station." The Mass Chiefs of Police Association has offered to do this study and expedite so we would have it before Town Meeting.

I urge all citizens to contact the Chairman of the Board Ted Carr to keep the station open. To do otherwise is gambling with public safety with a possible cost to first responders and victims alike to high to even contemplate.

Mike Coughlin, 122 Timber View Lane

Cleanup day was big success

In recent years more and more resident families have been enjoying Rocky Beach at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue. Several of these families and friends joined together on Saturday to scour the stones and shells of winter trash and debris. This was part of the annual clean-up day celebrating Earth Day 2012. Other areas along Straits Pond, the Weir River, and the Weir River Estuary were visited by Cohasset, Hull, and Hingham residents carrying black trash bags to contain the build up of shoreline and roadside litter they collected.

Our tally sheets of participants list almost 50 workers! More than a third of these stayed on for the cookout sponsored by The Straits Pond Watershed Association with ice cream donated by Nona's of Hingham. Thanks also go to the Public Works Departments of Cohasset, Hull, and Hingham who provided trucks and dumpsters for the collection of debris. Joint publicity efforts of the Weir River Watershed Association and Straits Pond Watershed Association plus the Cohasset DPW electronic signboard near the ocean alerted all these helpers of a fine way to acknowledge our partnership with this planet, Earth.

We hope all in our broader community will maintain throughout the year what was accomplished on this one day.

Dick Avery, Straits Pond Watershed Association

First amendment and CPC funding

The following is an excerpt of the letter Russell Bonetti, who is chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, sent to the Board of Selectmen. Mr. Bonetti included a summary of cases cited by Americans United. The complete text of his letter is available at the selectmen's office and online at: www.wickedlocalcohasset.com The issue surrounds a proposed CPC grant to First Parish Church to restore windows at the historic meetinghouse.

I would like to comment on some of the issues surrounding the Community Preservation Committee's recent recommendation for the May 12, 2012 Town Meeting.

First, I would like to point out that Town Meeting has the final say on this issue. The Town operates under a Town Meeting charter. All the CPC is looking for is a simple up or down vote.

Regarding the claims made by the group Americans United, I would like to offer the following.

I have been researching — the best that I can as a non-lawyer — the cases that are cited in their letter are in my opinion, for the most part irrelevant to the issue at hand.

Here is the text of the First Amendment.

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

The CPC, under the Community Preservation Act is seeking to fund the restoration of an historic asset, we are not establishing, nor are we prohibiting anyone from practicing, or not practicing a religion.

HEALTH NOTES

Sidewalks should be on the agenda

STEVE BOBO

A squirrelly spring such as we're having this year, recalls all the possible types of health related opportunities for contracting illnesses, maladies, infestations and bad luck happenings – weather related. But, by far more important, are current statistics treating the increase in avoirdupois of our citizens. The two are probably not related.

A major cause for health related problems. The Board of Health has, from time to time, made attempts to stamp out obesity by proposing walking and exercising and, in the process, we've learned much. We still aren't certain which is harder; walking or talking about it. It seems that how much one exercises is a personal thing and everyone weighs in with his opinion. It's not easy to tell someone he should change his habits.

But the Board is still committed to the effort to inject more exercise into the activity patterns of the citizens of Cohasset. It seems that merely telling everybody to walk more isn't doing it. Scituate used to have a hyperactive, committed walking wonk, who said that towns have stopped being designed to facilitate walking. For example, most towns have a sidewalk bylaw that new subdivisions, residential, commercial and industrial, are required to put in sidewalks. In general, such requirements are removed by variance during the negotiations with the town for approval.

One only has to look at the residential development along 3A; Shaw's or Stop and Shop Plazas or the Hingham Lumber site – and of course, the new Avalon site. A good guess is that in many cases sidewalks were waived because the negotiator for site management, having been told to get rid of sidewalks because they add too much to the cost of the project, came to the ZBA and said, "With all these roads and parking lots, sidewalks won't be necessary; nobody ever walks anywhere anymore." Hence, the Board of Health may soon discuss proposing a walking initiative to town planners at one of their next meetings.

Consider Revitalizing a Sidewalk Committee with members interested in walking, to include Selectmen's representative, Community Center representative, DPW, and certainly, the new Senior Center activists who would be interested in promoting walking activities and securing grants to improve walkability in Town.

Letter to Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals to:

- Request that variances requesting elimination of sidewalks be very carefully reviewed.
- Establish guidelines for sidewalk development which would enhance exercise and activity.
- Board should implement a walking/biking initiative by adopting guidelines provided by the Sidewalk Committee.
- New subdivisions over a certain size should provide plans for recreational walking and bike paths.
- Develop a sidewalk BMP (Best Management Practice) for the town. The Sidewalk Committee should research BMP's for sidewalks for the entire town and select an appropriate design as the basis the town's sidewalks. The BMP should embody the following attributes:

Safety Considerations: Access by walkers should be available to all town amenities and services, (banking, shopping, recreation, sports, etc.) Sidewalks should be environmentally sound (surface water recharge, snow removal, etc.) Walk- and bikeways should be higher priority within town relative to automobile access. Possibly consider vehicle-free areas; speed risers at high volume pedestrian intersections). Participate and work with members of the Rails with Trails Initiatives in other Towns such as Scituate and Hingham support MBTA path. Seek approval at Town Meeting for plans to make the Town more walkable conduct discussions with colleagues on other volunteer boards: Zoning Board of Appeals, Elder Affairs, Conservation, Sewer and possibly others to find which concur: communication between boards is sometimes sadly lacking. Yes, we say hello at public functions, or church, but we have no idea, which are the hot button issues with each board until something appears in the local press. Hence, the summary of the BoH meetings in this column so that at least our decisions will be more broadly available to those who are interested.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Putting on the 'green'

Working on an organic farm draws me closer to understanding where food comes from and trying to teach people about what plants absorb and retain during their life cycle.

JON BELBER

A long soaking rain was a nice tribute for Earth Day, after the glorious, warm, too dry, spring. Finally some April showers to help the garlic, asparagus, peas, shrubs, grass and trees. The earth, now recognized in its 40th year, is receiving its annual April cheer. The new turbine in Scituate was fêted, volunteers from South Shore towns grab green bags to pick up trash and many people are encouraged to plant a tree or make some "green" choices, such as recycling more, driving less and taking a cloth bag into the grocery store instead of using a plastic bag.

It is a good time of year to be working at an organic farm, growing and teaching about sustainable agriculture and responsible stewardship of the land. (It is great all year, too.)

However, this focus on the earth and the celebration of Earth Day every April 22nd, often seems short-lived and inconsistent. This is also the time of year that the little yellow flags appear on lawns. The flags indicate that a "lawn doctor" has visited or that a first step of four has been applied to a lawn. The application of synthetic fertilizers, pre-emergent weed killers and chemicals are meant to encourage green grass and kill weeds such as dandelions. It is quite hard to see this fertilizer and even harder to notice when the fertilizer rushes off a lawn and into the water system, causing danger to all of us who use and consume drinking water. Even the little yellow flags are taken away, shortly after the application. The Scituate town common, a place where there are many wonderful, kind tributes and memorials to men and women who have bravely served our country for hundreds of years and where many devoted town employees and volunteers have selected flowers, plants and bushes, is subject to chemicals on the lawn. Several years ago, the town of Scituate stopped spraying these chemicals at elementary schools, where organic farm gardens grow. Perhaps the town saved some money, while the grassy areas gained some dandelions and the kids could run about, without worrying what was beneath their feet and potentially in their school water fountains.

Many golf courses, farms, home gardens and certainly people's lawns are not my business and I have no right to tell people how to mow the recently dusty grass, care for their space or work to follow the suggestions of Scott's, Lowe's and Miracle-Gro, to name a few, to work towards a more weed free yard. But I do think about the water I drink. I do wonder about the potential chemicals on non-organic foods that my family may consume. And I am all too aware of the rise in cancer cases across the country. And working on an organic farm draws me closer to understanding where food comes from and trying to teach people about what plants absorb and retain during their life cycle.

This 40-year anniversary of Earth Day also coincides with the 50-year anniversary of Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring," an important book that examines the danger of chemicals in our daily life.

But, Earth Day is a happy time of year. The birds sing each to each. The apple blossoms are out. Certain trees are in colorful bloom. And the green of spring in New England is a delight to see, even after an all too mild winter. So, grab that green bag and "ship shape" the town green. I will just continue thinking about, and sharing, all the consequences of our actions, the affect on our environment and how it is not easy being green.

LIBRARY CORNER

Searching for your roots, May 3

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Call 781-383-1348 to register or for more information or visit the website at www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Genealogy Myths & Legends – Professional genealogist Mike Brophy will present a lecture explaining and debunking some of the popular fiction about genealogy and family history at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 3. From "Our Name was Changed at Ellis Island" to "I am descended from an Indian," be prepared for an end to some old fairy tales. Free. All are welcome. Sponsored by a grant from the Social Service League of Cohasset.

Art Exhibit – "Transitions," an exhibit of recent monotypes by South Shore Art Center Gallery artist Michele Meister, will be on view through April 30 at the library. Meister's work is in the permanent collection of the Boston Public Library Print Room and was featured in the Sandra Bullock movie "The Proposal."

Art Exhibit – The South Shore Art Center presents a photography exhibit by Murton Sudalter May 1 through June 30. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesday and Friday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m, and Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Movie Matinee at the Library – See a free daytime movie at the library. This month's feature is the 1958 film "A Night To Remember" starring Kenneth More and Ronald Allen on Friday, May 4, at 11a.m. Free admission and light refreshments served courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Sunday Author Talks – The final "Sunday Author Talks" program will take place at 4 p.m. Sunday, May 6. Matthew Pearl, author of "The Dante Club and The Poe Shadow," will talk about his new book "The Technologists". Seating is limited; reserve your free ticket by calling or visiting the library, Buttonwood Books, or the Cohasset Historical Society. A wine and cheese reception and book signing will follow. Sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset.

Basic Computer Skills Workshop – If you are new to computers, this hands-on workshop is for you. At 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, May 9, Reference Librarian Gayle Walsh will help you learn the parts of a computer, practice controlling the mouse, and understand the basics of computer use. Computers provided or bring your own laptop computer. Limited to six people. Novices only. Free.

Ongoing – Knitting Group meets every Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the Historical Room. Free. All are welcome.

FOR CHILDREN

Pirate Magic Show – Join Captain Robbie Bones at 3 p.m., on Sunday, April 29, for magic, mayhem and more. For more information about the program go to http://awesomerobb.com/index.html. Tickets are not necessary.

FOR THE RECORD

Drawing from past experience

Back in the day, business was booming, but it took forever to put out a newspaper.

GREGORY MATHIS

Much has been made about what the future has in store for community journalism, and rightfully so. Mobile technology is evolving fast and furious as news organizations continue to scramble to catch up and keep up to remain relevant.

Our parent company — GateHouse Media — has developed mobile applications for iPhone, Android and BlackBerry to deliver our Wicked Local content to your Smartphone. Like other media companies, we're toiling in tablet applications and we've had our share of discussions about whether we should be charging for online content, or at least some of it. What would you be willing to pay for? Let's hold that thought. I'll save that question and some possible answers for a column at a later date.

To fully embrace the future or help us better understand the present, one must look to the past to appreciate where we've been, where we are and where we could potentially be going.

I got my start in weekly newspapers in the mid-1980s. Back in the day, business was booming, but it took forever to put out a newspaper.

For starters, our photographers shot on film — black and white film — that needed to go through a lengthy process involving all kinds of chemicals. Editors marked up contact sheets and sent their selections back into the darkroom for prints to be made from negatives, usually a day or more ahead of the editorial deadline schedule.

We did have computers to compose stories, but that was about all they did. There was no email or World Wide Web. It was just a machine that was a slight upgrade from a typewriter. Once the stories were completed, they were sent to a machine that spit out the copy in a one-column format on photographic quality paper. That paper was sent to the paste-up/composition department, where wax machines and X-Acto blades were used to slice and dice and paste the copy onto boards designed with column grids. Most times the paragraphs were pasted in order, but sometimes they weren't. Photos were cropped, waxed and pasted into the appropriate spot on the page.

Each part of the newspaper production process described above took time, lots of time. The editorial part of the equation got started well in advance of when the completed product made its way on the press. If the weekly paper hit the newsstand on Thursday, the whole process needed to be wrapped up by midday Tuesday. That's a lot of time for news to happen.

Today, modern technology allows us to work on breaking stories, complete with digital photographs, right up until the page goes on the press. And unlike the old days, we're able to cover stories as they break and develop on Wicked Local.

All those experiences from the past certainly make me appreciate the present and not fear the future.

As much as we sometimes long for the good old days, it's hard to imagine putting out newspapers without the benefit of the technology we have today. And if those past experiences are any indication of what's to come in the future, I'm sure we'll be looking back at 2012 and wondering how the heck we ever did our jobs without the benefit of all the wonderful technology that still awaits us.

BRIEFLY

Yard sale donations needed

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will host its annual yard sale from 8 a.m. to noon, on Friday, May 4, and Saturday, May 5, at the home of Donna McGee, 23 Hill St., Cohasset.

Proceeds from this yard sale, held each year for the past 10 years, will go to fund the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship. This scholarship is awarded to a civic-minded, Cohasset graduating senior in good academic standing. Donations are depended on to make this scholarship fundraiser a success.

So, while doing spring cleaning check tool sheds, closets, jewelry boxes, bookshelves, kitchen cabinets as well as children's toy boxes and sports lockers for re-usable items in good condition. Like-new designer clothes would be appreciated. Electronic items are generally not good for resale with some exceptions. Donations of small, household furniture and children's furnishings: car seats, strollers, baby carriers, etc. will gladly be accepted.

Call McGee at 383-9114 to request a pick up, or leave items on porch at 23 Hill St., Cohasset.

RETREAT DAY APRIL 28 FOR

Parkinson's Disease and movement disorders

A retreat for people effected by Parkinson's Disease, Multiple Sclerosis, Dystonia, Tremor and other movement disorders will be held Saturday, April 28 at Glastonbury Abbey from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Cost is $60. Lunch included.

"Moving in the Spirit, A Day of Health and Hope" will feature unique interfaith worship, large and small group discussion, chair massage, a session on flexibility and fitness, therapeutic dance and gentle chair massage.

The retreat is offered by the Spirited Movement Foundation, a Cohasset-based nonprofit dedicated to serving people with movement disorders. The program is made possible with a grant from the American Parkinson Disease Association, Mass. Chapter.

Beck told the Advisory Board that all of the residents that are required to hook up have received notifications from the Board of Health. They are entitled to a public hearing and may contact the board's office to arrange one. These residents must pay an application fee of $1,000 to the sewer department by July 1; after the deadline, the fee goes up to $5,000.

If residents ignore the requirement beyond the deadline, the Board of Health will also take action. The penalty fee for non-compliance is $100 per day.

While the affected residents have gotten letters on the matter, officials have stressed the issue in public meetings.

"It's useful to let the general population know that more severe measures are being taken," selectman Paul Carlson said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

"If you don't want to get fined, stay on top of it," selectman Diane Kennedy added.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski met with a representative from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) earlier this month to discuss the state requirements. Milanoski reiterated to the selectmen, "It's categorical: Everyone [in Little Harbor] must connect to the sewer district... The town is responsible for any fines the DEP levies against the community."

The Board of Health and Sewer Commission have been working with residents to complete the connections; the state is making sure that residents are in compliance by at least taking steps to hook up to sewer: "Their application is in, [the work is] in progress and the person is working toward getting it done," said Milanoski.

"They have to show they have the schedule to do it and have a contractor," Advisory chairman Peter Pescatore explained.

While the $1,000 application fee may prevent some from filing their applications, the Board of Health has explained the septic repair/sewer hookup loan program that's available to residents. The Old Colony Planning Council has $3 million available to loan out to residents in need of assistance to make the sewer connection.

"The Old Colony Planning Council has received 68 loan applications, four to five for septic, the remainder for sewer," Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman wrote in an email. "The loans made have ranged from $2,730 to $35,237. So far, a total of $542,675 has been appropriated of the $3 million available. So far, from what I have heard, people are very pleased with how the loan program works."

Chapman added that the feedback on the OCPC and their assistance has been positive from residents who have taken advantage of the loan program.

What about waivers?

Questions were raised during Monday night's Advisory meeting on whether homeowners can apply for waivers. Milanoski told the board that per his meeting with the DEP, "There are no waivers; everyone must be connected."

Beck added, "There's money available... There's no excuse for not hooking up."

Chapman expanded on this subject in an email, explaining that some homes have applied for waivers.

"Twelve properties were granted waivers for the requirement of Title V as a condition of transfer of property with the agreement that they would hook up to the sewer in 90 days of completion of the sewer availability," Chapman wrote. "Five properties remain not in compliance and were ordered by the Board of Health to connect on Jan. 19, 2012. The Board of Health has to engage the town's attorneys to pursue these property owners... We had several people request public hearings when we issued orders for hook ups in January... We did not grant anyone a waiver, as there was no legal basis for the waiver according to the state rules. Costs of septic systems people have already spent are not considered in the state's rules. There are several properties that are in legal limbo due to the refusal of one property owner to give access over his property for their hook ups."

Get connected

The town of Cohasset, under the Second Amended Final Judgment, requires that all homes in the Little Harbor Watershed must be connected to the municipal sewer by July 1, 2012.

If this deadline is not met, the state will levy fines on the town.

Homeowners who have been contacted by the Cohasset Board of Health regarding this matter have the right to a hearing; requests for hearings must be made in writing and received by the Board of Health within seven days of receiving the board's official order to connect.

The Cohasset Board of Health is located on 41 Highland Avenue and can be reached at 781-383-4116 or at boh@townofcohasset.org.

Chapman added that Town Counsel will likely need to weigh in; the Board of Health's health inspector Tara Tradd confirmed that these five homes have gone before Town Counsel and are awaiting response.

Tradd also wrote in an email that the Board of Health has the town manager's go-ahead to take legal action against those inside the district who do not meet the July 1 deadline; the board will be provided with a legal budget to do so.

However, "the homes with access issues may be resolved shortly with the Sewer Commission," Tradd said.

Selectman Fred Koed noted toward the close of the discussion Tuesday night, "DEP is not budging; we've got to get on the ball."

The Board of Health was scheduled to meet on Thursday, April 26, along with the town manager and sewer commissioners to further discuss the sewer connection program and enforcement. Look for an update in next week's edition of the Mariner.

NEWS UPDATE

Consolidating water, sewer

Two town meeting articles propose operation changes

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town Meeting could vote for big changes in Cohasset water and sewer.

Last week, the Mariner reported on the citizens' petition that has been circulated by resident and former selectman Karen Quigley, which will be voted on during the May 12 Town Meeting.

This initiative calls for hiring a full-time superintendent to oversee the water and sewer plants, whether the operations are run by a contractor or by the town; it also calls for the consolidation of the water and sewer commissions into a single five-member advisory board (currently, both commissions are made up of three elected members).

The citizens' petition is based on recommendations made by an audit performed in 2010 by the firm Melanson and Heath, Quigley explained. The full-time supervisor the petition proposes would be paid for from funds currently expended on consulting engineering services. The petition also seeks to add three additional town employees: an assistant public works supervisor (which would be filled and funded by the present administrative assistant position in the sewer commission) and two clerical positions that currently exist in the water department.

The petition also asks for the water and sewer enterprise funds to be managed by the town's finance director and town manager.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski is also presenting a warrant article for Town Meeting that is calling for similar measures as the citizens' petition. This article, however, asks for both the water and sewer departments to spend $10,000 each from their enterprise funds to fund a feasibility study that will determine the best way to a) consolidate the boards and decide if the commissioners will then be elected or appointed and b) seek to hire a full-time superintendent to manage both operations, and whether or not operations should be taken in-house.

Quigley presented her petition to the Advisory Committee during their Thursday, April 12 meeting. Representatives from both the water and sewer commissions who both attended the meeting then asked Advisory if they could present their viewpoints before Advisory voted whether or not to support the petition; water commission chairman Peter DeCaprio and sewer commission clerk John Beck made their cases during the Monday, April 23 meeting.

Water and sewer: Partially in favor

On the one hand, said DeCaprio, he is in support of the citizens' petition. DeCaprio said that he believes the boards should be combined; this would allow two members to meet in a subcommittee and discuss official business, whereas if two commissioners were to do so now, they would have a quorum and would have to post a public meeting.

On the other hand, the water commission chairman said that he does not believe that what the citizens' petition is asking for is in the best interest of the Town.

Beck reported that the sewer commission took a vote on the petition during their April 18 meeting and are in unanimous agreement: they do not support the citizens' petition.

The sewer commissioner explained how the petition is based off of the recommendations from the 2010 audit, but that the financial problems discovered by that audit have since been resolved. Several of the audit's recommendations have since been implemented, Beck explained, including "developing new software and straightening up the mess in the finance/accounting department." The sewer commissioner noted that the town has "made a lot of progress" in the past few years, praising Finance Director Mary Gallagher for "doing a bang-up job." These issues, said Beck, "have been corrected; in the water department, it's no longer an issue."

Beck added that he believes the town already has a "successful, hardworking commission in place... where is the problem? What are we trying to solve?" He called the petition an "untimely, unnecessary solution to a non-problem, frankly."

The sewer commissioner also opined that taking operations in-house, as the petition ultimately suggests, could end up costing the town more money. He explained that when the sewer commission was going out to bid for a new contractor for the sewer plant, they learned that taking operations in-house would cost $3,000 to $5,000 more than hiring a contract operator.

Another issue, Beck explained, is that even if the town managed to hire a full-time supervisor to oversee both water and sewer, the town likely would not save much money because engineering consulting services would still need to be outsourced from time to time.

"A individual burdened with doing all the engineering... can't do it. We would inevitably have to go out and hire engineering consultant services; we're not going to be replacing consulting engineering in either water or sewer."

Beck added that hiring such a supervisor would be expensive and could cost as much as $150,000 in annual salary plus employee benefits. "I don't think you could find somebody to do the job because that person does not exist."

The other piece of the petition – replacing the elected water/sewer commissioners with an appointed five-member advisory board – "is a mistake for a couple reasons," according to Beck. These commissioners would be "removed from the day to day operations of the plants. Their advice would be stale and not worth much."

While Beck said he agreed, along with DeCaprio, that a five-member board would have its advantages, such as meeting in two-person subcommittees without violating Open Meeting Law, he still prefers the commissions, whether combined or not, continue to consist of members elected by the public.

Appointed commissioners, added Beck, would miss the "important element of accountability to the people that elect [them]... It's an important element we don't want to lose in Cohasset."

Beck also said that while a consolidated board might seem like a good idea, he feels that the water and sewer commissions have "more differences than similarities." DeCaprio later added that after considering Beck's comments, he too agreed that the commissions are too different to combine.

The water commission chairman also commented on points Quigley made during her presentation to Advisory, including one on how nearly 100 towns in Mass. have a full-time public works supervisor. DeCaprio said that a town of Cohasset's size has "no business taking [operations] in-house; if we do, we'll be blowing up the budget.

"My whole problem with the citizens' petition is that it solves the wrong problem," said DeCaprio, adding that he believes the commissions should stick to their current processes and "give it a chance to actually work."

The water commission chairman also warned that if a full-time supervisor is hired, "Open meetings and minutes go away."

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer, who was in the audience, agreed with Beck's comments that an elected board is more accountable. "Being an elected official carries with it a fiduciary role, and it's not a small one."

Advisory chairman Peter Pescatore said his only question for a supervisor of both the water and sewer departments would be whether or not the town plants are in compliance with state standards.

Controlling the water company

Resident Agnes McCann, also in the audience, asked the water commissioners present (DeCaprio and commissioner Leonora Jenkins) about public perception of the water company, explaining why residents are concerned about water operations in town.

"There's a lot of fear generally because of nationwide and worldwide [instances] of water being hijacked and privatized."

Seeking to allay concerns, DeCaprio said that the water department, contrary to widespread public belief, cannot sell the water company; at least "not until our bond debt is paid in total," which would not be for another 20 years.

Similar article on the table

The warrant article proposed by Milanoski is calling for an operational restructuring plan for water and sewer that is similar, at first glance, to the citizens' petition.

This article asks Town Meeting to approve $20,000 from the water and sewer enterprise funds ($10,000 each) to allow the town manager and Board of Selectmen to develop a restructuring plan for water and sewer governance, Milanoski explained.

When the Advisory committee asked how this differs from the citizens' petition, Milanoski said that while this article considers the merits of consolidating the commissions – while keeping separate enterprise funds – the approved money would fund a management plan that would not be presented to the town until next year's annual Town Meeting. "Then we'll look at bringing in one provider for water and sewer," said Milanoski.

Pescatore mentioned that the commissioners might not fully support this article, either, to which Milanoski responded, "The pendulum swings back and forth" on the issue. The town manager said that while the commission could still consist of elected members, he, as joint manager of water and sewer, would like to manage "one board with one provider."

Pescatore added, "From a general management standpoint, the basic service [of both water and sewer] is pumps and pressure... I think the town would benefit greatly by a provider that did both; the service level could be greater."

The advisory board cautioned on making sure the voters at Town Meeting understand the distinctions between the citizens' petition and this article, noting that having both on the warrant article to be voted on one after the other will be "awkward."

Milanoski said that this article "is the vehicle" to explore the legalities of restructuring the two departments. "That's what's missing [from the citizens' petition," the town manager said, "the process."

In a phone call to the Mariner, Milanoski elaborated further on what he is proposing (see sidebar). First of all, he feels that the citizens' petition is not quite ready for prime time at this year's Town Meeting.

"You do not present something to Town Meeting that does not have all the answers," Milanoski said, adding that the petition would seeks to amend the town's water, sewer and Town Manager acts, add additional staffing without knowing where all of the funding will come from, and would require "80 to 120 hours of legal work to fully vet those items."

The petition, according to the town manager, "makes conclusions with no details." Milanoski is proposing to explore those details comprehensively over the next year. This initiative to develop a new structure for water and sewer might not be done as a warrant article, so this matter might not actually appear before Town Meeting in two weeks.

"I'm still debating whether to do this as an article, an act of the Town Manager as the joint manager of water and sewer or through the Governance Committee— those are the three routes I could pursue," said Milanoski. The initiative would take place over the next six to nine months, he explained, so that an article could be prepared for next year's Town Meeting that will "answer all the questions, have all the details there, the legal review, and can definitively tell Town Meeting how this is going to work, what they're voting to send the state legislatures... It takes the ambiguity out of what has been proposed [by the citizens' petition]."

The selectmen have yet to vote on the petition because its proponents have not yet come before them. Milanoski and Quigley have gone back and forth about a meeting time; selectmen chair Ted Carr said that he would be willing to schedule a special meeting to review the petition, but Quigley responded that she would like Town Counsel to opine on the petition.

Quigley said in a phone call Thursday morning that she wanted to meet with the selectmen but had prior commitments. She is scheduled to appear before the Capital Budget Committee.

Quigley added that she has not yet heard all of the details of Milanoski's proposal, but that even if the articles are similar at Town Meeting, she has no plans to pull her petition.

"If the board of selectmen or town manager came forward with an article that achieved what the citizens' petition wants to achieve, not authorizing [a plan] down the road and puts something in place, I wouldn't withdraw it," Quigley explained.

"The citizens' petition calls to set things in motion so that they will happen," although the changes to water and sewer would not happen right away, said Quigley. If Milanoski's plan is enacted, Quigley fears "we'll waste a year. Realistically, it's going to take a year to get this to happen. If Town Meeting approves the citizens' petition, two things have to happen: Town Counsel has to review all the laws, determine what has to be appealed and revised, then has to put together a home rule petition to submit to Boston on the hill. For the supervisor, they'd have to develop a job description, do an RFP, selection and hiring process... It's not going to happen the day after Town Meeting, but it ensures that something does happen as opposed to putting it off again."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Water/sewer joint management

Town manager's vision

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski is considering the value of consolidating the water and sewer commissions into a single board— but only under a new structure of each department. In a phone call to the Mariner, Milanoski explained his vision for Cohasset's water and sewer.

"I have attended multiple water and sewer meetings, have had multiple meetings with the members of both commissions, the engineers and engineering firms for both groups, and have been involved in releasing the RFPs (requests for proposals), amending the RFPs, and am looking down road to what is best solution for the town on how to manage services between the water and sewer commissions.

I believe there are large firms that can manage both sections. We would have one firm that has expertise in managing both water and sewer...

The advantage by having a firm in future that could manage both entities would be the administrative costs could be shared between each group versus two individual overheads... In order to do that, we would have to do that in a particular number of years, and would have to bid out both the water and sewer contracts jointly.

If we had one of those firms just by definition, we should be able to provide cheaper, more effective service than by having two firms separately. That's the vision of the operation I'm suggesting needs to happen in future.

Financially, I want to make sure there are still separate enterprise funds for water and sewer...

I believe I would want to have a combined water and sewer commission managing the new firm with the town manager so that the firm would have, in essence, one group of bosses, not two separate groups to go to. I'm looking down the road at how we do that. One of the RFPs I've modified is requesting proposals for an operator to operate the water plant for two years with the option to extend for another year. By doing that, both contracts for water and sewer would be coming up together at same time."

Question of the week

For selectman candidates: When Cohasset switched to using a large law firm rather than a local lawyer for Town Counsel, it was supposed to save money. A glance at the annual town report shows a lot of money is going for "legal." Is Cohasset spending too much on lawyers? What can selectmen do to bring those costs under control?

SELECTMAN

Ted Carr

I support the current format of legal representation retained by the town. A town the size of Cohasset with our characteristics benefits from a large municipal law firm versus the alternatives of an internal legal department or combination of multiple, specialized law firms deployed on an as-needed basis.

Every town has to choose how to navigate through the inevitable legal issues a municipal organization faces. Whether construction contracts, employment agreements, property rights or lawsuits, a town must have proper legal representation. Historically, Cohasset has experienced representation by both a large municipal law firm and previous to the current structure, sole practitioners.

The underlying idea to change from a sole practitioner to large firm was to have a legal solution under one office to handle the different types of legal challenges our town faces. This minimizes our transaction costs in managing the law firm and promotes continuity as the town's legal needs evolve. Each year, Cohasset budgets for and expends approximately $250,000 in legal costs. While this number may seem high, it is relatively small in comparison to our total budget and the costs are covered by multiple departments, enterprise funds, and permit applicants; a large portion is recovered by special use.

This year we will spend more than what the town has budgeted due to collective bargaining and other special, one-time items. That said, all costs incurred by the town should be reexamined in light of current needs and conditions. Although the Board of Selectman has adopted policies to control legal costs and recovers a portion of such costs from fees collected for permits, the town should consider putting out for bid all major contracts for services from external vendors serving Cohasset. This will ensure that we are paying market prices and receiving the maximum value for our expenditures.

SELECTMAN

Martha Gjesteby

The use of Special Counsel must be curtailed. Unless there is a need so compelling as to be obvious to all, Town Counsel should be the one legal counsel representing the town. He should not have to deal with competing opinions from Special Counsels.

Added Legal Expense: Selectmen worked at odds with their own Conservation Commission to keep Commissioners from doing their legally constituted job in permitting Cat Dam.

Added Legal Expense: Selectmen permitted Water Commissioners to hire Special Counsel to assist them with the water concession. They should have not removed this from the purview of Town Counsel.

In 2000 former selectman Tom Callahan created an excellent policy for utilizing legal counsel (board of selectmen's policy regarding the use and management of town counsel) but selectmen never voted it as policy.

In summary, it said the Town Manager's jurisdiction over the use and management of course including the monitoring of counsel's bills. Each litigation and labor grievance to be monitored by a Litigation Management Team (Town Manager, Town Counsel and the Chair of the Board of Selectmen including the head or chair of the department or board involved in the litigation). The 10-prong list also included how the town would deal with and/or not deal with proponents and opponents of any issue.

This draft policy of the year 2000 should be rediscovered and voted.

Do selectmen make mistakes? Definitely. But one of the mistakes selectmen should not be making is going against the advice of Town Counsel and the Town Manager and their Permitting Boards. We do not elect Selectmen men to play monopoly with taxpayer money. They must act judiciously and they must follow the law. They must not flout laws that are there to protect our community.

Next week's question

For selectman candidates: Do you support having the police station "go dark" in order to save money?

For assessor candidates: Can Assessors do a better job in educating taxpayers about property tax relief they may qualify for?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon p.m., Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

Candidates, opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, may submit a formal announcement with a photograph. There is no word limit on the announcement but longer submissions may need to be held due to space constraints.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

CANDIDATES' CORNER

From Ted Carr:

This weekend, I will continue to campaign by visiting voters in person. I will be going door to door and calling on you to hear your thoughts. Watch for me in your neighborhood this weekend and in the coming weeks.

I take pride in the open communications and transparent processes that have been implemented during my term as Selectman. As I talk to voters about important issues during this campaign, be assured that I am listening and we hear you. I continue to ask voters to stay involved or find ways to become involved in our town. Please come to the public events we have planned so we can continue the dialogue.

The next campaign event will be:

Monday, April 30, 2012 at 7:00pm: Sean and Christine Cunning and Patrick Kennedy are hosting a reception at the Focus Gallery, 15 Depot Court, Cohasset. All are welcome.

From Martha Gjesteby:

My candidacy has generated a great deal of interest. Many coffees are scheduled as well as informal gatherings of voters. I will make town government more transparent than it is now.

Also, I will keep the town informed of current concerns and on-going issues. Let me know of your thoughts and questions. My E-mail address is Arne and Martha GJesteby@ comcast.net

Absentee ballots available April 30

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on May 19 will be available starting Monday, April 30 at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, May 18, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person. People may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury; and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by May 19 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of one's choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

People who are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast a vote at the polling place, may file a letter from a physician with the Town Clerk, stating that one is permanently unable to cast a vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot to sign and return will be mailed by the Town Clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

COMMENTARY

Analysis on water/sewer issue

TOM WOLF

The entire issue of water/sewer managements, concession contracts, governance, etc. is being perceived as unnecessarily complex. One can easily make solid judgments by employing analytic methods to town government in general, and water/sewer in particular, as if this was a business enterprise and one were a stockholder.

First and foremost, personnel changes in the management and support teams controlling the finances of the company have been both recent and rampant. A series of CEOs (town managers) culminated in the selection of a current CEO with no prior experience and conflicted loyalties. A series of CFOs (finance directors), full and part time, plus consultants have yet to produce reliable figures; and a change of external auditors within the past 30 days adds to the turmoil.

Second, a major division of the company, the Water Department, has undergone a recent bankruptcy and bailout from the parent company (the Town), causing a significant increase in its fees and rates to its consumers. In each subsequent year this department has received additional subsidies from its parent to balance its books, has ongoing receivables problems, and is attempting to enter a long-term concession contract against prevailing industry practices and trends. Ultimate liability for decisions made by the management (Water Commission) of this division remains irrevocably with the parent company.

Third, the parent company has seen a number of disastrous mistakes by the current board of directors (Selectmen) resulting in shareholder (citizen/taxpayer) outcries and votes of no confidence from subsidiary operations (elected/appointed officials). Foremost amongst these errors has been the dismissal of the most recent CEO after a few short, contentions months on the job, paralleled by the emerging dominance of the board by a group of dissident shareholders far out of proportion to their company ownership.

Both these events are expected to lead to significant financial and legal liabilities for which no reserves or contingency plans have been established. Financial ramifications of placating the dissident group are already being felt as all company operations are, at minimum, being curtailed.

Fourth, appeals to regulatory authorities regarding the ethicality and legality of many of these actions have, to date, produced no meaningful relief and are, somewhat astonishingly but politically predictable, not expected to play a role in the future of the organization.

The sole source of potential reform is a lethargic and traditionally ill-informed shareholder base that, in this case, is being out voiced by a self-interested block of investors and a puppet director/officer cadre.

If you were a shareholder in this enterprise, how long would it take you to dump your stock? As much as a nanosecond? Would you even bother to call for a new slate of directors or would you simply write off your losses and move on?

We as citizens don't have this option: Our only recourse, as tedious as it may appear, is to exercise our right to vote at Town Meeting and at the ballot box.

There is much at stake here: It is vital to make a new start in the right direction.

Historical Society to show 'Movie Queen'

Cohasset Historical Society welcomes a return visit from "The Movie Queen." On Saturday, April 28, the Historical Society will offer a limited engagement of the film "The Movie Queen."

The film was produced in the late 1930s as part of a local talent production. The plot involved a "movie queen" making a return visit to her hometown where she visits stores, churches and other local sites. The film crew follows the "queen" as she makes her way through town. Local residents were cast in the roles that welcomed the "queen" home. "The Movie Queen" was produced by filmmaker Margaret Cram Showalter who traveled to a number of towns in New England to make local versions of their towns "Movie Queen."

The local "Movie Queen" starred Bettina Gray (Mrs. Hugh Bancroft) as well as many still recognizable faces. Bill Liscomb, son of Bettina Gray, will be in attendance as an honored guest. The evening will take people back to 1930s Cohasset and offer the opportunity to see what has changed and what remains the same.

This fundraising event will feature wine, beer and "Cohasset Punch" as well as 1940s style hors d'oeuvres. Cost is $50 per person and since space is limited, it is best to make reservations as early as possible. Join in the fun and call Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434 for reservations.

NAME: Robbie Mahoney
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: A dominating presence under the boards, Mahoney was a rebounding machine. He averaged 11 rebounds per game, but his presence underneath also altered shots and turned games. Assistant coach Dick Lawless called Mahoney 'the glue of the team.'

NAME: Ricky Witt
POSITION: Guard
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Rockland
STATS: A team captain, Witt was Mr. Outside, making the transition switch from point guard to shooting guard. He led the team in scoring with a 15.5 point per game average and earned a berth on the South Shore League All-Star team for the second year in a row. He was also an SSL All-Star in football at quarterback.

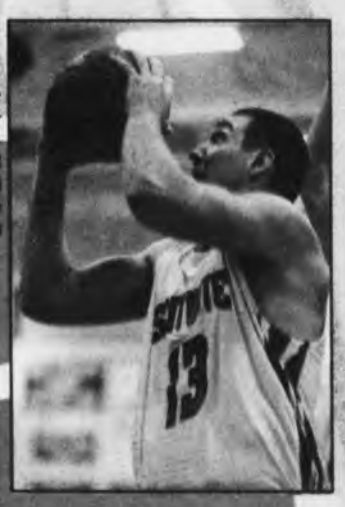
NAME: Shane Haggerty
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
STATS: The super guard helped lead Cohasset to a 16-6 record and a MIAA Tournament berth with 17 points per game. Amazingly, he played through a shoulder injury that has kept him off the baseball field this season. Is also an outstanding football player.

NAME: Eddie Bowler
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Patriot League All-Star led Hingham with 16 points and 12 rebounds per game. Had the ability to completely take over games as he helped lead the Harbormen to the MIAA Tournament. Had 26 points and 12 rebounds in a comeback win over Scituate that qualified Hingham for Tourney play and had another double-double against the Silver Lake with 18 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for Hingham. Is also an excellent baseball player.

NAME: Brandon Cawley
POSITION: Forward/Guard
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Abington
STATS: A team captain, Cawley earned South Shore League honors, averaging 18.4 points per game, scoring a season-high 31 against East Bridgewater and 29 against Rockland. He is a three-sport standing, also serving as quarterback of the football team and shortstop of the baseball varsity.

NAME: Damian Lugay
POSITION: Guard
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
STATS: For the second year in a row Lugay led the Bay State Conference in scoring (18.1 points per game) and had a few big games for the Wildcats this season, including a career-high 36-point effort against Natick and a 31-point game against Wellesley.

NAME: Tyler Gibson
POSITION: Center
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Rockland
STATS: This 6-foot-6-inch, 200-pounder was Mr. Inside for the Bulldogs, averaging 16 points, 12 points and 4 blocks per game. His best performance was in Div. 3 South semifinals against Joey Glynn and Cardinal Spellman, scoring 15 and pulling down 16 rebounds. He is also a member of the RHS outdoor track team.



NAME: Erik Whittaker
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Marshfield
STATS: An Atlantic Coast League all-star and Marshfield's leading scorer (13 points per game) and rebounder (10 per game), Whittaker captained the Rams to a 13-5 record and postseason berth.

NAME: Pat Delano
POSITION: Center
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: The 6-7 senior center averaged 17 points and 13 rebounds and was a warrior in the paint. He earned unanimous Bay State Conference All-Star for the second consecutive year. Of course, his basketball will be limted in the future. He has signed a letter of intent to play baseball at Vanderbilt.

NAME: John Foster
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Scituate
STATS: The junior was a power underneath, averaging 13.5 points and 11.2 rebounds. Had the ability to take over games. Is also a star football player.

KART RACING

Kierce takes second in outdoor race

Cohasset kart racer finishes second in rain-soaked races

By William Wassersug
Wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset youngster Chris Kierce has been racing F1 karts for a couple of years now, and with a combination of success and a love of the sport, he and his dad Paul invested in a kart of their own so they could take their show on the road.

Last weekend, Kierce was put to the test in outdoor action at F1 Bridgewater.

He passed the test with flying colors, finishing in second place despite a driving rain.

"First, I was doing so good on practice day which was Saturday," Kierce said. "It was sunny and hot. On Sunday we knew it would rain but hoped it would hold off until after my race. Sunday it started to rain. I did not want it to rain because I was doing so well qualifying with my slicks on. But then, when qualifying it was a little drizzle and I started to slip and slide. On the pre-final race we still had the slicks on and I was spinning out three or four times, so I thought I was doing bad and then for the final race I started on the grid first and it was raining somewhat hard but the track was somewhat dry in certain areas. So we put on old rain tires and the "blue guy" number 96 (the person who beat me) showed up with new rain tires on."

That did not bode well for Kierce.

"While I was racing I felt I did not have as much grip on the track," Kierce said. "I was in first place throughout the first 8 laps of 15 laps. The blue guy isn't as fast as me but he was catching up fast due to his tires."

That fact forced Kierce to change strategy.

Cohasset's Chris Kierce holds his second-place trophy for last week's races at the F1 track in Bridge-water. Speeds on the outdoor track can get as fast as 70mph. COURTESY PHOTO

"I was taking my turns wide because of the poor grip and the blue guy almost passed me, so I was thinking I need to take my turns wide then cut inside, but that didn't really work and he passed me."

Kierce then made the decision to stay safe.

"I was thinking that second is still great for the first race of the season," he said. "Racing in the rain is challenging even though I placed third three times last season in the rain. I had a lot of fun racing in the rain and that I don't mind placing second, especially when the blue guy placed first because he's nice, a good racer, and deserved it. This is also the first time with my own kart I've placed higher than third."

Winning streak comes to an end

Rockland edges Skippers

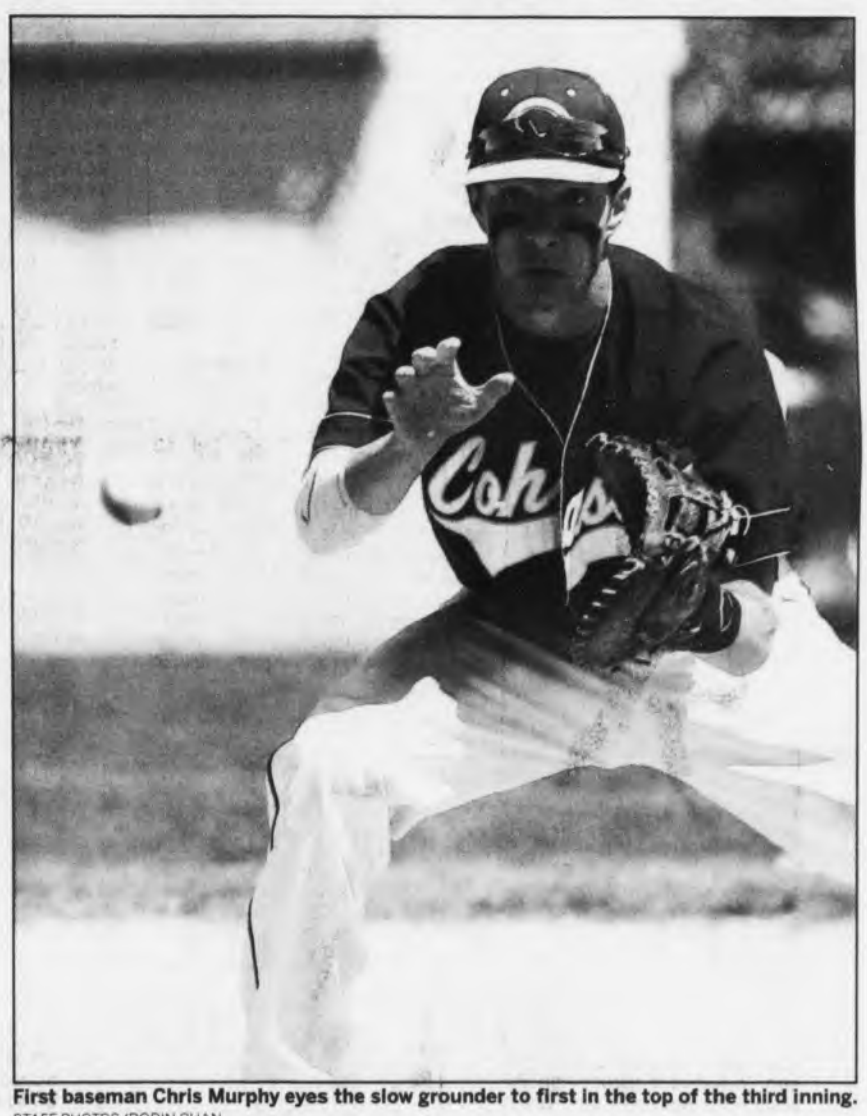
By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Still, the opening streak was a good one, especially when compared with Cohasset's records after seven games the past couple of seasons – seasons where the Skippers won Div. 4 State Championships.

Cohasset baseball coach Pete Afanasiw never expected his team to go unbeaten for an entire season, but after six games, it looked like it could be an outside possibility.

Those thoughts ended on Tuesday when they were edged 3-2 at Rockland.

Still, the opening streak was a good one, especially when compared with Cohasset's records after seven games the past couple of seasons – seasons where the Skippers won Div. 4 State Championships.



Cohasset picked up a couple of nice wins during the break, with back-to-back wins over Cardinal Spellman.

The Skippers won the first meeting between the teams 6-4 on the road last Tuesday, and followed with a 6-3 victory on vacation-week Thursday.

Championship matchups set

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The South Coastal Hockey League semifinals had a little bit of everything to them. There were upsets, overtime, and shootout wins to decide what teams will be in the finals in each division.

The Legends Div. top-seed Sharks rallied from a 2-0 deficit to tie their game with the fourth-seeded Saints, 2-2. However, the Saints would pull out the game as Paul Murphy scored on the eighth-round of the shootout to put his team in the championship game with a 3-2 win.

The Saints line of James McNeill, Jonathan Graham and Mike Ryan accounted for the two goals in regulation. Ryan and McNeill scored the goals and Graham had two assists. McNeill and Ryan both also had an assist for the Sharks, who will play the Whalers in the championship game at Hobomock Arena on Sunday at 7:40 p.m.

The Whalers' Richard Keyes deflected a Paul Flagg pass 31 seconds into the overtime to pull out a 3-2 win over the Stingers. Flagg and Steve Concannon of Sciutate scored in the first 3:30 of the game to give the Whalers a 2-0 lead.

Chris Poudrier and John Scag scored the goals for the Stingers and Ken Wingate of Pembroke had two assists as they rallied to tie the game 2-2 in the third period.

Ron DiCecca of Marshfield scored a goal and assisted on another one as the fourth-seeded Red Wings stunned the top-seeded Maple Leafs by a 3-0 score. Steve Figioli and Scott Varley also scored goals and Rick Welch recorded the shutout for the Red Wings. The Wings will play the Rangers on Sunday at 8:50 P.M. at the Hobomock Arena. Jim Hutchinson broke a 2-2 tie with an unassisted goal with 7:22 left in the game to give the Rangers a 3-2 win over the Black Hawks.

Pembroke's Bill Sawtelle scored a goal and assisted on another while Jeff Uva added a goal and Hanover's Jay Parker had two assists for the Rangers, who led 2-0 in the first period.

Vin Joyce scored a goal and assisted on another one and Tony Rota scored a goal for the Black Hawks.

Red Sox Camp headed to Hingham

Popular camp here in August

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

For young baseball players, especially in New England, the Boston Red Sox have been the example of excellence and a passion for the region.

Soon, youngsters ages 5-13 in the South Shore can have a first-hand experience with the Red Sox as the Red Sox Youth Baseball Summer Camp will spend a week in Hingham.

The Hingham week will be at Hingham High School, August 13-17.

"We're excited about the program coming to Hingham High School," said program president Brendan Sullivan.

The camp has two components, a baseball camp and a Red Sox component. The camp combines a traditional baseball camp curriculum with the magic of the Red Sox and Fenway Park.

"The instruction is first-rate," Sullivan said of the baseball aspect. "There are games and contests that come from a love of baseball. The instructors are former college and professional players with specific expertise. It is a high energy setting that keeps things moving."

On the flip side are the Red Sox. Each camper also gets to experience a true "Major League Experience".

Part of the camp consists of a trip to Fenway Park on a charter bus, just like the Big Leaguers ride.

At Fenway, campers will spend time with Wally the Green Monster and see the Wally Show, take a VIP behind-the-scenes tour of the Red Sox Clubhouse and enjoy a World Series Ring and World Series Trophy Experience.

Campers also receive an autographed photo of a Red Sox Major League player, a full Red Sox uniform including shirt, hat, pants socks and belt and will have the opportunity to participate in a Camper Reunion Game and walk on the field.

"We pride ourselves on a really good camp," Sullivan said. "For younger players we're introducing them, for older players they can fine-tune their game."

A big factor is the experience itself.

"When you put a young person in that uniform with those coaches, there are memories that don't go away," Sullivan said. "The Red Sox realize that there are other sports and want to reach out to young fans and help build a relationship and memories with the team. Every last fan is important."

The camp has expanded this year with more locations, but the Hingham camp is the only one on the South Shore.

The camp is open to boys and girls of all abilities.

In the past there have been campers from as far away as California and China.

Local campers have first crack at the roster though.

For more information, visit www.redsox.com/camps.

BASEBALL

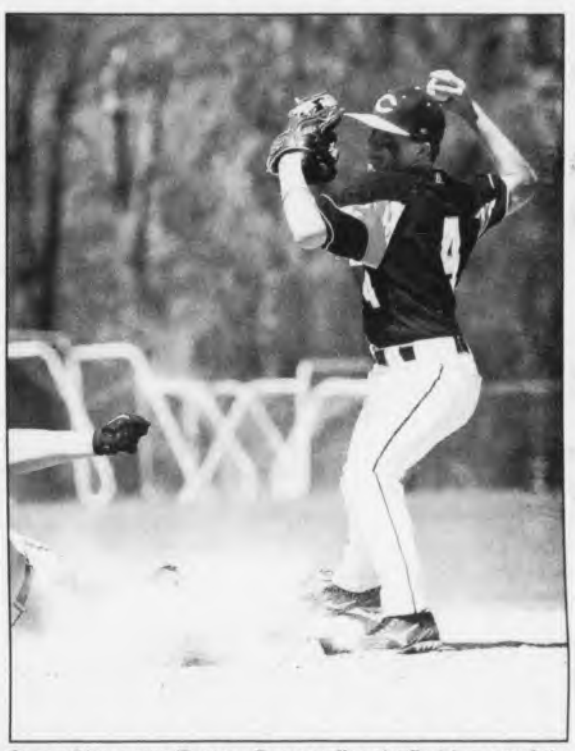
Through it all, Cohasset has continued to win though the basics – timely hitting, solid fundamental defense and great pitching.

Jamie Faber leads the way with a 1.27 ERA with a 3-0 record, while Conor Goetz has tossed a pair of two-hitters. He shut out Hull on two hits in a 9-0 win, and allowed just three runs, all unearned in a 6-3 win over Cardinal Spellman.

He's also hitting .320.



John Collins is still leading the offense with a .545 batting average, and Faber isn't far behind with a .429 average.

Jamie Timothy is hitting .423.

The Skippers will look to get back on the winning track Monday against Harwich at home.

Catcher John Collins blocks the plate and gets the second out of the inning in the top of the fifth inning

Second baseman Terence Doonan fires to first to complete the 6-4-3 double play in the top of the second inning.

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

Registration is this weekend

Now that the holidays and spring recess are behind us and April showers are upon us, summer is literally just around the corner. In Cohasset, summer is equated with sailing season, and next weekend, the Cohasset Sailing Club will hold its annual registration from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, April 28, and noon to 2 p.m., on Sunday April 29, at the clubhouse on Government Island. The combined membership application and class registration document is available on the website, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also contains more detailed information about the club and the classes it offers for the town's young people, teens and adults.

It is easy to take the CSC for granted as just another one of the special town's amenities, but there was a time that the club did not exist, and hence Cohasset residents did not have an equal and affordable opportunity to access the water. Over the years CSC has strived to keep fees reasonable, and despite the inevitable cost creep since its founding in 1960, we still offer much more bang for the buck when compared with other South Shore sailing organizations. For instance, Hingham and Duxbury also offer children's lessons on a three- or four-day schedule, but these sessions take place over four weeks in Hingham and three weeks in Duxbury at a respective cost of $385 and $449. CSC offers an eight-week session at $300 per child. In Hingham, free sailing is available for three hours on two weeknights and a few hours on Saturday afternoons for a $195 fee, while in Duxbury adults can free sail for two hours every day during the season, but at a cost of $525 and a few days notice on reserving a rental boat. By joining CSC at the basic seasonal membership fee of $200, which applies to individuals and families with children younger than 23 years of age, kids and adults can free sail for three hours every weekday evening and from 1 to 8 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. And CSC doesn't charge people to rent a boat or require that they reserve one ahead of time.

The one area where the CSC has fallen short, compared to peer organizations, is in the physical quality of the facility. A year ago we launched a fundraising campaign to build an environmentally friendly and aesthetically pleasing new clubhouse, design donated by local architects Hoadley and Martinez. Through the generosity of past and present members we have made good progress towards this goal, but in order to break ground this fall, we need to get more donations and pledges. You can check out the plans for the new clubhouse on our website. Our aim is to offer Cohasset a beautiful long-lasting addition to the town's waterfront while maintaining a reasonable fee structure for all our residents. Please consider helping us achieve this goal and leave a legacy that will endure for decades to come.

LIFE AT CHS

Back from the British Isles

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Welcome back to school, Cohasset! After a nice, relaxing break I hope everybody's ready to finish the school year off right. I spent my vacation in the British Isles with a group of 39 Cohasset students and teachers, and it was incredible. I highly recommend going on any of the upcoming Europe trips! It was an amazing experience I will never forget. However, while I came back the same color as before, many students arrived in the halls of CHS on Monday sporting bronzed, sun-kissed skin after journeying to a tropical location for the week. A lot of ladies definitely got a nice tan for prom and summer!

AP Exams are rapidly approaching and AP teachers are scrambling to finish teaching and save time for last-minute review. Good luck to all of the sophomores, juniors, and seniors taking AP tests within the next few weeks. You'll do great!

The next edition of the Spinnaker comes out on the seniors last day, May 24th and is called the "Senior Salute." Senior parents, if you plan on putting an ad in the Spinnaker wishing your senior well, send it to spinnaker@cohassetk12.org ASP because the ads are overdue!

The band and chorus trip to New York City is scheduled for May 18th to May 20th. Members of the band and chorus will sing in a competition, explore NYC, and go to a Broadway show! The trip takes place every other year when the Fall Musical is not occurring. Good luck everyone!

College decisions must be made by next Tuesday, so most seniors know where they are going to be in four months. It's insane how fast time flew by. Especially this year – it's already fourth quarter and there's under a month until the seniors are out for summer. So bittersweet, but I can't wait for the next big thing.

As for sports, track had two big meets this week. On Tuesday, the boys tied Rockland and the girls suffered a narrow loss. On Thursday, both teams faced off against Mashpee at home. This Wednesday, the girls' varsity lacrosse team crushed Hull at home. Tonight, the boys' tennis team will be playing at Bridgewater-Raynham, girls' lax at Duxbury, and Boy's JV lax have a home game against Martha's Vineyard at 4.

On Thursday, the Winter Sports' Meeting was held in the auditorium and captains for next year and this year's League All-Stars were announced and Varsity letters and certificates distributed. Afterwards, the seniors enjoyed a presentation on making the right choices.

That's all for this week Cohasset, I hope this week after vacation wasn't too hectic! See you next week.

Olivia Franklin's column runs weekly during the school year.

BRIEFLY

Row with CMI this summer

Registration is now open for adult rowing at CMI. The season runs May 19-August 19, so act now! All levels are welcome. Youth rowing for students entering grade 8 and up will start in late June; more information about this program will be on the CMI web site soon.

Please come to an Open House on Saturday, May 5, from 9-11 to see the boats, meet some rowers and learn how much fun we have! The CMI boathouse is located at 40 Parker Avenue. For more information, and to register for the season or for the Learn To Row program, go to the CMI web site: http://www.rowcmi.com.

For other questions, please email: Row.CMI@comcast.net

CYBSA hosts 'Fund Your Fields'

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association invites you to join us for our first "Fund Your Fields" gala to be held on Friday, April, 27th at Atlantica. This evening of cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, auction, raffles and more will be a great way to kick off our 2012 season!

This year we are launching an ambitious two-year program to raise $100,000 and make significant changes and improvements to our Barnes Field Complex and Beechwood Field.

This is sure to be a fun-filled evening, with some incredible auction items, raffle prizes and more. So start working on your best CYBSA stories and we look forward to seeing you at the event.

And the best part is that you can just roll out of bed the next day, Saturday, April 28th for our annual Opening Day Parade!

Please visit the CYBSA website- www.cybsa.net to register and RSVP.

Food Drive during April

The Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Agency is conducting a Food Drive during the month of April. Non-perishables can be dropped off at 15 Depot Court, Cohasset Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. All donations will be given to the local food pantry.

SEPAC HOSTS EVENT

Teens are focus of meeting

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Understanding your Disability — Leading your Child to Self-Advocacy and Independence" with Lynne Mitchell, MSW, School Consultant.

The meeting will be held at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, May 1st at 7pm. Please feel free to gather for refreshments and speak with the SEPAC Board. Ms. Mitchell will begin her presentation at 7:30pm. Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

As teens move through middle and high school, they need to become more independent and responsible within the family, at school and out in the broader community.

This workshop will focus on specific strategies you can begin implement immediately to help your teen develop into a more independent, engaged, confident and responsible adult. "This presentation is essential for all families to grow stronger together," states Diane Herth, SEPAC president.

Lynne Mitchell, MSW has been a clinical social worker for the last 16 years. She worked for 8 years for a therapeutic day school where she helped design IEPs and classroom programming to met the needs of various student populations, including students with AS. More recently, Lynne has been providing classes for parents and educators regarding how to best understand and meet the needs of children with AS. She is the parent of four, including a middle schooler with AS. This is the fourth year Lynne Mitchell has taught her very popular parenting classes at AANE.

The Asperger's Association of New England (AANE), one of the first Asperger Syndrome organizations in the United States, was founded in 1996 by a small group of concerned parents and professionals, shortly after the diagnosis of Asperger Syndrome (AS) first appeared in the U.S. Diagnostic and Statistical Manual (edition IV). AANE builds a supportive community by providing education, information and referrals to individuals with AS, their extended families, and the professionals who assist them.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit our website at www.cohassetsepac.org.

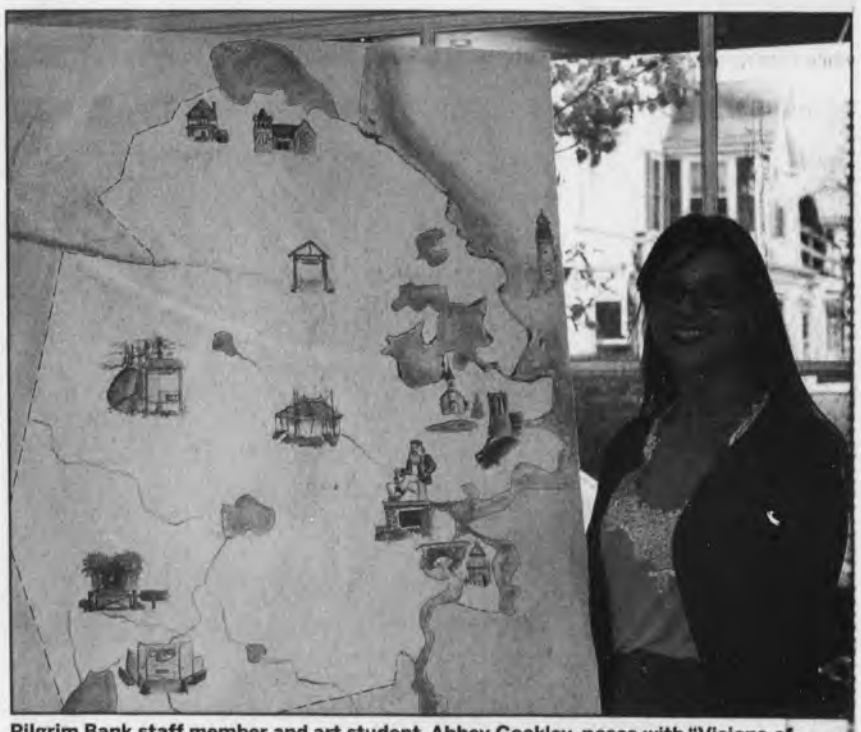
Pilgrim Bank welcomes guests to new home

Nearly 100 people were in attendance on Wednesday night at 40 South Main Street, the location of the new "World Headquarters" for Pilgrim Bank.
Guests included Cohasset business and community leaders, as well as members of the Bank's Board, Corporators and employees. Cohasset's "hometown bank" is scheduled to open the doors to its new location in Mid -May.

Chris Haggerty and Peter Manning were among the local business leaders and community volunteers who previewed the bank's new offices at Wednesday night's event.



Local businessman and former Pilgrim Bank Board Member, Jim Kearney enjoyed the reception with wife, Maureen.

GIMME SHELTER

Susie is a new mom

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for their little Susie who recently had a litter of kittens. Her kittens are, along with two other litters, available for adoption. There are a total of 12 adorable, gray, tiger, tuxedo and one black, mostly male kittens.

Susie was a wonderful Mom, and would be a welcome addition to most any animal loving family. She's a brownish tiger cat with a beautiful white bib and a great personality.

If you're interested in either Susie and, or her kittens, please come visit them during open hours.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

Susie was a wonderful Mom, and would be a welcome addition to most any animal loving family.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net.

The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

Garden Club plant sale May 19

Community Garden Club Of Cohasset will host a plant sale on the grounds of Cohasset Historical Society, 106 South Main St. from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 19.

Some gardening thoughts may now be centered around bulbs – what worked and what was missing in one's spring garden. Now is the time to think about what colors, types and textures one has observed around town and would like to see in their garden next March, April and May. People may want to know about deadheading bulb plants. Should the leaves be left? How long? What are the ground covers that look great with bulbs? When should ground cover be planted? When can new bulbs go into the ground? Come to the plant sale, and ask all one's questions of local gardeners.

Also, if May, June and July are on one's mind people can buy plants from the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. Club members sell the plants from their own gardens, and these are the plants that thrive in acid soil, heavy winds, salt air, love rocks. Prices will be excellent.

Photographer: The Art is the Journey

The South Shore Art Center presents a photography exhibit by Murton Sudalter May 1 through June 30 at the Paul Pratt Library. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Wednesday and Friday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m, and Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Murton Sudalter began Adventure Travel 30 years ago when, with camera in-hand, the joys of photography and adventure travel reeled him in.

While shooting eclectic sites in Burma, New Guinea, Viet Nam, Thailand, Africa and more, he has turned "ordinary" into nuance, Whether on the Sepek River in New Guinea or on top of the Austrian Alps, the look is fresh and modern.

He has been coveted by such notables as Smith Barney, Lufthansa Airlines,etc. as well as personal collections of over 400 clients who have purchased his work for home, office and public spaces

Pursuing his passion for the past 30 years, Mr Sudalter is a recognized photographer who has exhibited in Boston, New York and Galleries throughout New England and Florida.

Mother's Day Walk for PEACE

Community members are encouraged to join our "Compassionate Cohasset" walking team on Sunday, May 13 as we participate in Boston's 16th Annual Mother's Day Walk for PEACE. The Mother's Day Walk for PEACE began in Dorchester in 1996 to support families who had lost children to violence. The Walk is the major fundraiser for the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute – a 501 C3 organization committed to ending violence by offering a nationally recognized Peace Education Curriculum, crises management for families, promoting peaceful resolution to prevent retaliatory violence and training for professionals dealing with families impacted by violence.

Participating in the 3.6 mile walk is a powerful and uplifting experience. If you are unable to walk but would like to pledge your financial support, all contributions are appreciated. For more information, please contact Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

Also, Clementina Chery, President and CEO of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute will give the sermon, this Sunday April 29 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. The service begins at 10 a m. and Ms. Chery's sermon is entitled "PEACE through Pain & Prayer".

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Saturday afternoon among friends

STEPHEN DEITZ

It's "a conversation between friends," according to American biographer, Catherine Drinker Bowen. Richard Walthew, the 20th century English composer, described it as "music of friends." Both were alluding to chamber music, of course. Although most chamber music performances have migrated from the intimate setting of the home to the more grandiose concert hall, and the amateur players for whom the earliest chamber music was written have been replaced by professionals, there are still many professional musicians who continue to play in intimate venues for their own pleasure and that of friends. I'm pleased to say I'm one of them.

On Saturday, April 28, at 4 p.m., South Shore Conservatory presents a chamber concert as its earliest composers intended: In a private home, for the pleasure of friends and neighbors. Along with fellow faculty members Mae-Lynn Arnold, violin, Adele Carter, cello, and Regina Yung, piano, as well as Michelle LaCourse, viola, Boston University String Department chair, and graduating senior Alexandra Nelson, bassoon, I will be sharing an afternoon hour or two of impassioned music-making and am really looking forward to it.

This concert includes the type of fabulous chamber music the Conservatory presents in its Duxbury Music Festival each summer in Duxbury. This Spring

Chamber Concert program is filled with repertoire that is not often heard, but merits more performances. In my opinion, to be fully appreciated, these pieces need to be experienced live. The program includes, among other works, Rebecca Clarke's Passacaglia on an Old English Tune for viola and piano; Paul Hindemith's Sonata for bassoon and piano; Jean Françaix's Trio for violin, cello, and piano; Henri Vieuxtemps' Burlesque Variations on "Yankee Doodle" for violin and piano; and Astor Piazzolla's "Oblivion Tango" for violin, cello and piano.

The "conversation," as Catherine Bowen described it, will have all the qualities of any memorable heart-to-heart. There'll be moments of seriousness, moments of humor, moments of awkward silence and moments of great ease. And, in the end, as with all great music-making, everyone will have gained a bit more insight into the composers, their music and the performers. The reception that follows the concert allows friends, old and new, performers and guests, to continue the conversation after the last round of applause has given way to general chatter and the hosts have offered their guests a glass of wine and hors d'oeuvres.

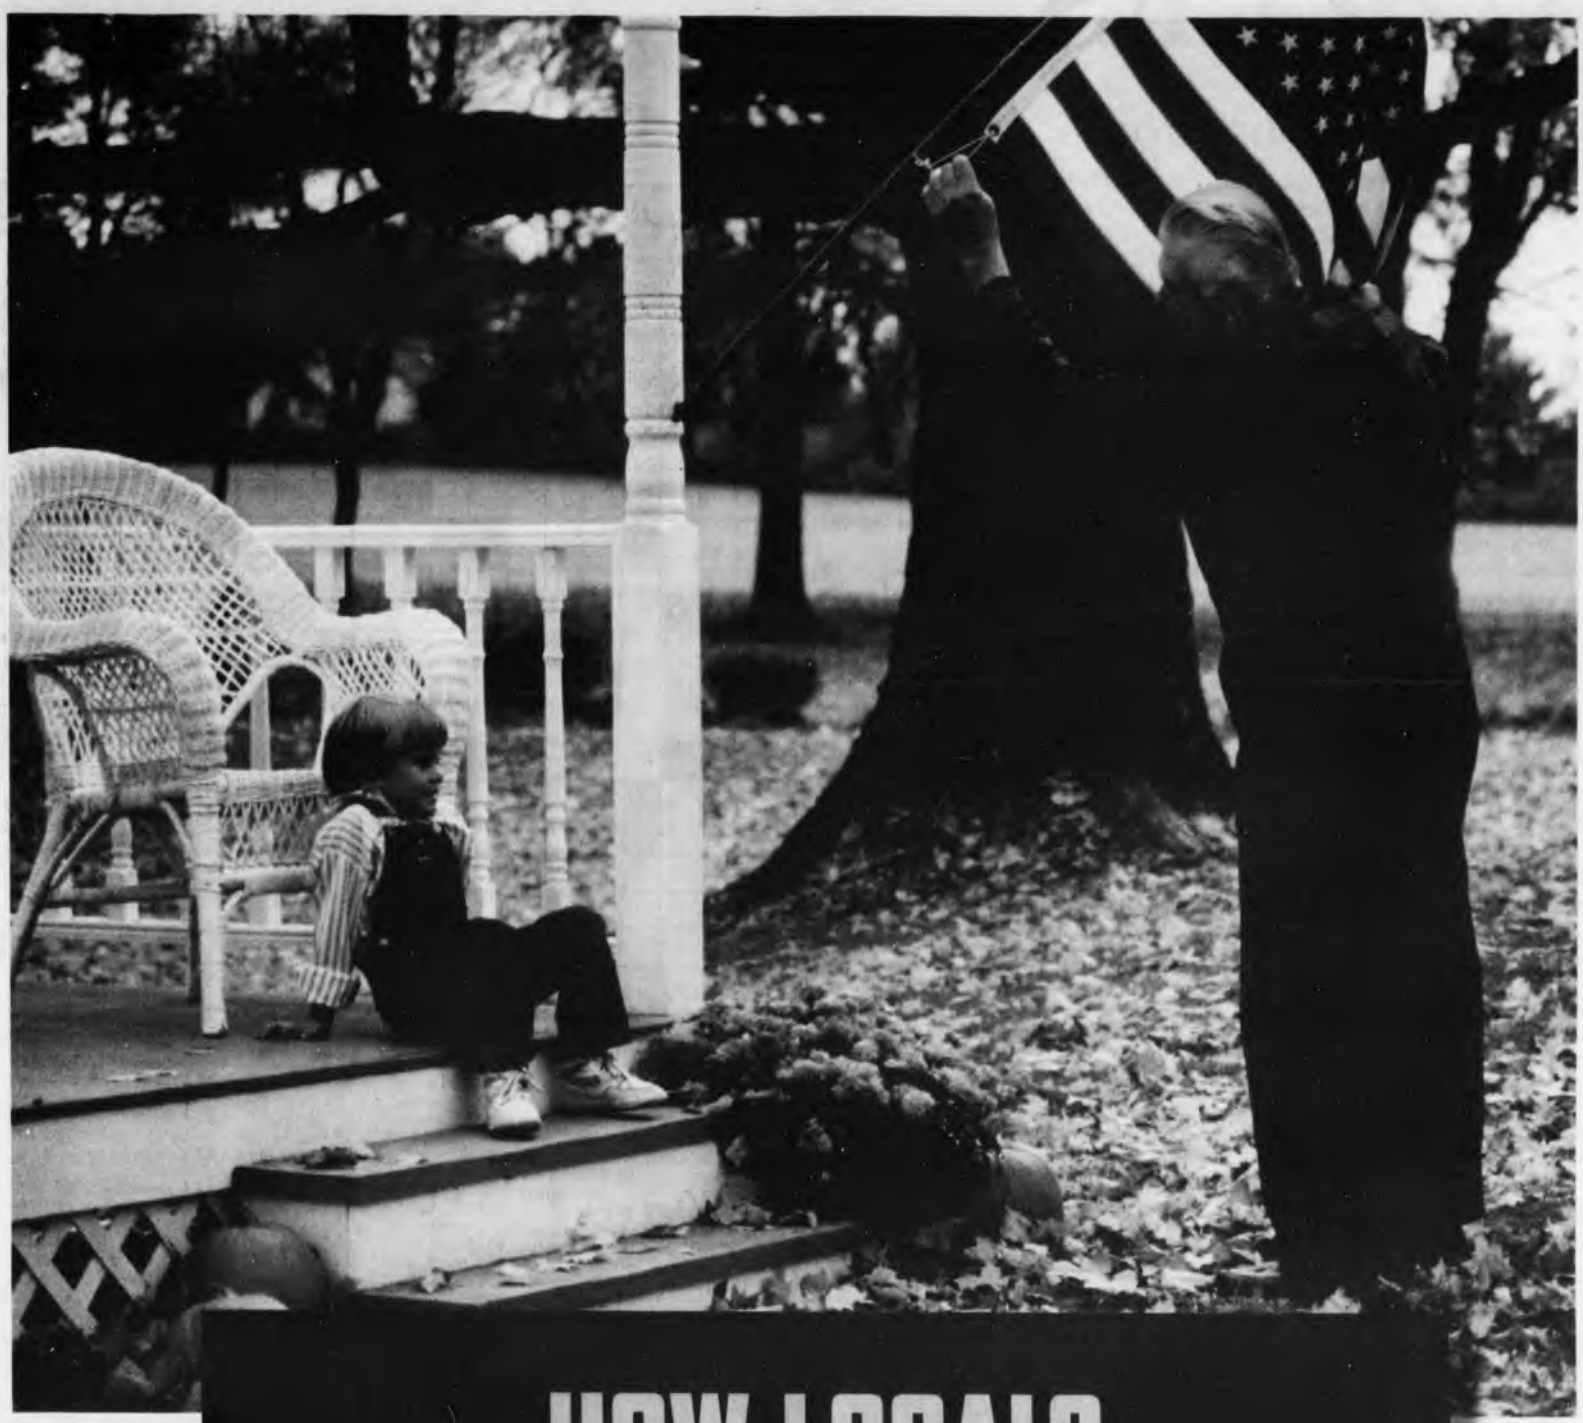
The Spring Chamber Concert on Saturday, April 28, 4 p.m., will be held in the lovely and spacious home of Karen and David von Loesecke of Hingham. For additional information regarding tickets and venue address, or to learn more about South Shore Conservatory's Duxbury Music Festival, please visit us at www.duxburymusicfestival.org or call Eileen Puzo at 781-749-7565, ext. 30, by Friday, April 27, to reserve your space. It's a spring chamber "conversation" you'll be happy you heard!

Pianist Stephen Deitz has been with South Shore Conservatory since 2000 and is director of the Conservatory's Duxbury Music Festival.

The Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting

The kitchen is the true heart of the home. On Friday, May 18, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., visitors of the Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting are offered a glimpse into five stunning homes located along the Cohasset seacoast while enjoying a sampling of gourmet foods from local area restaurants and caterers.

The welcome mat will be put out for guests to participate in a self-guided tour, where visitors can choose their start and end, and will find at each home inspirational ideas not only for kitchen design and concept, but also interior design and décor. All this, while sampling the creative cuisine from local caterers and restaurants such as Atlantica, Bia Bistro, The Chef's Table, Kate's Table, and Ellen McKenzie Caterers.



Award-winning kitchen design company Roomscapes, located in Rockland, collaborated with homeowners on a number of kitchens on the tour. Their ability to interpret their client's vision resulted in uniquely functional, yet aesthetically beautiful kitchens that will truly inspire visitors.

Like a good recipe, when you mix great vision with great design, the result is astounding. The fantastic works of award-winning architect Heidi Condon of HC Design and interior designers, Roberta Sobran of Delicious Designs, Lisa Evans of Country House Interiors, and Darilynn Evans of Darilynn's will be inspirational.

Proceeds from the tour will be directed towards two really exciting projects at the South Shore Community Center. With the success of the tour, the center anticipates being able to raise the final funds necessary to complete The SSCC Nursery school playground project, and plans to have this project completed within this school year. The second, more long-term project will be to replace the severely outdated SSCC kitchen with a state of the art cooking facility that center's nursery school children, seniors and the community will be able to enjoy.

The tour will be held rain or shine. Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting the center's at www.southshorecommunity.com or calling the South Shore Community Center directly at 781-383-0088. The cost for the tickets will be $35. The South Shore Community Center is a not for profit organization, and relies heavily on the community to support their efforts.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 7, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The often skeptical Aries might find that an answer to a question is hard to believe. But check it out before you chuck it out. You might well be surprised at what you could learn.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your resolute determination to stick by a position might make some people uncomfortable. But if you're proved right (as I expect you to be), a lot of changes will tilt in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel conflicted between what you want to do and what you should do. Best advice: Honor your obligations first. Then go ahead and enjoy your well-earned rewards.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That financial matter still needs to be sorted out before you can consider any major monetary moves. Pressures ease midweek, with news about a potential career change.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A workplace problem threatens to derail your well-planned project. But your quick mind should lead you to a solution and get you back on track without too much delay.

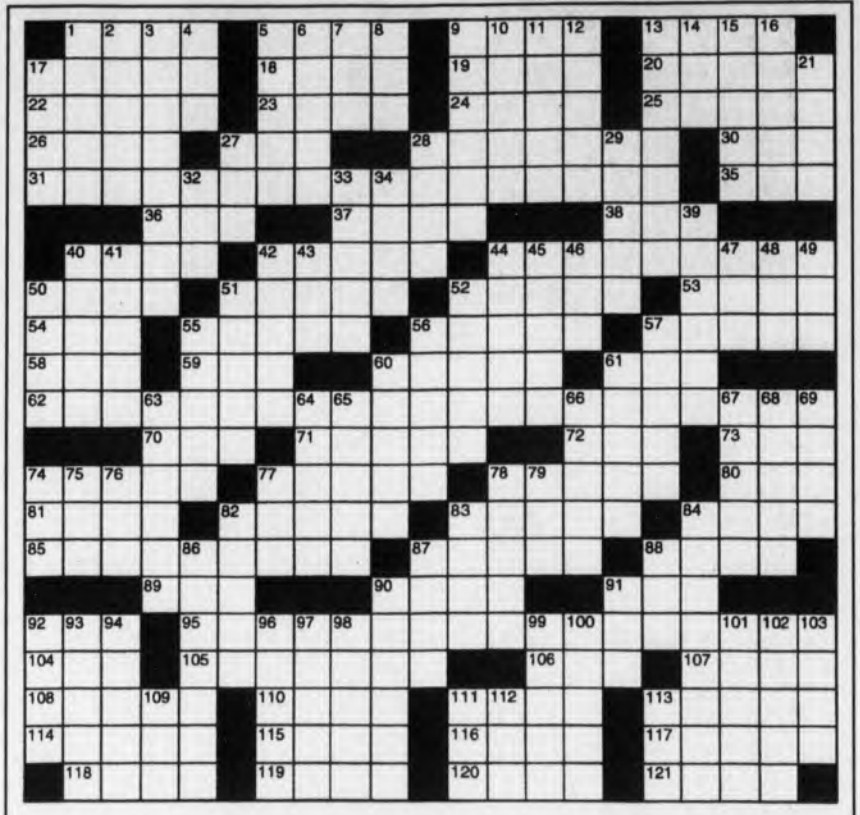
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An opportunity opens up but could quickly close down if you allow pessimism to override enthusiasm. A trusted friend can offer the encouragement you need.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You've come through a difficult period of helping others deal with their problems. Now you can concentrate on putting your energy to work on your own projects.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Forget about who's to blame and, instead, make the first move toward patching up a misunderstanding before it creates a rift that you'll never be able to cross.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good news for the travel-loving Sagittarian who enjoys galloping off to new places: That trip you put off will soon be back on your schedule.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A mood change could make the gregarious Goat seek the company of just a few friends. But you charge back into the crowd for weekend fun and games.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A decision you made in good faith could come under fire. Best advice: Open your mind to other possibilities by listening to your challenger's point of view.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You can avoid being swamped by all those tasks dangling from your line this week by tackling them one by one, according to priority. The weekend brings good news.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a fine business sense and a love of the arts. You enjoy living life to its fullest.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

SKY Vacation Bible School

A summer kids' event called Sky will take place at St. Stephen's, Cohasset, from June 25 to June 29. At Sky, faith and imagination will soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids will participate in Bible-learning activities, sing songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into treats, experience Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test the Science gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day will conclude with Fly Away Finale – a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned. Family and friends are invited to come at 11:30 a.m., on June 29, for a Fly Away Finale.

Sky is for kids from preschool (age 3) through fifth grade, and will take place from 9 a.m. to noon each day. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

Meals tax back on the table

STM rejected meals, hotel taxes in fall 2010

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Hungry for revenue, town officials have once again proposed adopting a meals excise tax.

Special Town Meeting voted it down back in November 2010, but has the appetite for a meals tax changed this time around?

During preliminary discussions of the Annual Town Meeting warrant, officials have debated the merits of enacting a meals tax to bring in additional revenue to the town.

The Advisory Committee voted 4-2 to recommend their support of the meals tax, while the Board of Selectmen has not taken a formal vote. Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski, however, is eager to bring in more revenue for the town, and so far the selectmen appear to be leaning in favor of the article.

If approved by Town Meeting, Cohasset would enact a 0.75 (three quarters of one percent) increase over what the state already gets (6.25 percent). This raises the statewide tax to 7 percent for people dining out, with the town keeping the additional 0.75 percent. Factoring in this increase, a $40 restaurant bill generates $2.80 in meals tax, out of which the town collects an additional 30 cents.

Cohasset last considered the meals tax at Nov. 2010 Special Town Meeting, but decisively voted against it. The Budget Planning Group recommended the tax at the time, along with a 6 percent tax on hotel room occupancies; Special Town Meeting nixed both.

The State Legislature approved a local option meals tax in 2009 to provide relief for towns facing budget shortfalls due to local aid cuts and increased costs of running town governments. Communities may levy up to 0.75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals originating within the town or city by a vendor.

According to the latest report by the state's Department of Revenue (DOR), 151 of 351 Mass. cities and towns have elected to implement

Father of five creates top mobile app

AllergyEats wins national award

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Got food allergies and need to find a place to eat, fast? There's an app for that.

Thanks to Paul Antico, founder of AllergyEats.com, allergy sufferers or parents of allergic kids can readily find dining options on the road, on vacation, or right down the street.

For the past two years since its launch, AllergyEats.com has functioned as a comprehensive online guide to allergy-friendly restaurants across the nation, with over 600,000 restaurants in its database. The corresponding smartphone application, which debuted last August, makes it even easier for users to search for food on the go. Last month, the AllergyEats app, which is free to download, received a big honor: About.com's 2012 Readers' Choice Awards named it the "Best Food Allergy App."

To Antico, a Cohasset resident and father of five, three of whom have food allergies, this is a pretty big deal.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Not afraid of the dark

TM says station will still be secure

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

By now it's been established that Cohasset's police station could go dark at times once the town's police dispatch moves to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham. While officials, including Cohasset's police chief, as well as the Mass. Chiefs Association of Police, have expressed concerns over the risks involved with closing the station for a portion of the day, Cohasset's town manager is stressing that, most of the time, the station will not be empty.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that officers will be in and out of the station, and if it ever is dark, it will only be so for short periods of time. Selectmen are concerned, however, that even if there is no emergency, the station should remain open simply so townspeople can conduct business.

"Generally, there will be a group of people in the building 24/7, jointly managed by police and fire or by the fire department when they're not out on a call," said interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

When people go to the public safety building with an emergency, said Milanoski, they "generally go to the fire side" for medical assistance because many of the firefighters are cross trained as paramedics.

The police side of the house, meanwhile, will see its lobby turned into a "safe room" for folks in need of as-

Poppy Drive in Cohasset

The annual Poppy Drive will take place this year on May 24, 25 and 26.

Each year the VFW's success in performing this drive can only be achieved with volunteers taking the time to man tables at Shaw's, Stop & Shop and Curtis Liquors.

This year the VFW is asking for volunteers to call Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079 to donate the times one can sit at locations.

POLICE BEAT

Stuck in mud at Avalon

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A wrecker service called police last Monday (April 23) at around 4:47 p.m. to observe while they towed a 2004 Honda Pilot out of the mud at the Avalon complex in case of damage to the grounds.

Police said the car was stuck in the mud up to the floorboards. They said a 17-year-old Cohasset boy and a friend decided to drive into Avalon to explore, then disregarded a construction sign and trespassed, ending up stuck in the mud and having to be towed out. There were no citations as the incident was on private property but police provided a report to Avalon management that can settle with the boy's insurance company for any damages.

Turtle visit

A large snapping turtle arrived at the back door of the police station at 6:20 p.m. on Monday (April 23). Police were able to move it along to a grassy area using a nightstick.

No fight

Police investigated a report a 7:40 p.m. on Monday (April 23) on Avalon Drive about two people having a physical altercation inside a 2001 Jeep Cherokee. Police found the male driver who is from S. Weymouth and said he was waiting for a friend inside one of the apartments. There was no other person inside the Jeep and the man denied having a fight with anyone.

Missing stepladder

A 61-year-old Cohasset man who owns a small construction company reported to police on Monday (April 23) that he had seen his missing 12-foot stepladder at a house that he had done some repairs on. He thought the homeowner had his ladder and provided police with a receipt. Police went to the house and the homeowner showed them the ladder, which was a 10-foot ladder and was not the one that the man was missing.

Young raccoon

An officer working a detail by a tree-cutting crew reported the workers found a young raccoon in a tree on Tuesday (April 24) at around 9:36 a.m. The Animal Control Officer was called who put the adolescent raccoon on the ground and it wandered off into the woods ostensibly to be reunited with its mother.

Vulgar language

A 45-year-old man went to the police station at around 5:25 p.m. on Wednesday (April 25) to report receiving unwanted text messages and voicemails with profanity and vulgar language from a former employer. Police talked with the former employer who agreed to stop the activity.

Parking lot

Police responded to a minor motor vehicle accident in the high school parking lot last Thursday (April 26) at around 9 a.m. A 2012 Ford minibus, operated by a 33-year-old W. Bridgewater woman, was headed toward the parking lot exit when a 2010 Mazda SUV, operated by a 41-year-old Cohasset woman, backed into the side of the bus. The woman in the Mazda said the bus was in the vehicle's "blind spot" and she did not see it. There were no injuries and neither vehicle had to be towed. There was minor damage, police said.

Patrols

Police are stepping up patrols and will be issuing parking tickets in the Depot Court/Ripley Road area after recent complaints that cars are parked all day in the one-hour parking spots.

Rug sought

A 66-year-old woman who now lives in California but used to live in Cohasset notified police last week that she believed a relative of hers had stolen her oriental rug from the barn and her former property and wanted to file a report.

Mailbox vandalism

Police received a rash of reports about damage to mailboxes and lampposts last weekend in the Hillside Drive and Beechwood Road area near the ballpark. Police said damage totaled about $1,000. They believe the perpetrators were likely young people on foot. There are no suspects at this time, police said.

Break-in

Police are investigating a break-in at the antique store at West Corner. The store called at about 11 a.m. on Saturday to report a breaking and entering that had occurred overnight. Missing was $100 in cash and about $300 in antique jewelry. Police said the door was kicked in. Detectives processed the scene and some physical evidence is being processed at the state laboratory.

On Saturday, April 28th, at about 2pm, Cohasset police and fire units were dispatched to a reported single car motor vehicle crash on North Main Street, between Cedar Street and the MBTA station. When officers arrived on scene, they found a 2001 GMC Sierra dump truck that was towing a large landscaping trailer in the woods off of North Main Street. Both the truck and the trailer were totaled.

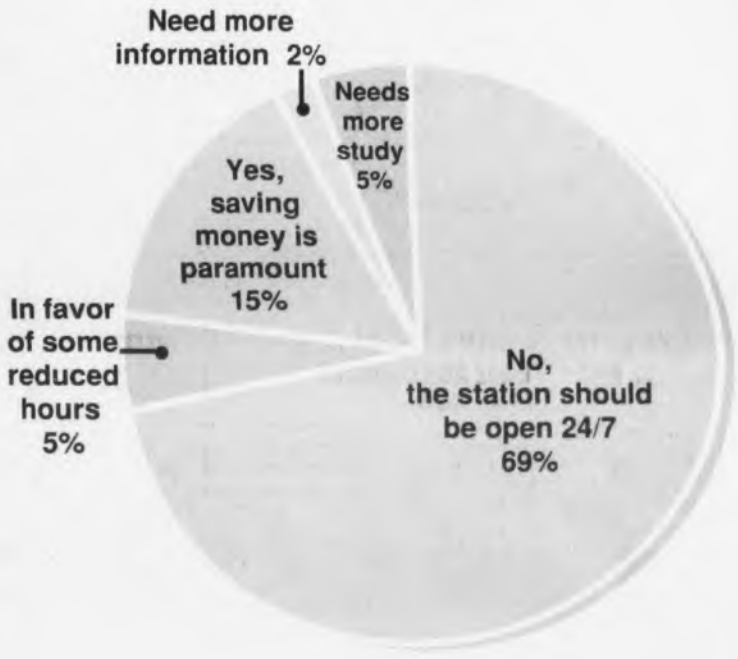
The driver of the truck was identified as Renato Silva, 26 years of age from Weymouth. Silva stated to officers that he was traveling south on North Main Street when he lost control of the truck and trailer. Silva was transported to South SHore Hospital in Weymouth with non-life threatening injuries. Silva does not have a driver license and will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for operating a motor vehicle without a license, driving to endanger, leaving the scene of an accident after property damage, and failure to drive in marked lanes.

The owner of the truck, a 40-yar-old Abington man, is being summonsed to court for allowing improper operation (subsequent offense). Police said he did not make sure this employee was licensed.

North Main Street between Cedar Street and the MBTA station was closed for over two hours while four heavy-duty wreckers attempted to remove the truck and trailer from the woods.

Poll results are in

Over the two weeks, there has been an interesting debate in the "blog-o-sphere" at www.wickedlocalcohasset.com on whether the police station should "go dark" much of the time.



The Cohasset Mariner thinks this potential policy/cultural shift for the town in terms of the way it staffs its police station is a big issue and put a poll up on www.wickedlocalcohasset.com

Please note that results are not scientific. The same person could vote from different computers. However, that opportunity is available to anyone so the results provided a window, we think, into public opinion.

Our web visitors were asked: Should the Cohasset Police Station "go dark" from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and all weekend long to save money?

Total votes in our poll were 175 as we went to press yesterday. The Mariner thanks all who voted. Please email editor Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com with more poll ideas.

FORMER CEDARMERE SITE

Construction draws controversy

Neighbors raise traffic concerns

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A new construction project on Beechwood Street is causing a neighborhood clamor over what will likely lead to a major increase in traffic at what has been a deadly intersection in the past.

The former "Cedarmere" construction project has circled back to Cohasset and raised new concerns. In February, the Toll Brothers home building company announced their intent to develop the vacant Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street into 41 detached single-family homes. The Planning Board has held several public hearings on the matter since then, with abutters voicing their fears that the new development will have a negative impact on the flow of traffic at the intersection of Beechwood and Route 3A. The hearing is continued to next week's Wednesday night Planning Board meeting.

The Toll Brothers project, according to abutter Richard Fitzpatrick, "will put 100 percent of the traffic from this new development onto the most dangerous intersection in Cohasset."

Abutters alerted the Board of Selectmen to their concerns, and the selectmen invited them to attend their Tuesday, May 1 meeting. Three neighbors attended, along with a representative from Toll Brothers and their attorney, Richard Henderson.

Abutter David Martell told the selectmen, "I'm not opposed to development — my biggest concern is the impact on traffic."

The last proposed project on the Hayes Estate site, also known as Cedarmere, consisted of 105 attached and detached homes. The project was shuttered during the economic downturn, and the site owners at the time, Leggatt McCall, surrendered their share of the property to ING in 2010. The Toll Brother's proposed project is much smaller, consisting of 41 detached homes.

However, neighbors have raised concerns because the plans indicate that the only access point into the development is on Beechwood Street.

"That section of Beechwood is very narrow; it's really a side street," said Fitzpatrick. "The traffic will prevent current residents from walking their dogs and biking."

Fitzpatrick concurred with Martell's statement. "None of the residents I've talked to are opposed to building houses there," he said. "The problem is the traffic."

Henderson told the selectmen that the project has already been studied, including the potential traffic issues. He emphasized that the Toll Brothers development is "not at all the same project" as the Cedarmere development. The attorney explained that countless research has been conducted with the engineers and public safety department specifically concerning traffic.

"More time has been spent on this issue than any other to date," said Henderson.

The abutters countered that more work should be done before construction begins; they are calling for an independent traffic report to be done "by someone else" other than the Toll Brothers.

"There is a history of three fatalities to date," said abutter Nick Staszko. "It's ranked the most dangerous intersection in Cohasset."

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski provided data from a traffic report by the Toll Brothers listing the crash rate calculation as 1.08. Over the past three years, he said, there have been 29 crashes; there was also a double fatality there 10 years ago.

"Even in the developer's own statistical analysis of it, their numbers don't argue with these facts," said Fitzpatrick. "It's especially concerning."

What the abutters are "primarily hoping for," said Fitzpatrick, is that the project "will open that 3A entrance and exit to alleviate pressure on the neighborhood."

Planning Board member David Drinan is acting as chair for the Toll Brothers hearing, as the board's chairman Stuart Ivimey has recused himself. Drinan said on the matter, "We've had a traffic study done by the applicant, our own engineer has engaged a traffic consultant... This has already been discussed at the hearings."

Member Al Moore responded to abutters during the hearings that they can compare the proposed development on Beechwood to other subdivisions that have single exits.

"You can look at Linden Drive, Fair Oaks Lane... Both have more homes and single exits, and there are no problems."

Moore added, "The applicants have studied this, it's been reviewed by engineers, and everyone's in agreement."

Corridor study

Selectmen said during Tuesday's meeting that they thought the Planning Board was going to do a corridor study of the entire length of 3A in Cohasset; Ivimey confirmed that this is in the works.

"Six months ago we made the decision to do a comprehensive study of 3A," said the chair. "We're concerned 3A is getting out of control... It's already dangerous, and some changes need to be made."

Ivimey said that state grants are available but will take a while to come in. The state owns the route and not the town, Ivimey added, so the Planning Board will have to "go to MassDOT with our recommendations."

The study could take a few years, and the Planning Board hopes to "involve the selectmen, fire department, police department, economic development committee, Chamber of Commerce and all the constituencies concerning 3A."

The selectmen said they would like to take a closer look at the traffic situation at the intersection of Beechwood and 3A and voted to send a letter to the Planning Board asking them to hold off on closing the Toll Brothers public hearing. The selectmen would like to further discuss the matter with the Planning Board first.

While selectmen chair Ted Carr said that the matter is not the selectmen's jurisdiction, selectman Fred Koed said that he feels the selectmen are within their right to weigh in.

Ivimey made it clear in a phone call that there is little the Planning Board can do about the matter.

While a member of the selectmen is welcome to opine on the matter during the public comment period, the Planning Board chair said, they are legally obligated to continue the hearing as scheduled.

"The Planning Board in this capacity acts as a quasi-judicial board," said Ivimey. "Zoning bylaws and Mass. general laws require us to hold this hearing to determine whether the application complies with the bylaws; that's fundamentally all we do. We have to make sure the applicant complies with the law; if it does, we are duty-bound to do it... To a large degree, we share the frustrations of the abutters, but our ability to influence a developer is limited by what the statute lets us do."

The town-owned property at 821 Jerusalem Road will be auctioned on Thursday, May 10. The town acquired the property through a tax title foreclosure.

Registration is at 5 p.m.; the auction begins at 6 p.m. in the Board of Selectmen's office on the second floor of Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

An open house for the property was held on Thursday, May 3. Upon successful bid, the minimum required deposit is $5,000, non-refundable, payable in money order or bank check.

Bidder's Information Packages are available at the Town Manager's office starting Monday, April 23, for $25 in print; electronic copies are free by contacting tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org.

The town manager's office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and until 1 p.m. on Friday. The office is open until 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

For more information on the auction, call the Town Manager's office: (781) 383-4105.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Reception for new principal

The new Middle-High School Principal, Carolyn M. Connolly, will be feted at a welcome reception in the High School Skipper Café on Wednesday, May 16, starting at 7 p.m.

Resumes still being collected

The search for a new Director of Student Services is still underway; Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that resumes will continue to be collected through May 11.

Those interested in joining the search committee for a new Director of Student Services should contact the Superintendent's office by May 7 at 781-383-6111.

Last day of school

Cohasset district's official last of school will be Monday, June 18, as voted on by the School Committee.

CTO interviews are completed

Another position the schools are seeking to fill: a school- and town-wide Chief Technology Officer (CTO). The position was created by Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski and posted last month. Cataldo announced last week, "We had our interviews, and we are working with somebody to do a contract."

The schools and town will split the workload and the pay for the position 60-40, officials said.

The funding for the job already exists in the school budget, and the town will pick up a portion of the salary through the technology budget. The CTO is expected to earn an annual salary of $110,000 to $120,000, which is about what the Director of Technology position has earned.

The CTO position redefines the current Director of Technology job, expanding on the scope of work to include the town side of operations. The new position is also year-round.

FORMER CEDARMERE SITE

Construction draws controversy

Neighbors raise traffic concerns

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A new construction project on Beechwood Street is causing a neighborhood clamor over what will likely lead to a major increase in traffic at what has been a deadly intersection in the past.

The former "Cedarmere" construction project has circled back to Cohasset and raised new concerns. In February, the Toll Brothers home building company announced their intent to develop the vacant Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street into 41 detached single-family homes. The Planning Board has held several public hearings on the matter since then, with abutters voicing their fears that the new development will have a negative impact on the flow of traffic at the intersection of Beechwood and Route 3A. The hearing is continued to next week's Wednesday night Planning Board meeting.

The Toll Brothers project, according to abutter Richard Fitzpatrick, "will put 100 percent of the traffic from this new development onto the most dangerous intersection in Cohasset."

Abutters alerted the Board of Selectmen to their concerns, and the selectmen invited them to attend their Tuesday, May 1 meeting. Three neighbors attended, along with a representative from Toll Brothers and their attorney, Richard Henderson.

Abutter David Martell told the selectmen, "I'm not opposed to development — my biggest concern is the impact on traffic."

The last proposed project on the Hayes Estate site, also known as Cedarmere, consisted of 105 attached and detached homes. The project was shuttered during the economic downturn, and the site owners at the time, Leggatt McCall, surrendered their share of the property to ING in 2010. The Toll Brother's proposed project is much smaller, consisting of 41 detached homes.

However, neighbors have raised concerns because the plans indicate that the only access point into the development is on Beechwood Street.

"That section of Beechwood is very narrow; it's really a side street," said Fitzpatrick. "The traffic will prevent current residents from walking their dogs and biking."

Fitzpatrick concurred with Martell's statement. "None of the residents I've talked to are opposed to building houses there," he said. "The problem is the traffic."

Henderson told the selectmen that the project has already been studied, including the potential traffic issues. He emphasized that the Toll Brothers development is "not at all the same project" as the Cedarmere development. The attorney explained that countless research has been conducted with the engineers and public safety department specifically concerning traffic.

"More time has been spent on this issue than any other to date," said Henderson.

The abutters countered that more work should be done before construction begins; they are calling for an independent traffic report to be done "by someone else" other than the Toll Brothers.

"There is a history of three fatalities to date," said abutter Nick Staszko. "It's ranked the most dangerous intersection in Cohasset."

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski provided data from a traffic report by the Toll Brothers listing the crash rate calculation as 1.08. Over the past three years, he said, there have been 29 crashes; there was also a double fatality there 10 years ago.

"Even in the developer's own statistical analysis of it, their numbers don't argue with these facts," said Fitzpatrick. "It's especially concerning."

What the abutters are "primarily hoping for," said Fitzpatrick, is that the project "will open that 3A entrance and exit to alleviate pressure on the neighborhood."

Planning Board member David Drinan is acting as chair for the Toll Brothers hearing, as the board's chairman Stuart Ivimey has recused himself. Drinan said on the matter, "We've had a traffic study done by the applicant, our own engineer has engaged a traffic consultant... This has already been discussed at the hearings."

Member Al Moore responded to abutters during the hearings that they can compare the proposed development on Beechwood to other subdivisions that have single exits.

"You can look at Linden Drive, Fair Oaks Lane... Both have more homes and single exits, and there are no problems."

Moore added, "The applicants have studied this, it's been reviewed by engineers, and everyone's in agreement."

Corridor study

Selectmen said during Tuesday's meeting that they thought the Planning Board was going to do a corridor study of the entire length of 3A in Cohasset; Ivimey confirmed that this is in the works.

"Six months ago we made the decision to do a comprehensive study of 3A," said the chair. "We're concerned 3A is getting out of control... It's already dangerous, and some changes need to be made."

Ivimey said that state grants are available but will take a while to come in. The state owns the route and not the town, Ivimey added, so the Planning Board will have to "go to MassDOT with our recommendations."

The study could take a few years, and the Planning Board hopes to "involve the selectmen, fire department, police department, economic development committee, Chamber of Commerce and all the constituencies concerning 3A."

The selectmen said they would like to take a closer look at the traffic situation at the intersection of Beechwood and 3A and voted to send a letter to the Planning Board asking them to hold off on closing the Toll Brothers public hearing. The selectmen would like to further discuss the matter with the Planning Board first.

While selectmen chair Ted Carr said that the matter is not the selectmen's jurisdiction, selectman Fred Koed said that he feels the selectmen are within their right to weigh in.

Ivimey made it clear in a phone call that there is little the Planning Board can do about the matter.

While a member of the selectmen is welcome to opine on the matter during the public comment period, the Planning Board chair said, they are legally obligated to continue the hearing as scheduled.

"The Planning Board in this capacity acts as a quasi-judicial board," said Ivimey. "Zoning bylaws and Mass. general laws require us to hold this hearing to determine whether the application complies with the bylaws; that's fundamentally all we do. We have to make sure the applicant complies with the law; if it does, we are duty-bound to do it... To a large degree, we share the frustrations of the abutters, but our ability to influence a developer is limited by what the statute lets us do."

Jerusalem Road home up for auction

The town-owned property at 821 Jerusalem Road will be auctioned on Thursday, May 10. The town acquired the property through a tax title foreclosure.

Registration is at 5 p.m.; the auction begins at 6 p.m. in the Board of Selectmen's office on the second floor of Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

An open house for the property was held on Thursday, May 3. Upon successful bid, the minimum required deposit is $5,000, non-refundable, payable in money order or bank check.

Bidder's Information Packages are available at the Town Manager's office starting Monday, April 23, for $25 in print; electronic copies are free by contacting tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org.

The town manager's office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday and until 1 p.m. on Friday. The office is open until 7 p.m. on Tuesday.

For more information on the auction, call the Town Manager's office: (781) 383-4105.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Reception for new principal

The new Middle-High School Principal, Carolyn M. Connolly, will be feted at a welcome reception in the High School Skipper Café on Wednesday, May 16, starting at 7 p.m.

Resumes still being collected

The search for a new Director of Student Services is still underway; Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that resumes will continue to be collected through May 11.

Those interested in joining the search committee for a new Director of Student Services should contact the Superintendent's office by May 7 at 781-383-6111.

Last day of school

Cohasset district's official last of school will be Monday, June 18, as voted on by the School Committee.

CTO interviews are completed

Another position the schools are seeking to fill: a school- and town-wide Chief Technology Officer (CTO). The position was created by Superintendent Barbara Cataldo and interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski and posted last month. Cataldo announced last week, "We had our interviews, and we are working with somebody to do a contract."

The schools and town will split the workload and the pay for the position 60-40, officials said.

The funding for the job already exists in the school budget, and the town will pick up a portion of the salary through the technology budget. The CTO is expected to earn an annual salary of $110,000 to $120,000, which is about what the Director of Technology position has earned.

The CTO position redefines the current Director of Technology job, expanding on the scope of work to include the town side of operations. The new position is also year-round.

SSGT Bryan M. Healy is airman of the year

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Bittersweet

Hi Cohasset and happy May 2012. I cannot believe that we are at this time of year as all year long I keep saying to myself, "Graduation is a long ways away..." Well, three weeks away is the CHS Class of 2012 last day of school, (May 24) followed by Prom on the 25th and oh man, Graduation the first weekend in June. All so bittersweet for me because Callie is one of the Seniors this year and I am so happy for her but oh my gosh, 18 years are gone??? Wow, it just doesn't seem possible.

Staff Sergeant Bryan M. Healy has been awarded Airman of the Year. COURTESY PHOTO

Top Airman

Staff Sergeant Bryan M. Healy has been awarded Airman of the Year. This past week Staff Sergeant Bryan Healy was flown from Westover A.F.B. in Massachusetts to San Antonio, Texas to Lackland A.F.B. to receive this award and medal.

As a security forces fire team member, SSGT Healy deployed to Kandahar Air Base, Afghanistan where he responded to a rocket attack and provided critical aid to a wounded member with a sucking chest wound, saving his life.

He assisted in the apprehension of three Taliban operatives, disrupting future indirect fire and ground attacks at Kandahar Air Base. His vigilance was critical, in detecting three holes in the base boundary fence line. Helping eliminate vulnerabilities and bolstering security of $40 billion dollars in air assets.

Finally SSGT Healy responded to 20 indirect fire attacks and unexploded ordnances with disregard to his own safety, securing the scene each time and saving countless lives.

SSGT Healy's father, Bob Healy attended the award ceremonies in Texas on April 27, 2012.

Bryan, we are so proud of you!

GIMME SHELTER

Gloria is a shy girl

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for shelter for Gloria. Gloria is a Tuxedo female with a great disposition. She's a bit on the shy side, but delights in having people pet her and would make a wonderful companion cat, who adores humans. She's young, and quite the beauty. Please stop by during open hours and visit her.

HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

ALLERGYEATS

said. "In two years, we've established ourselves as the go-to resource [for diners with food allergies]. This opportunity will help us expand."

Expansion is key for the AllergyEats website and app in order to have a greater influence on restaurants nationwide, Antico explained: "For the community, the more it grows, the better."

The mobile app is a natural extension of the AllergyEats website, said Antico. "When you're traveling, and need to find a restaurant here, it makes sense." Besides, the founder continued, as computer technology moves further away from personal computers toward tablet-based platforms, apps are, essentially, the future.

"I always knew I wanted to do it," Antico said of creating a corresponding app for the AllergyEats website, adding that he has heard through his business dealings that, "In five years, every website is going to be an app. For food allergies, it had to be done."

Antico's work with AllergyEats led to his appointment on two allergy boards of directors: the Asthma & Allergy Foundation of America (AAFA) along with its New England chapter (AAFANE).

According to the AAFA, while 3-4 percent of children have allergic reactions or sensitivities to food that they may outgrow by age four, only 1-2 percent have true food allergies. The same small percentage of adults have true food allergies. But the total number of food allergy sufferers in the U.S. alone is 15 million, according to foodallergy.org; 6 million of these are children.

There are eight foods that cause 90 percent of food-allergic reactions: dairy, eggs, wheat, soy, peanuts, tree nuts, fish and shellfish.

The journey toward AllergyEats began when Antico was frustrated one night driving around the area looking for a place to take his two boys to dinner. Not only did he have to deal with the usual Saturday night dinner rush, making it difficult to get seated anywhere — Antico also had to work around his sons' food allergies.

A former Fidelity financial analyst and mutual fund manager, Antico said that it's his nature to problem solve.

"I saw a need for something. With my background, and in my own frustration, I thought, 'I can solve that,' and there's a business opportunity now.'"

Antico left Fidelity in 2008 to pursue independent ventures, including his allergy guide brainchild.

"The idea came to me six years ago, and I started [AllergyEats] four years ago, the week after I left Fidelity," Antico recalled. While the business venture has yet to return much of a profit – "It's been all cost, zero revenue so far," the founder said – Antico said that he is in this for the greater good.

"It could succeed for the [food allergic] community and fail for me financially, or it works for the community and could become a profitable venture. It would be nice if it makes a return at some point, but it will only make money if it succeeds for the community."

But the AllergyEats founder doesn't seem too concerned about the profits.

"The irony is that, ultimately, I want the site to go under because there's no longer a need for it."

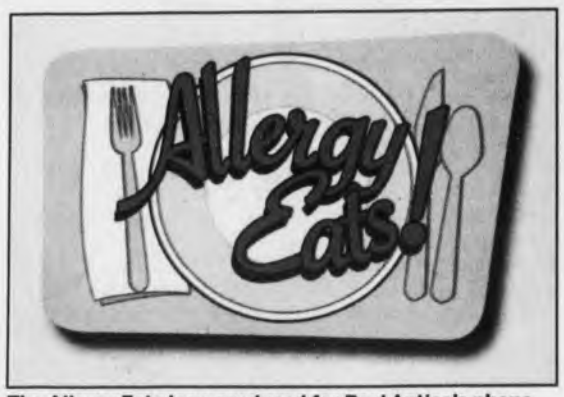
Antico's hope as an allergy advocate is that, one day, restaurants everywhere will be so cognizant of the various food allergies, they will be fully prepared to cater to food allergic customers. AllergyEats functions as a portal for folks to rate restaurants and share their experiences; Antico also runs a blog section of the site where he and other AllergyEats bloggers regularly review places, often putting the pressure on restaurants that don't meet up to their standards.

Antico said that it's nothing personal: "I dig them constantly," he said of certain casual dining chains. "My single goal is I want everyone to get better."

AllergyEats, as an app and a website, serves a dual purpose to both help the food allergic community find suitable dining options and to educate restaurants that may not be up to par on their allergy-free food options. In turn, restaurants that do strive to cater to this specific need rely on the site to spread the word and attract more customers.

Paul Antico, of Cohasset, in his Scituate office overlooking the harbor.

Some establishments are so confident, in fact, that they pass out an index card with the AllergyEats logo, website link and mobile barcode reader (which customers can scan to download the app on their iPhone or Android device) encouraging customers to use AllergyEats to rate their service.



"We're trying to get more restaurants to carry the card," Antico said. "We have it because it brings people to the site; plus the restaurant knows it's going to get higher ratings and know it's going to do well... It opens up possibilities for them."

The major goal of AllergyEats, Antico said: "We want to help restaurants that want to get better at this."

Smartphone users all over the U.S. can utilize the AllergyEats app on the go. But what happens when they need to find allergy-friendly food overseas? Will AllergyEats make an app for that?

Antico said that while he owns the Canadian web domain and could eventually create an AllergyEats site for that country, he is not so sure about going international just yet — although he has had a number of requests.

"I've gotten requests for Canada, the U.K., Australia, Israel, Egypt," Antico listed. "In the long term, it would be great. I'd love to do it, and it might happen. But in the U.S. alone, we've got 600,000 restaurants [rated so far] and over 15 million food allergic individuals."

In the meantime, Antico hopes to expand AllergyEats to include reviews of and guides for schools, hotels, airports and resorts. The first piece of that plan is the AllergyEats micro site for Disney World.

Antico said he launched the Disney section of his site because, "For many people, Disney is the first place you take your kids out to eat. They have that reputation — it's the place to go. The whole culture at Disney... everything is always exactly perfect," Antico explained. "They know how to treat people and figure out how to accommodate you. Some restaurants you go to say, 'Here's what you can eat.' Disney asks, 'What do you want?'"

And the look on a child's face when he or she is asked what they want, Antico said, "is amazing. Disney is fantastic; it's the gold standard."

The short-term goal for AllergyEats, then? Raising national awareness, both for the site and for food allergies in general.

"We have a great, great presence in eastern Mass., but there are a lot of people who don't know about it, even in our best market," Antico said. "How do we reach 15 million people?"

One way is to send brochures to allergists, "the one place where all food allergic people go," explained Antico.

To keep AllergyEats users coming back, the site offers special discounts for diners who mention AllergyEats at participating restaurants.

For all of its successes, including national attention from the recent About.com award, Antico said that he is always striving for more.

"Fidelity had a phrase from the Japanese term 'kaizen,' which means 'continuous improvement,'" he said. "Over the past few years, we've made improvements from user comments. We need to know what people want."

Another goal, said Antico, is to raise the AllergyEats apps' popularity as an iTunes download. "We want the app to be higher rated on iTunes and bring people to the site," he said. "Most importantly, we want to keep the users coming back."

AllergyEats has received numerous endorsements from food, health and allergy organizations, including the AAFA, Gluten Intolerance Group, and Mass. Restaurant Association. For more information, visit www.AllergyEats.com

CPC UPDATE

Selectmen vote to recommend ATM article

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"If we could get that thing to an antiques road show, the appraiser would say, 'You have a national treasure.' It's a very special building, and it belongs to all of us, not just a small group of people."
Rodney Hobson, First Parish

What other building in town is more historic?

That's the question posed by Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee regarding the town's First Parish Meeting House, and whether Town Meeting should agree to appropriate $65,000 from CPC funds to restore the building's windows. It's the question that ultimately swayed the Board of Selectmen into voting 3-1 to recommend the CPC's article for Town Meeting.

First Parish first approached the CPC in January to pay for the window repairs, and the CPC voted 7-1 in favor of funding the project. The CPC then prepared a warrant article asking Town Meeting to vote for $65,000 in CPC funds to pay for these renovations.

This issue has been debated across boards, the main issues of concern being whether or not the matter violates the separation of church and state or is an inappropriate use of public funds for a private structure.

While the Advisory Committee voted 3-2 to reject the CPC's article, members of the CPC came before the selectmen on Thursday, April 26 to make their case for the article once again.

After hearing from both members of the CPC who argued for the historic value of the Meeting House as Cohasset's "icon" and one resident who has stated that the project is illegal, the selectmen voted 3-1 to recommend the article (selectman Diane Kennedy was representing the board at another meeting).

Before opening the issue up for public comment, selectmen chair Ted Carr reported that he made good on his promise to call up the Attorney General's office to seek an opinion on whether this matter violates the separation of church and state. Town Counsel has already opined that this is an appropriate use of CPC funds, while the national Americans United for the Separation of Church and State wrote a letter to the CPC expressing their disapproval of the project.

Carr said those he spoke to in the AG's office said that they have dealt with this issue in the past, and "didn't throw up any red flags."

Resident and attorney Howie Altholtz, who has come before both the CPC and selectmen several times to voice his opposition to the project on the grounds of a church-state violation, noted that Americans United wrote a three-page letter that Town Counsel opined on with 24 hours of receiving it. Altholtz called their opinion "rushed."

CPC members came ready to defend their reasons for supporting First Parish's project. Also in the audience: Meeting House parishioner Rodney Hobson, who gives tours of the building, as well as the Cohasset Historical Society's president, Kathy O'Malley. Both vouched for the building's historic significance.

"If we could get that thing to an antiques road show, the appraiser would say, 'You have a national treasure,'" said Hobson. "It's a very special building, and it belongs to all of us, not just a small group of people."

By way of background, Hobson explained that, before the separation of church and state took place in Mass. in 1820, the Meeting House was used for town meetings; the Declaration of Independence was even read from the pulpit.

"People never referred to the Meeting House as a church," said Hobson. "The church was the people in the building."

O'Malley came to address the question of whether or not the Meeting House is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Altholtz previously noted that First Parish is in the district but is not actually listed on the register.

"The fact is, it's in the historic district and the building is eligible," said O'Malley.

CPC member and architect Susan Hoadley told the selectmen that the Meeting House "is one of the things that makes Cohasset special." She added that while she is not a member of any church in town, she appreciates the beauty of the Meeting House and is grateful that First Parish approached the CPC to help preserve it.

Hoadley further told the board that if they look up "Cohasset" online, one of the first things they'll see is the Meeting House.

"In 2012, the most prolific reference to anything anywhere is Wikipedia. Type in Cohasset, you'll get a picture of the church, the [town] seal with [the church] on it, and another picture of the church," said Hoadley. "This is an icon of the town."

CPC member Todd Goff, an architectural historian, said that there is "no single artifact of more importance to the essence and culture of the town of Cohasset than the Meeting House."

Goff added that the sight of the Meeting House on the town common is one of the things that drew him to Cohasset and led him to move his family here.

"I drove down the common, saw that building — that was it," said Goff. "We have to realize as a community that this is our most historic building."

Goff also stressed the importance of caring for historic structures properly. "It's incumbent on us, our responsibility to use proper stewardship," he said. "When we carelessly neglect [old buildings], they dilapidate and never come back. Before you know it, you're in a geography of nowhere. You could be in Cleveland or Austin — that's not Cohasset."

The company that the CPC would hire to restore the windows knows how to handle antique windows, said CPC chair Russ Bonetti, and is completing a CPC-approved project on St. Paul's church in Nantucket.

CPC member Susan Sardina also chimed in that the CPC has funded numerous similar projects throughout the state.

Altholtz maintained that many of these projects have since been challenged. He also wondered what churches did before the CPC, arguing that Cohasset's First Parish got along just fine.

When selectman Fred Koed said, "The building has survived all this time for a reason," Altholtz countered, "It was supported by its congregation, as it should be." He noted that the Unitarian Universalist Association has grant money and loans available to fund such projects.

Selectman Leland Jenkins, who sits on the CPC and is the sole member who voted against the project, maintained his stance that approving such a project for one church "opens a can of worms."

Hoadley said that other churches probably wouldn't get approved; First Parish is the exception because of its place on the town seal.

Carr asked Bonetti what would happen if other churches approached the CPC; Bonetti replied that while it's difficult to know offhand, "my feeling is, if they meet the bar that the First Parish building does, I see no reason they shouldn't get it... To me it doesn't really hold water," he said of the argument against public funding of private buildings.

Altholtz said that while he doesn't dispute the structure's historic significance, he feels the project is a misappropriation of funds that could pay for other projects: "We have so many other needs."

"I'm happy to concede everything everyone says is probably all true, but for the purpose of the law that prohibits this grant, none of that matters," said Altholtz. "Words matter; let's just be clear. There's no exemption for pretty buildings... The law is the law."

After hearing all of the arguments, the selectmen still seemed to be mulling over the issues.

Selectman Paul Carlson said that he was ambivalent on whether or not to recommend the article. "I know we can," he said of using public monies to fund a private, religious institution. "It's a question of whether we should."

"It really is the big icon of the town," said selectman Fred Koed of the Meeting House. "Is there another building in town with more historical importance than that building? I'm at a loss."

Carr said that as someone who worked in government, he is sensitive to the separation of church and state and thought that Altholtz made a valid argument. However, said Carr, "I've changed my mind; I'm going to support this [article]. I think Town Meeting should decide."

Jenkins added, "I'm all for Town Meeting to vote on this."

Altholtz said in a statement emailed Friday morning, "Town Meeting will be able to figure out that when you vote with your heart instead of your head, it usually comes out of your wallet."

Church-state debate aired on 'Our Town'

CPC chair Russ Bonetti and attorney Howie Altholtz filmed an episode of "Our Town" this week discussing the First Parish Meeting House window restoration project and the matter of private vs. public, church vs. state.

The episode will on Thursday at 8 p.m. and again at noon on Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday.

"Our Town" airs on Comcast channels 10 and 22 and Verizon channels 36 and 37.

Open Meeting Law violation?

Since five out of seven CPC members, including selectman Leland Jenkins, were present at the Board of Selectmen meeting to discuss committee business, the Mariner asked the CPC chairman whether or not this tripped the Open Meeting Law. Chairman Russ Bonetti submitted the matter to the Town Clerk on Monday to investigate the matter further.

CPA funds: a refresher

- The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns, including Cohasset, have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space, rehabilitate historic structures, and develop affordable housing.
- CPA funds are generated from two sources: a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset, 1.5 percent), and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
- The Community Preservation Committee reviews projects and makes recommendations to Town Meeting, where voters have the final say.

Annual Town Meeting

When: Saturday, May 12, 2012, starting at 9 a.m.; continued to Monday, May 21 at 7 p.m.

Where: Cohasset High School gym, 143 Pond Street

How many articles? 40

Hot topics: Voters will be asked to consider, among other articles...

- An appropriation or transfer of 5 percent of the town's annual operating budget to the Stabilization Fund; $400,000 is the anticipated amount that will be allocated in fiscal year 2013
- A new tax on meals and hotel stays in town; the meals tax would be 0.75 percent; both taxes would take effect on July 1, 2012; the estimated revenue stream from the additional taxes is estimated to be around $150,000 annually
- A citizens' petition to consolidate the water and sewer commissions into a single board and to also hire a full-time supervisor of both plants
- An article from the town manager to fund a study on the legalities of restructuring water and sewer; each commission would pay $10K from its enterprise fund
- The water systems operations contract; Town Meeting will vote whether to authorize the Water Commission to negotiate with and enter into a five year contract for operation, maintenance and management of the town's water company
- Land and easement transfers for the proposed Senior Center project; this article has six sections involving parcels of land on North Main and Sohier streets
- Community Preservation Act monies to pay for clock and window repairs to First Parish; the clock is owned by the town, while the church owns the windows; the clock repairs will cost $12,500 while the window replacements cost $65,000; the CPC's articles were originally broken up but have been consolidated into one article with three separate motions
- A bylaw amendment to ban all cigarette sales in Cohasset stores that have pharmacies, namely CVS, Walgreens and Stop & Shop
- $15,000 to fund a feasibility study to install a pipe to mitigate flooding at Treat's Pond

The warrant has been mailed out to residents and is also available to view in its entirety online: http://www.cohassetmass.org/

Cohasset Walk for MS is May 5

Hundreds of people from Cohasset and across the South Shore will come together May 5 for Walk MS, presented by Biogen Idec and Elan, to help individuals and families address the challenges of living with multiple sclerosis. Organized by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Walk MS is a 6-mile route that starts and finishes at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset. Check-in opens at 9 a.m., and the official start is 10 a.m. Walk MS is a fundraising event that enables MS education, support, advocacy and services for people affected by multiple sclerosis, while it supports research and treatment to stop disease progression, restore function lost and end MS for future generations. Each walker, 12-years-old and older, is required to raise at least $25. T-shirts will be awarded for at least $100 in fundraising, but historically walkers easily average more than $200. And, there are prizes for higher levels of fundraising. Family members and coworkers have fun forming teams, who walk and fundraise together in support of a loved one or friend with MS. Individual walkers and teams should register online at www.walkMSgne.org, to take full advantage of e-fundraising tools. Registrations are also accepted by calling 800-344-4867 opt. 2, or in-person at the walk. Volunteers are needed to make the day run smoothly. For information about walking, fundraising or volunteering visit walkMSgne@nmss.org.

Donations in support of walkers and teams may be made online, at www.walkMSgne.org. Click on the Donate/ePledge link, select Massachusetts, Cohasset Walk MS, and enter the name of the individual or team one wants to support. Of the many sponsors that make Walk MS possible each year, the most loyal and generous are Biogen Idec & Elan, EMD Serono Pfizer, Bernie & Phyl's Furniture, Data Associates, Patients Like Me, WCVB-TV5, Honest Tea and Pure Protein.

The 8-mile MS Journey of Hope will take place May 12 at Natick High School to help fund patient support programs at MS Clinical Care Centers. There are more Walk MS locations and dates in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, plus there will be fall walks.

Multiple sclerosis interrupts the flow of information between brain and body and can stop people from moving forward in their lives. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted, but advances in research and treatment are moving closer to a world free of MS. MS is typically diagnosed between ages 20 and 50, but teenagers and even young children can have the disease. MS affects women nearly three times more often than men. There are more than 19,000 people with MS in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont; 400,000 cases in the United States, and 2.1 million worldwide.

Early and ongoing treatment with an FDA-approved therapy can make a difference for people with multiple sclerosis. Learn about options by talking to a health care professional and contacting the National MS Society at nationalMSsociety.org or 800-344-4867.

OUR VIEW

Another look at the Meals Tax

Editor's note: this is a reprint of our February editorial suggesting Cohasset take another look at the Meals Tax. With the proposal before the annual Town Meeting – we thought it might be useful to reprint the editorial this week.

It did not happen easily or without controversy — but it has turned into a good news story next door in Hingham.

In April 2010, Hingham Town Meeting, by a narrow margin, approved the local option meals tax that imposed a 0.75 percent (three quarters of one percent) sales tax on meals over what the state already gets. Money from additional tax goes to Hingham.

The state meals tax is 6.25 percent; with the local option, the meals tax rises to 7 percent. Thus a $40 restaurant tab generates $2.80 in meals tax, of which 30 cents goes to a city or town that has enacted the local option, according to the state Department of Revenue.

The Hingham revenue stream was initially estimated at $250,000 to $300,000 a year but, as was announced at that town's recent Economic Forum, receipts are running at an expected $600,000 annually.

Hingham selectmen are proposing to use the meals tax revenue for property tax relief as that town faces paying off large capital projects including a new middle school.

Cohasset soundly rejected adopting the meals tax when it was brought before the November 2010 Special Town Meeting along with the proposed room occupancy tax for hotels and motels.

At that time the meals tax was projected to bring in $100,000 in revenue annually for Cohasset. At that November Special Town Meeting no one spoke in favor of the meals or hotel taxes - the general consensus was it was unfair to tax a segment of the business community.

While we don't necessarily think the hotels tax would be a good idea for Cohasset whose establishments have to remain competitive with other regional hotels and motels — in light of Hingham's success, we think Cohasset should take another look at the meals tax. It does not appear to have been a hardship on either patrons or the restaurants in Hingham.

Cohasset has a mix of great restaurants. A lot of area and local residents make a night out in Cohasset their "destination." As Hingham has proven, we do not think adding a few cents to the meals tax will keep them away and the revenue could be a big help in these tough economic times.

Weighing in on 'dark' police station

• There are police forces all over the country on regional 911 centers

• Many close the building at night/But still have the same force of officers on the street

• The cost of covering 128 hours of attendants would be over $100,000 at year and they are not Police officers

• I know of a Midwestern college town with a population of more than double Cohasset that closes its police station a night. They have an outside phone to regional dispatch that also triggers a message to the officer on duty working the zone encompassing the station. It is a simple system that works.

• We are in the 21St Century. The police station could have an interactive screen, telephone to SSRECC. Can't that be the same as talking to a dispatcher face to face? People who have been in access control buildings may have experienced this.

• We should not be afraid of this change. I take exception to the remarks by the Mass. Chiefs, they are highly biased and fear mongering and have their own membership to protect.

• I support the police department in the capital improvements needed to their headquarters to make this work.

• All obstacles not planned for in the original agreement can be overcome.

Merging sewer and water departments

There are strong arguments for combining the sewer and water departments under one management. As usual, however, the devil is in the details, and the details could reveal important matters to resolve. That is why it makes sense to spend a few months developing a plan that addresses as many details as possible and is then ready to consider adopting at a future town meeting.

At the upcoming Town Meeting, Acting Town Manager Milanoski will present a proposal to spend several months developing a comprehensive merger plan to be voted on at next year's Town Meeting. That is better than asking voters to buy a pig in a poke at the upcoming Town Meeting, by committing blindly to a merger, as one well-meaning proponent has proposed.

It makes little sense to ask voters to consider also the competing proposal calling for an immediate decision to merge the two departments, before the difficulties and solutions have been determined. Better that all parties get behind Milanoski's proposal to develop the specifics before committing to a plan.

Best remember the old rule for carpenters and pipefitters: "Measure twice and cut once."

Deeply grateful for our volunteers

On April 27, the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs sponsored a luncheon at Atlantica Restaurant, recognizing the volunteers who have helped so many of Cohasset's seniors during the last year. Over 150 kind individuals have offered up their time and energy to drive our seniors to medical appointments or shopping, to deliver meals to the homebound, to cook and serve congregate meals at Three North Main Street, to pay a friendly visit, make telephone reassurance calls, bake for Cohasset Cafe...the list goes on.

Without the support of these thoughtful people, many seniors in town would struggle to accomplish the simple goals of day-to-day living. Our volunteers are instrumental in assisting Cohasset Elder Affairs to accomplish its mission of ensuring seniors stay connected to our town, and independent as long as possible. We thank you all.

In addition to the individuals who have provided support, we would like to recognize the following local businesses who have generously offered their services: Atlantica Restaurant, Five South Main Street, French Memories Café, The Red Lion Inn, Cohasset Pizza House, Golden Living and St. Stephen's Church.

Please know that everything you do is appreciated beyond measure.

COMMENTARY

Management is key going forward

KAREN QUIGLEY

It makes sense to put the onus on a qualified professional rather than part-time citizen volunteers who rely on the consulting engineers and plant operators to make decisions

The purpose of Article 21 on the May 12 Town Meeting Warrant is to improve the way we manage, not operate, our water and sewer departments.

It's not the first: in November 2010, 140 citizens from all over town signed a citizens' petition that was withdrawn pending recommendations of the audit and assurances of significant changes. And yet, here we are in 2012 with no discussion, no changes. Just more promises.

While it's a citizens' petition, it is based entirely on the identical recommendations of two independent professional consulting reports commissioned by Town Hall and paid for with our tax dollars: the 2004 MMA Consulting Group Report and 2010 the Melanson, Heath Audit. Do we really need to pay for a third?

The consultants' recommendations are also supported by the town auditor in their management letters and are consistent with the DOR's best management practices.

The reports recommend combining the commissions into a 5-person board that is appointed and advisory, and the creation of a supervisory position reporting to the Town Manager and Finance Director to manage our municipal utilities.

It makes sense to put the onus on a qualified professional rather than part-time citizen volunteers who rely on the consulting engineers and plant operators to make decisions. While well intentioned they don't have the skill sets and expertise to challenge the professionals: they're not supposed to. History has shown we need someone who does.

The audit provides a proposal for paying for this new position by reducing the scope of the plant operation contracts and contract engineering services costs so as not to add additional costs to the Town.

Creating a utility superintendent is prudent. What is unwise is ignoring the professional recommendations, clinging to the status quo, and refusing to make the changes necessary to ensure Cohasset's financial future out of recalcitrance, fear or misplaced loyalty. This isn't some new, wild idea. It's been the trend in municipal government for some time and is a tried and true management model.

The time for talk is over. The time for action is now. If your elected officials won't, we must. Please attend Town Meeting, Monday, May 12. Your vote does make a difference.

HEALTH NOTES

Steps to prevent tick bites

STEVE BOBO

We tend to think of Lyme disease as the principal illness we can obtain from ticks. Unfortunately, however, over a dozen other diseases can be contracted from ticks.

Byproduct of a year without storms - snow or otherwise As noted in last week's notice of odd (Squirrely) weather; the unusual number of varmints — including squirrels and rabbits, etc. have appeared. This week we recall some of the possible means for contracting illnesses from such animals and their passengers: fleas, ticks and such, during the forthcoming good weather. Several people have reported such infestation of their pets and sometimes themselves by ticks and such.

Hopefully the weather's getting better; we'll spend more time outdoors. We've already heard of numerous tick sightings, which indicate an early tick season, so it's time to think about getting prepared and to remember how to prevent tick bites.

We tend to think of Lyme disease as the principal illness we can obtain from ticks. Unfortunately, however, over a dozen other diseases can be contracted from ticks. Some species and life stages of ticks are so small that they can be difficult to see, but all hungrily look for animals and, sometimes people, to bite. We find ticks in various environments, often in or near wooded areas; when walking through infested areas or by brushing up against vegetation (such as leaf litter or shrubs). Ticks also feed on mammals and birds, which help feed them as well as the pathogens they carry. Fortunately, there are some simple steps you can take to protect yourself and your family:

Avoid tick-infested areas. Many local health departments, parks and cooperative extension services have in-formation about the areas most infested with ticks. If you are in a tick-infested area, walk in the center of trails to avoid contact with vegetation. Wear light-colored clothing, which allows you to see ticks that are crawling on your clothing. Tuck your pant legs into your socks so that ticks cannot crawl up inside. Some ticks can crawl down into shoes and are small enough to crawl through most socks.

Chemical repellent with DEET which contains Permethrin can be sprayed on boots and clothing and will re-main protective for several days. It can be applied to the skin but will protect for only a few hours before reapplication is necessary. Parents may apply this product to their children, avoiding the hands, eyes and mouth. Contact the Board of Health concerning the use of Deet with children.

Perform daily tick checks. Check your body for ticks after being outdoors, even in your own yard. Conduct a body check upon return from potentially tick-infested areas by searching your entire body for ticks. Use a hand-held or full-length mirror to view all parts of your body and remove any tick you find. Check under the arms; in and around the ears; inside navel; back of the knees; in and around the hair; between the legs; around the waist.

Check your children for ticks, especially in the hair, when returning from potentially tick-infested areas. Ticks may be carried into the house on clothing and pets, which should be examined carefully. Placing clothes into a dryer on high heat effectively kills ticks.

When removing ticks, use fine-tipped tweezers and protect bare hands with a tissue or gloves to avoid contact with tick fluids. Grab the tick close to the skin. Do not twist or jerk the tick, as this may cause the mouthparts to break off and remain in the skin. Gently pull straight up until all parts of the tick are removed. After removing the tick, wash your hands with soap and water (or waterless alcohol-based hand rubs when soap is not available). Clean the tick bite with an antiseptic such as iodine scrub, rubbing alcohol or water containing detergents. Ticks must have been living aboard for at least 24 hours to infect humans, so it's highly probable that a careful inspection will reveal them before they've done harm. Prevent ticks on animals from squirrels and pets, etc. Two of the ways to get rid of ticks on dogs and cats are putting on tick medicine or using a tick collar. Be sure to use these products according to the package instructions. For more information on animals and health, contact the Board of Health.

If you find a tick, don't use gasoline, nail polish remover or other salves or unguents; dislodge it with tweezers. Pull straight our without twisting. If the tick has been attached for some time, it's wise to see a doctor or Mary Goodwin: Town Health Nurse for advice about symptoms and a documentation describing the various ticks. Mark the date on the calendar and if possible, save the tick for identification.

The season of greatest tick infestation is April through August, the time when deer tick nymphs attach themselves to hosts: dogs, cats and us.

The Osama Games

GABRIEL GOMEZ

As we commemorate the anniversary of Osama bin Laden's elimination, credit should be given where credit is due. President Obama is to be applauded for making that critical final decision to put plans into motion which would rid the world of the Mastermind of 9/11's atrocities. The mission was a valiant effort, albeit risky, that came to fruition thanks to the complex and time consuming efforts of a carefully chosen group of contributors ...many of which will never be publicly recognized. To be the one who gave the "green light" on the mission is not for the faint of heart.

Admiral William H. McRaven, the Navy SEAL overall in charge of this mission, noted in his book "Spec Ops" (1996) that one of the six key principles of success in "special operations" is operational security (i.e. maintaining security). "If the enemy learns details and can anticipate the manner and timing of an attack, the direct likelihood of success is significantly reduced and more importantly the risk to our forces is significantly increased." Part of the Navy SEAL Code includes (but is not limited to) beliefs such as "Leave no man behind" and "We expect to lead and be led" but more importantly to "Lead by example in all situations". Navy SEALs take pride in the fact that "there's no I in SEAL Team."

Regrettably, President Obama and his senior political leadership team have diverted from the philosophy that essentially made this mission successful – tact, finesse, good judgment. When the mission's accomplishments are mentioned by President Obama, the word "I" is heard more often than "we" insinuating his ownership of the mission – just ask Google. Furthermore, privileged information about the SEAL Teams, intelligence, and mission tactics has been dangerously exposed. As John McCain so eloquently states, "I've had the great honor of serving in the company of heroes, and you know the thing about heroes is they don't brag..."

It is disheartening that President Obama isn't leading by example here. Perhaps a lesson can be learned by examining the humility of the Navy SEAL unit that carried out the mission. The leader of this unit, when asked by President Obama which Navy SEAL killed bin Laden, refused to single out the Navy SEAL who "double tapped" bin Laden (again, there's no "I" in SEAL Team). Imagine the likely celebrity, fame, and fortune that await any Navy SEAL that comes forward to share his story, yet not so much as a hum has been heard amongst any involved in this monumental (or any) mission.

We must realize that President Obama has never worn a military uniform, or faced danger in a combat zone. Perhaps he does not realize just how critical the "stealth" factor of these missions is. Perhaps he does not realize that by divulging crucial tactics, he is betraying future missions. He usurps the credit owed largely to the Navy SEALs for exceptionally executing the mission. President Obama instead seems to have turned this significant event into a circus of sorts, a game – "The Osama Games". This was not so much about revenge as it was about safeguarding the future of our country. This was not so much a celebration of the death of a key person as it was about a celebration that the world is a little bit safer place to live. The President and his aides are instead trying to leverage Osama bin Laden's death into a campaign talking point for his re-election.

Due to President Obama and his aides having crossed the line in exploiting the heroics of the Navy SEALs making the death of bin Laden a campaign issue, it's important and fair to recall what Jose Rodriguez (CIA operative who oversaw the enhanced interrogations) recently stated: "that the trail to bin Laden started in a CIA black site — all of which President Obama ordered closed, forever, on the second full day of his administration — and stemmed from information obtained from hardened terrorists who agreed to tell us some (but not all) of what they knew after undergoing harsh but legal interrogation methods. President Obama banned those methods on Jan. 22, 2009."

We're lucky to live in a beautiful and peaceful town like Cohasset where we're mostly insulated from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. We look forward to days like last Saturday where our kids marched blissfully and innocently in the Little League Parade to kick off the new baseball season. Suppose you live in the town where the "secret and classified" Navy SEAL unit is stationed and President Obama and his team repeatedly reveal information that should be held close — including bragging and leaks of details of the Navy SEAL unit and their methods responsible for killing Osama bin Laden. As a result, the families of those Navy SEALs and their neighbors have potentially much more to be concerned about. Those families and neighbors, those children, that community...should not be put in a position where they may pay the price as a direct result of "The Osama Games". Bigger picture, consider the repercussions of these indiscretions for future SEAL missions, for our country, for our planet. It's a dangerous game, where the President and his top aides are treating the SEAL Teams and their military code like a "game move" for his re-election. This is not only dangerous, but highly inappropriate.

As Michael Mukasey (former U.S. Attorney General from 2007-09) recently noted in the Wall Street Journal, it's unfortunate President Obama doesn't heed the examples set by other wartime presidents (Lincoln and Eisenhower) who went out of their way to give "full" credit to the troops and only invoked the word "I" when saying "I am proud of you and give thanks on behalf of a grateful nation".

Regardless, the Navy SEALs stand by to honor the code. We humbly ask that President Obama, as our Commander in Chief, live up to the same standards.

Gabriel Gomez lives at 59 Highland Avenue. He was a Navy SEAL Officer.

FOR THE RECORD

Another tool in the toolbox

GREGORY MATHIS

Last week, I waxed nostalgic about the way things used to be when we were just putting out community newspapers. Back then, a reporter's toolbox consisted of very little, mostly just a pen and notebook. Today the toolbox is considerably larger and needs to include a variety of tools to tell a story on multiple platforms.

From video to social media, we're not only telling stories differently, but also reaching a far greater overall audience through people searching for stories on the Internet and people following us on Twitter and liking us on Facebook.

One of the tools we've been toying with online the last few years is called Cover-It-Live, which is best described as a flexible live blogging application.

We've used it most successfully in the sporting arena. For those who have caught a state tournament game on our website, you know how informative and useful it can be. In addition to providing play-by-play of the action, we've included color commentating and we're able to upload photos from the game into the event as it's happening. Additionally, those watching the event on Cover-It-Live can ask questions, make comments and vote on polls as it's happening. It can be, and has been, an interactive experience for both the staff and audience.

Sports lends itself nicely to this storytelling tool, especially for those unable to attend an important game because of prior commitments or distance if a basketball game is being played in Worcester or a baseball state tournament game is taking place in Lowell.

We've had limited use of Cover-It-Live outside the sporting realm. We tried covering a Town Meeting a few years back, but discovered most of the people interested in what was going on were already at the meeting.

About a month ago, reporter Frank Mand and new media editor Mark Gardner came up with an idea to use Cover-It-Live to address a hot local topic, literally. With the lack of snowfall this winter and rain this spring (until last week of course), our area has been susceptible to brush fires. Frank and Mark reached out to regional experts and local fire officials to take part in a live forum on the Wicked Local website last Wednesday, April 25. The brush fire safety forum lasted an hour, from noon to 1 p.m., and included useful information on the current dangers and what residents can do to protect their home and property. The hour went by quickly and we all agreed Cover-It-Live was a great tool for such a discussion.

As we head into the November general election, we'll be looking to use Cover-It-Live to cover certain high-profile races that could allow for an interactive experience between the candidates and the public. More to come on that later.

Beyond elections, we're looking for other uses for Cover-It-Live. Send your suggestions to gmathis@wickedlocal.com, or join the discussion on my blog, For The Record, which you will find on your Blog Community page on your Wicked Local website.

To review the Cover-It-Live event online, go to Wicked Local and search for the story: "LIVE FORUM: High Noon: Brush Fire Survival for Communities and Homeowners" and click the Reply button.

MEALS TAX

the 0.75 local option meals tax. So far, the tax has raised over $62 million statewide in fiscal year 2012.

Hingham is one neighboring town that voted to implement the option. The decision has generated both income and controversy; so far, it seems the choice to enact the tax has paid off.

In April 2010, Hingham Town Meeting voted, by a narrow margin, to approve the 0.75 local meals tax. The revenue stream for that town was initially estimated at $250,000 to $300,000 per year; however, a February 2012 Economic Forum revealed that, so far, receipts are running at $600,000 annually. Hingham selectmen have proposed using the meals tax revenue for property tax relief to help pay off large capital projects, including a new middle school.

Three articles on Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting warrant have to do with new taxes: an article to enact the meal tax, another to enact an occupancy tax for hotels and motels, and an article that deals with establishing a stabilization fund for these tax revenues. The trust fund would be earmarked for special purposes, such as capital expenditures, although the fund's exact designation has yet to be determined. Milanoski has recommended that the money be used for repairs of existing facilities that have an individual value of over $10,000 per project.

The argument for the additional taxes, according to Milanoski, is that the increases are relatively small and the hotel tax, at least, would be generated primarily by out-of-towners.

The town manager told the selectmen this week that the estimated revenue amount from the meals tax alone could be $150,000. The hotel tax is projected to bring in $50,000 a year. However, the town will only capture revenue for 10 months during the first fiscal year the tax is enacted, according to Finance Director Mary Gallagher; if voted through by Town Meeting and enacted at the start of the new fiscal year, Cohasset would not start reaping the additional tax revenue until September.

Cohasset rejected not only the meals tax during the Nov. 2010 Special Town Meeting, but the proposed hotel tax as well. At the time, the meals tax was projected to bring the town $100,000 in annual revenue. The Mariner reported that during the meeting, no voter spoke in favor of either tax; residents who did speak up raised concerns over burdening a particular segment of the business community with more taxes.

The general consensus may or may not be the same on the Town Meeting floor this time around.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that the warrant article should spell out what, exactly, constitutes a meal that can be taxed: "People need to know the specifics."

Selectman Paul Carlson wondered if there could be a minimum amount established, such as only taxing purchases $10 or above. "It seems like a burden for some food service providers selling small ticket items," he said.

Could a cup of coffee be taxed? Is a latte considered a meal?

According to the DOR, the answer is "yes." Milanoski also explained that there is no minimum purchase amount; the state has already decided what constitutes a meal (see sidebar).

Selectman Leland Jenkins said that he agrees with the Advisory Committee; a few members of that board were hesitant to approve additional taxes before cutting costs first.

"I have no problem with an increase in taxes but feel we should do work in our backyard before we raise taxes," said Jenkins. "I think things could be done to cut some of the town's costs."

Selectman Fred Koed said that he was opposed to the tax when it came up two years ago because "the economy was so bad, I didn't want to make things worse. But I think things have gotten better, so it should go to Town Meeting."

OPEB

Koed suggested that the language of the warrant article describing the stabilization fund for the taxes be changed to describe a trust fund for the town's Other Post Employment Benefits (OPEB). Cohasset faces a $32 million unfunded OPEB liability.

While Milanoski agreed that the town should start feeding the OPEB fund – Town Meeting will vote on adding $20,000 out of general revenue to that fund in FY '13 – he cautioned the board on making the motion too complicated.

"I think the idea of putting money in OPEB is a great idea, but we need to develop an OPEB plan," said Milanoski. "On the one hand, I completely agree that we should be putting money in OPEB, but we don't have a plan for that right now." He suggested the selectmen "come back and reassess" putting the revenue into an OPEB fund at next year's Town Meeting.

"I don't think one year will hurt," Milanoski said of waiting on the OPEB fund. "We can start putting money into facilities and then come back at a future Town Meeting" to propose adding the revenue to the OPEB fund.

Carlson said that the town has "got to start putting money in [OPEB] now; $100,000 is a drop in the bucket, but it will at least get it started."

Milanoski added that the $20,000 going into OPEB in FY '13 is "not even a drop in the bucket; it's evaporation."

"It's a judgment call," the town manager concluded. "Both funds need money."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore called it a "symbolic place-keeper." He added that the Budget Planning Group discussed the proposed tax articles during their Monday night meeting and were pretty evenly split: "There were a couple of strong opinions against it, a couple of strong opinions for it." Pescatore said that the committee did not take a vote on the matter. He did, however, voice his personal support for the tax articles.

"It's an incremental tax... fairly invisible," Pescatore said.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer said that his committee has not yet discussed the proposed taxes, although they could weigh in on the idea of using the revenue stream to build up stabilization reserves for building maintenance projects.

The selectmen tabled the discussion for one more week.

For more on this issue, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

What is a meals tax?

The state legislature approved the local option meals tax in 2009 to provide a measure of relief for towns facing budget shortfalls in part due to local aid cuts. Town Meeting approval is required to pass this tax; Cohasset rejected the tax during the fall 2010 Special Town Meeting. It was estimated at the time that the meals tax would bring the town $100,000 in annual revenue.

Communities may impose a local sales tax of up to 0.75 percent on the sale of restaurant meals originating within the city or town by a vendor in addition to the current 6.25 percent state sales tax on meals. The funds are distributed on at least a quarterly basis.

So what makes a meal?

A meal is considered to be any food and/or beverage (including alcohol) that has been prepared for immediate human consumption and provided by a restaurant or restaurant portion of a store. This includes food and beverages sold on a "take out" or "to go" basis, whether or not they are packaged or wrapped, and whether or not they are taken from the restaurant premises. However, there is no meals tax on food that requires additional preparation or cooking to make it edible. If a restaurant offers a patron, upon presentation of a coupon, two meals for the usual price of one, the price of the free meal is excluded from the meals tax because the tax is due only on the actual amount the restaurant charges its customers.

Do cafés, general stores and vending machines count?

A restaurant is any eating or drinking establishment – whether stationary or mobile, temporary or permanent – that is primarily engaged in the business of selling meals at a cost. These include:

Cafés and cafeterias;
Canteen trucks or wagons;
Catering businesses;
Cocktail lounges or bars;
Coffee shops and diners;
Dining rooms, including ones in hotels and motels;
Ice cream or other food product stands;
Lunch counters;
Private or social clubs;
Salad bars and snack bars, including theater snack bars;
Street wagons and carts;
Taverns; and
Vending machines or honor snack trays that sell snacks or candy with a price of $3.50 each or more.

A store is any establishment not primarily engaged in the business of selling meals. In general, food products for human consumption sold by stores are exempt from this sales tax. However, any store that contains an area, section, or counter from which meals are sold must charge a sales tax on those meals. Poured beverages, such as coffee or soda, and unpackaged baked goods or other snacks sold by a store are taxable unless sold in units of six or more for off-premises consumption. However, a bakery may sell any amount of unpackaged baked goods tax-free if it sells only baked goods or if it keeps its restaurant sales separate as required by Department of Revenue regulations.

Certain food and beverages are not considered meals when sold by a restaurant for consumption off-premises so are not subject to a meals tax. These include beverages sold in unopened original containers of at least 26 fluid ounces, a loaf of bread, and a quart of milk, for example. Beverages sold in unopened original containers for off-premises consumption and prepackaged snacks and baked goods such as chips, candy, and popcorn are among the items sold in stores that are not subject to the meals tax.

sistance. Opening the door will trigger a sensor alarm that will turn on a video monitor, which will be linked to the SSRECC. The door will lock behind the citizen, and "they will be able to talk back and forth with the 911 dispatch person," Milanoski explained. If the individual needs immediate medical attention, "they can press the button to the fire station next door."

The bottom line, the town manager stressed, is that "there will be people manning the public safety building... It's no different than when a dispatcher is on the road."

Milanoski said that he has been working with Police Chief Mark DeLuca and Fire Chief Robert Silvia, as well as the police department's union, to come up with viable solutions to address the possibility of an empty station.

"We're looking at options from a public safety standpoint to add additional support to the facility," Milanoski said.

The security upgrades to install a new video surveillance system and safeguard the evidence rooms with proper steel-framed doors – replacing the current wooden ones – could cost upwards of $100,000, according to a Jan. 2012 Norwell Police estimate from the American Alarm Company, which the Cohasset police department cited in a cost analysis report distributed to officials in March. Replacing the doors alone is estimated to cost $20,000, according to the Capital Budget Committee.

Milanoski explained that this is all a work in progress.

"We will reevaluate this on a regular basis moving forward," the town manager said. "If it's not working well, we'll find ways to mitigate that."

Selectman Leland Jenkins said that this is not the first time Cohasset's station has been darkened.

"Before we had 911... the station did go dark when all three [on-duty police officers] went on calls," said Jenkins. "Historically the station was dark in the past, but not for long periods of time."

Public service

Selectman Paul Carlson said that, aside from an emergency occurrence, his concern is public service.

"People have to go to the police station just to conduct business," said Carlson. "There has to be some service for the public, particularly during the 4 [p.m.] to 12 [a.m.] shift. I don't want people to have to take time off work just to conduct their business."

Carlson added that when the selectmen voted to transition to the SSRECC during a Nov. 30, 2009 meeting, "we never agreed on [being closed during] a 4 to midnight shift. If we were going to discuss it, personally I would be opposed to going dark."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she would like to see a "clear picture of transactional activity throughout the day; I'd like to get a better handle on it." She also asked the town manager what the transitional plan for the SSRECC is.

The SSRECC held its grand opening last October; Cohasset was expected to join in shortly thereafter, along with neighboring towns Hingham, Hull and Norwell. However, Cohasset's move to regional dispatch has been delayed; now, the town is expected to join by the end of May.

Kennedy asked Milanoski if, when the dispatchers finally leave the building and have officially moved to the SSRECC, the station will be fortified with the new video surveillance equipment.

"When will get the safe room operational? How are we going to pay for it? Those are the questions people want to know the answer to," Kennedy said.

Carlson said that when Cohasset was first considering regionalizing the dispatch, town officials heard from three towns in western Mass. that had made the move toward regionalization. One of those towns was Hopedale, "a town not a lot smaller than ours."

Carlson said he spoke to Hopedale's town coordinator, Eugene Phillips, and learned that the town is leaving their regional dispatch system. "He found it unsatisfactory for governance issues," explained Carlson. "He likes the concept, but the system just wasn't designed well."

Carlson told the board that Hopedale closed their station from 3:30 p.m. to 7 a.m. and that sometimes, when they did have an officer there, officers on duty "would make themselves not visible." He added that Hopedale's station installed the video surveillance, which the town coordinator said he liked — when it was working. "It didn't always go on," said Carlson.

Hopedale selectmen voted in March not to renew their regional dispatch agreement with Mendon and Millville, according to a Milford Daily News Report. Hopedale will continue to have regional dispatch through November, when the contract ends.

Hopedale, whose population is just under 6,000, has reported only one emergency walk-in per year, Carlson said.

Cohasset's police department, meanwhile, has reported 665 walk-ins in 2010 that required a log-entry note (for matters other than advice, directions, or permits). Of these walk-ins, 69 occurred during the midnight to 8 a.m. shift; 21 of these were considered to be high-priority, including medical emergencies or instances of assault. The day shift saw the majority of the walk-ins – 325 – of which 135 were considered high-priority; the evening shift, meanwhile, saw 117 walk-ins, 60 of which were high-priority.

Milanoski said that he and Chief DeLuca "are actively working on this," and that he plans to hold a joint meeting with both chiefs.

The Budget

By Paul Ognibene
Cohasset School Committee

This is the debut of "Our Schools," a column that will be published periodically as part of a new School Committee initiative to raise awareness about important issues affecting our school district.

The long-term success of our community is closely linked to the strength of our schools and we're hoping that this column will generate even more community involvement, interest, and ideas about how we can ensure that Cohasset has one of the finest public schools in Massachusetts.

The goal of this first article is to provide basic financial facts and figures about School operations.

One of the most important responsibilities of the School Committee is to establish an annual operating budget. The budget is deliberated at our semi-monthly Committee meetings, which are open to the public and held at the High School, typically starting at 7 PM on the first and third Wednesdays of each month. At the meetings, we explored the underlying rationale for every budget line item and performed a detailed review of spending from the prior year.

The School District operates on a fiscal year cycle, so the fiscal year 2013 (FY-2013) budget, which was recently approved by the School Committee for adoption at next week's Town Meeting, will cover the period from July 1, 2012 – June 30, 2013. The School Committee's budget proposes a $15.87 million appropriation from the Town, which equates to 43% of the Town's overall $36.49 million general operating budget. The School budget is comprised of a $14.15 million contribution from the Town and $1.72 million of state aid, which flows through the Town budget. (Funds from the state are called Chapter 70 funds, which refers to the chapter of Massachusetts General Laws which governs public school funding).

We're also budgeting an additional $1.86 million of expenses covered by "offset funds." These are specific expenses which are included in the budget, but are later offset by payments, grants, or other outside income related to the activity. For example, we've budgeted $23,479 to fund summer camp and Osgood family users must offset this expense entirely.

Based on the School Committee's adopted FY-2013 budget, the School District's sources and uses of funds are as follows:

Sources of funds (in millions):
$ 14.15	80%	Town contribution
$ 1.72	10%	State aid
$ 15.87	90%	Total appropriation
$ 1.86	10%	Offset funds
$ 17.73	100%	Total operating budget

Uses of funds (in millions):
$ 11.84	75%	Salaries (as a percent of total appropriation)
$ 1.42	9%	Special education and transportation
$ 0.56	4%	Contract services
$ 0.79	5%	Utilities
$ 0.23	1%	Cleaning
$ 0.22	1%	Athletics
$ 0.20	1%	Transportation
$ 0.61	4%	All other
$ 15.87	100%	Total appropriation
$ 1.86		Offset funds
$ 17.73		Total operating budget

The FY-2013 total appropriation represents an increase of $464,000 (3.1%) over the FY-2012 budget, mostly comprised of contractual staff salary increases, the discontinuance of a federal education jobs grant, two new teaching positions to meet increased student enrollment, and shifting water bill charges from the Town to the Schools.

The overall School budget is allocated across Cohasset's four schools, which in total, educate 1,537 students:

Osgood: 404 students; preschool through second grade
Deer Hill 414 students; third through fifth grade
Middle School 347 students; sixth through eighth grade
High School 372 students; ninth through twelfth grade

In summary, the School District's FY-2013 total operating budget equates to:
$2,350 per resident
$6,520 per household
$11,550 per student

These are the financial numbers, but they become more relevant when compared to our peers and in the context of the results our Schools achieve. So, the next column will focus on defining our peer group and determining measures of success.

This month's upcoming School Committee meetings will be on May 9 and May 30 at 7 PM at the High School and also broadcast on Comcast channel 22 and Verizon channel 37.

CANDIDATES CORNER

From Martha Gjesteby:

One of my proposals during the 9 years I served as Selectman was to establish a Sidewalk Study Committee and the sidewalks on Forest Avenue was one of the excellent results. During the past few years I have written to the Board of Selectmen urging that board to complete the Pleasant Street to Deer Hill sidewalk, and the Sohier Street to 3A, and contact the Mass DPW for assistance in creating a sidewalk to the train station.

The Sidewalk Committee should go to work again. In last week's Mariner Steve Bobo wrote an excellent article, detailing what is needed. Walking and running is healthy for all – I do it every morning.

Contact me about this issue and others at: Arne & Martha@Comcast.net. Campaign Treasurer is Joan Brown, 546 Beechwood Street.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For selectman candidates: Do you support having the police station "go dark" in order to save money?

SELECTMAN
Martha Gjesteby

I say an emphatic " NO" to the selectmen's plan to un-man the police department in the evening hours. The comfort and security and safety of our citizens should be of paramount concern to selectmen. During a campaign for office you hear complaints from voters, and they are not happy about this decision.

Closing the police station at night may not be a real public safety issue. But it is certainly a perceived one. A human being, not a computer screen, should greet persons arriving at the police station at any hour. A distraught person may not be able to lock him or her self in the foyer of the station, turning it into a "safe" room, as our Interim Town Manager advises. Our Police Chief is against this action and Selectmen should listen to him and to voters, who are weighing in on this issue on the blogs and print media.

Selectmen and their Interim Town Manager do not appear to have considered the invisible "costs" of closing down a station. Their Interim Town Manager has many interesting ideas, but this is not one of them, and selectmen did not give the public any consideration in making this decision.

SELECTMAN
Edwin (Ted) Carr

Public safety is the cornerstone of our community. Allowing the police station to "go dark" is therefore a very serious decision that requires thorough understanding of the facts and deep consideration of the implications. With this answer, I hope to provide some of both and explain why I support the path we are pursuing – an approach that saves money while keeping the station lights on.

- The creation of a regional dispatch solution removes the need for having a dispatch person behind the desk at the police station.
- During EVERY shift, public Safety First responders will be in the building.
- It is possible that a rare case will pull all police/fire personnel out of station, in which case the station would not be staffed for a brief period of time.

The following services ensure public access to emergency personnel during those rare occasions:

- Strategic management of Minimum Manning requires three on-site personnel to provide adequate coverage in the police station in most cases.
- Personnel staffing the fire station next door.
- Video technology and safe room technology linked in real time to the regional center.
- Mutual aide stand-by vehicles as needed.

I have heard the concerns expressed about this decision, and while acknowledging the validity of such concerns, I continue to support the decision. The approximate cost savings of not having to employ a person to staff the window saves the town nearly $100,000 in salary, benefits, and overtime. That said, I also support ongoing monitoring of the implications of the decision as it is implemented. To the extent a persistent problem becomes apparent, operational changes can and should be made to ensure the continued safety of the town's citizens.

For assessor candidates: Can Assessors do a better job in educating taxpayers about property tax relief they may qualify for?

ASSESSORS
Debra Krupczak

Educating and counseling taxpayers about residential property tax relief is something I have been doing for the past 18 years, first as Assistant Assessor in Cohasset and now as the Assessor/Appraiser for the Town of Rockland. Massachusetts General Laws provide for tax relief through statutory exemptions for qualifying taxpayers. The exemptions available are Senior Exemptions, Surviving Spouse/Minor Exemption, Disabled Veteran Exemptions, Blind Exemption, Hardship Exemption as well as a Property Tax Deferral Program. For example, applicants for Senior Exemption must be at least 70 years old, own all or part of their property, must have owned real property in Massachusetts for 5 years and been domiciled in Massachusetts for the preceding 10 years, and meet the approved income and/or asset requirements. Disabled veterans must have a minimum service-connected disability of 10% as determined by the Veterans' Administration and blind persons must have a certification from the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind.

The Cohasset Assessors' Office is an efficient taxpayer-friendly office. The Director of Assessing and her staff are available to taxpayers who may have questions regarding exemption criteria. Property tax relief information is available on the Town of Cohasset website and is posted at Town Hall in the public areas and in the Assessors' office. The Assessors' Office provides exemption and tax deferral information to local newspapers regularly for publication. Educational pamphlets are also available in the Assessors' Office.

If I am elected to the Board of Assessors, I would suggest additional ways to educate taxpayers on the statutory tax exemption and tax deferral options. One suggestion would be an annual presentation at the Council on Elder Affairs. I would also make an effort to utilize Cohasset cable television. Finally, as an experienced Assessor, I would be available to share my knowledge with residents regarding property tax relief.

ASSESSORS
Thomas Powers

The short answer to the question is yes as the Board of Assessors should provide on-going education, communication and transparency; however, you the property owner/taxpayer have to do your homework and the burden of proof falls on you. Did you know that the Cohasset Assessor has a home web page that provides background information on the assessment process, key terms, specific filing dates, the appeals process FAQ's, internet links to application forms and related topics and an overview of the assessor and assessment town procedures? (http://www.cohassetmass.org/assessor/index.html) Did you know that all cities and towns in the State of Massachusetts assess the value of property using a Mass Appraisal system? Did you know that the Mass. State Department of Revenue utilizes the Mass Appraisal system as a standardized procedure for collecting data and appraising property to ensure that all properties within a municipality are valued uniformly and equitably? Informing the taxpayer that this information is available is a first step in providing taxpayers with the initial knowledge to evaluate their property assessment and to consider if they may qualify for tax relief. Understanding the assessment process is critical to understanding your property assessment.

When one takes into consideration that the housing market has declined for the last four years both nationally as well as locally here in Cohasset and that foreclosures and short sales have taken place and adversely affect your property value (yes, even here in Cohasset) there is no doubt that you the taxpayer need to understand the assessment process and how it affects your property value. Frankly, you should monitor your tax assessment annually. Understanding how your property was assessed and how it actually compares to comparable properties on your street and in your neighborhood that have recently sold is a start in understanding the assessment process.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For selectman candidates: Do you think Cohasset should be doing more for its fast-growing senior population?

For assessor candidates: Do you see a time when Cohasset would go to a split tax rate?

For planning board associate member candidates: Is it time to update the Cohasset Master Plan and how useful is the master plan as a tool for the planning board?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon p.m., Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fundraisers, short position statements and the like.

Candidates, opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, may submit a formal announcement with a photograph. There is no word limit on the announcement but longer submissions may need to be held due to space constraints.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

CANDIDATE ANNOUNCEMENT

Powers announces run for Board of Assessors

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements;

I am writing to you as I have decided to run for the open seat on the Cohasset Board of Assessors, which is being vacated by Michael Patrolia.

With the opening of this seat I thought I would be able to provide a service to the Cohasset Community by providing a consistent, fair and reasonable approach to the Cohasset Assessment due process.

I have been involved in real estate for all of my professional career (29 years) and I am quite familiar with the Mass Appraisal valuation and assessment process for both residential and commercial properties, which is applied to Cohasset property values. I have built several homes here in town, I was actively involved in the early stage of the Cohasset Economic Development Committee, instrumental in creating the Cohasset Transit Oriented Development Overlay District By-Law, the Cohasset Rte. 3A Corridor Commercial Parking By-Law and directly responsible for the Old Colony Square at Cohasset Station Development project in 2008.

The Powers family has been a property owner / tenant and resident of Cohasset since 1997. We have three boys in the Cohasset public school system. My wife Christine is a sales associate for Coldwell Banker Cohasset. I have been and continue to be involved in various Cohasset town volunteering activities and functions, including: current Cohasset Youth Soccer Club Board of Directors member, prior member of the Cohasset Economic Development Committee, prior member of the Coastal Stars Youth Hockey Board of Directors, Director for the Cohasset Day "Games on the Common" and an current/active Cohasset Youth Sports Coach for Soccer, Baseball, Hockey and Lacrosse in addition to running Powers Realty, Development & Consulting, LLC from Cohasset.

Thomas Powers is a candidate for the Board of Assessors.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on May 19 are available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, May 18, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person. People may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury; and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by May 19 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of one's choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

People who are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast a vote at the polling place, may file a letter from a physician with the Town Clerk, stating that one is permanently unable to cast a vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot to sign and return will be mailed by the Town Clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

GIRLS LACROSSE

Strong start

Cohasset playing well through first six games

GateHouse News Service

In what could be a preview of an exciting D2 tournament matchup, Cohasset faced Duxbury on the Dragons home turf on Friday.

The game lived up to the hype as Cohasset gave everything in a 14-8 loss that was closer than the score showed.

Kathryn Dunn got the Skippers off to a fast start by taking the opening draw and racing down the field for the Skippers first score.

The game was back and forth for the first ten minutes and neither team could gain a major advantage. Goalie Kylie Coffman made several key saves early to keep Cohasset in the game and was well protected by the defense of Anna Seraikas, Molly Fitzgerald and Megan Fitzgerald.

Duxbury took a 7-4 lead into the half with Coffman making another big save just before time expired to keep the Skippers in striking distance.

The Dragons came out on fire in the second half however, and increased the lead to 11-4 with crisp passing and pinpoint shooting.

Cohasset refused to give up though, and made a big run to get back into the game.

Hope Kissick and Maddie Curley led the charge and the Skippers scored four straight goals to pull within three at 11-8.

The Skippers continued to attack the cage but were denied by missed shots and some great saves by the Duxbury keeper.

The Dragons finished the game on a three-goal run and the game ended in a 14-8 score.

The team now stands at 4-1-1 with some key games coming up against Norwell and NDA.

The 4-1-1 start included a couple of big wins over winning teams.

After opening with an 8-8 tie at 7-2 Sandwich, Cohasset followed with a 15-2 win over Abington.

The next three wins came against winning teams.

Cohasset knocked off neighboring Scituate (7-2) 16-10 at home, and then handed Hingham (6-5) a 13-10 loss.

Hull (6-3) was next and Cohasset won that game 13-7.

POPPIN' OFF

In potential mess, clear heads prevail

WILL WASSERSUG

For the past weekend, I had been watching along with he coverage of the news item that hit close to home – very close, as in the hockey rink, where the parents of Duxbury hockey player Tucker Hannon hauled Scituate hockey player Alex Way into court to issue a complaint of assault and battery from a check in a late season hockey game that gave Hannon a concussion.

Initially, my first thought was of the Bruins Zdeno Chara and the Montreal crazies who called 911 demanding an arrest when Chara dropped a hit on Montreal's Max Paccioretti last season.

Back then I felt the idea of police involvement was scary enough, but this time, after watching the video of Way's hit on Hannon (which can be found on wickedlocal.com) I just felt insulted.

There was no penalty on the play, and rightly so.

It was a hard shot, but well within the framework of clean and legal on the ice while playing hockey.

You may read this and ask why is a Scituate and Duxbury based story here in the Cohasset Mariner, and the answer is simple – it could happen here, or anywhere. Also, being neighbors, many Cohasset athletes have faced Scituate teams that Way has played on. They could have

Cohasset undefeated in South Shore League

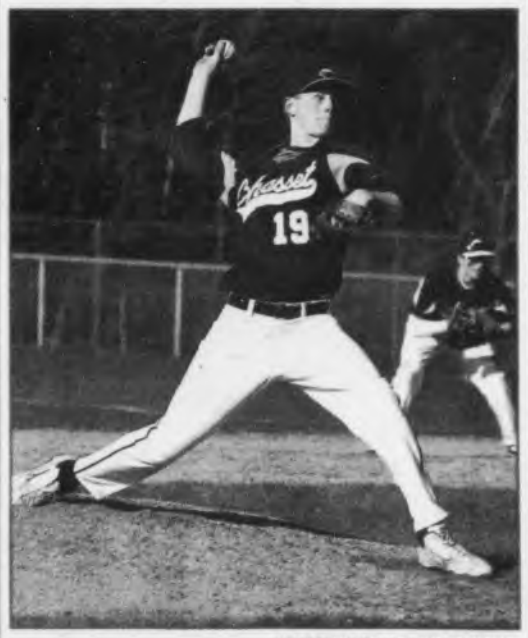
By Whitney Malone
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

With a league record of 5-0 and an early non-league win, the Cohasset girls tennis team has had a victorious start to the season.

Starting the season off, Coach Gigi Meehan organized a friendly doubles scrimmage with Thayer Academy. Senior captains Caitlin DeAngelis and Hannah Rawson doubled-up against Thayer's Audrey Fitzpatrick and Olivia Dilorati and Junior Captain Meredith Spofford reunited with her last-season's-doubles teammate Kate Sookiasian to take on Thayer's Caroline Finnegan and Claire Oswald. Cohasset lost the scrimmage 5-7, but both teams enjoyed a little pre-season competition.

The girls proved their strength this season with their first match, a non-league win against Hingham. Singles players Emma Davis, Hannah Rawson, and Emma Smith prevailed over a tough Hingham lineup and both doubles matches were close. Coach Meehan was very excited about the 3-2 win.

Following Hingham, Cohasset faced another non-league match against Scituate. The girls lost 2-3, each singles match decisively close and competitive on every court.



Cohasset came back with a win against Abington. First doubles team, senior Erika Botts and junior Annie Robinson, and second doubles team, senior Katie Bren-

Wings fly to championship

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

Gate House News Service

It appeared that the Red Wings were possibly going to miss the South Coastal Hockey League Classics Div. playoffs for the third straight season.

However, the Wings pulled out a 4-1 win in their next to last game of the season over the Rangers to qualify for the fourth and final playoff spot.

The Red Wings, who had not won a playoff game since they won the championship game over the Rangers in the Fall of 2006 season defeated the top-seeded Maple Leafs, 3-0 to qualify for the championship game against the Rangers.

The Wings had six different goal scorers to pull out a 6-4 win over the Rangers to win their first title since the Fall of 2006 and their seventh overall.

Tom Pipenbrink, John Guilderson, Pat Burke, Mike Evensen of Scituate, Marshfield's Ron DiCecca and Kevin Barnard scored an empty-netter as the Wings built a 4-1 lead in the second period.

Steve Figioli had three assists while DiCecca, Evensen and Burke had one assists apiece as each player had multiple points.

Pembroke's Darren Jacobs scored two goals while Bob Bibeau scored a goal and assisted and Bob Sideropoulos had two assists on another for the Rangers. Kevin Keane also scored for the Rangers.

The Rangers rallied to close to within one on two different occasions in the third period, 4-3 and 5-4, but they could not over come the 4-1 second period deficit.

There was no question who the MVP was for the Whalers in their 5-1 win over the Saints for the Legends Div. title.

Whalers goalie Dan Nason stopped 46 of the 47 shots the Saints fired at him to lead his team to the title, which was the team's third in their history. Nason was tough in the first six minutes as he stopped 14 shots.

Scituate's Steve Concannon had two goals to lead the Whalers who led 2-0 after a period. John Maguire Mike Rober both of Norwell and Scituate's Skip Tufts added a goal and an assist each for the Whalers.

James McNeill scored in second period for the Saints with Todd Roach and John Currie assisting on the goal.

nan and sophomore Bri Crough, proved Cohasset's outstanding teamwork. The 5-0 win, followed by a 4-1 win against Carver, marked the beginning of the undefeated season.

League-rival Norwell brought back the fierce competition this year, but Cohasset triumphed with a 3-2 win. Cohasset lost a second non-league match to Scituate, but played well against Rockland last Tuesday, winning 5-0.

Cohasset's Junior Varsity team played outstandingly against Notre Dame Academy last Friday with a 4-1 win. Sophomore Jesse Lyons, playing third singles, came back from a 0-6 first loss to win the second set 7-5. She lost the third set 3-6 after coming back from a 0-5 deficit. Second doubles team, freshman Meredith Corry and sophomore Carly Kinscherf, played aggressively, winning their first two sets 6-0. Freshman Clara Baumgarten won second singles with a big serve in a tiebreaker, after losing her first set 6-7, and cruising through a second set with a 6-2 win.

Monday's match at Harwich was Cohasset's fifth league-win, with singles players Emma Davis, Emma Smith, and Sara Corry each winning the first two sets of their matches. First doubles team, Caitlin DeAngelis and Meredith Spofford, won their match 6-1, 6-3, and second doubles team, Kate Sookiasian and Gabrielle LeMoyne, took a 6-2, 6-1 win.

With mixed practices and doubles matches with the boys team and intensive fitness workouts with Coach Deb Beal, the girls are working extra hard this season, emphasizing the importance of team support. Cleary, their efforts have paid off thus far.

been teammates in youth sports as well.

Going back to the original play, there looks to be no evidence that Way hit Hannon in the head or face.

The contact was there, and considering Way is much bigger, at 6-foot-4, 225 pounds, compared to Hannon's 5-foot-9, 145 pounds, the potential is there for injury.

Scituate coach Mike Breen, a veteran coach who is all about team, clean play and discipline told the Patriot Ledger that the hit was clean.

Scituate Mariner sports writer Mike Spellman was at the game and he also said the hit was a clean hockey hit.

So where is the problem?

Simply put, it's the parents and or the lawyers.

Now I wasn't there and I have been following the coverage through our friends at wickedlocal.com and the Patriot Ledger, but the feeling I have is that the young man's parents, who apparently wanted Way suspended for two games and apologizing, got a little over emotional protecting their son, which I understand, but then the lawyers stepped in and maybe, just a little, those little dollar signs lit up their eyes and hello legal wrangling. (Note here – not all lawyers are bad, in fact most I have met are good people doing an important job helping people.)

I very well could be wrong about this, and hope I am, but these days with so many lawsuits for just about anything – yes hot coffee and McDonalds, the view is always jaded.

"If this (check) was off the rink, on a public way, that is gross, negligent assault and battery," said Jay Mullen, the attorney representing Thomas and Sheila Hannon, Tucker's parents to the Ledger.

Really?

Well, I guess that could be true, but this was on the ice and there was no stick or punches thrown. Way never lined up Hannon and he didn't chase him down. Again, in hockey that's accepted.

Read the rule book and check the waivers and paperwork signed before playing.

If every play that could be criminal outside a rink or field was sent to court, then there would be no sports.

Let's also remember that athletes have pads and helmets for this reason.

They don't always work perfectly, but they are part of the game.

Hannon's parents wanted an apology from Way, or a meeting or suspension.

Again, when there are lawyers lurking, the thoughts of a player or coach or school is to stay quiet until things work out.

Personally, I have met Way a couple of times and have the impression that he is a smart, likeable, talented young man who has no interest in purposely hurting anyone.

His size makes him a feared opponent, but in contact sports that's a good thing.

Before this incident, all I had heard from his coaches, all three, lacrosse, hockey and football, is that he's a great kid and outstanding athlete and teammate.

I believe it.

I also believe Tucker Hannon is a good person too.

His comments about the incident were about how he was feeling, but not revenge.

That job was for the parents.

After Plymouth District Clerk Magistrate Philip McCue found no cause for criminal charges, the players were said to have spoken and there was forgiveness.

Clear heads prevailed.

Now, my request for fans in the future is to go easy on Tucker Hannon.

When the teams face each other on the lacrosse field on Monday, be good sports.

No jokes about not hitting Hannon or he'll call his lawyer etc. He's probably seen them all on the comment boards with these stories.

Readers can be pretty rough, especially when they have a forum to be amateur comedians.

Give the young man a chance to not be the butt of everyone's jokes because overzealous parents were trying to protect their son, even in what has to be the most embarrassing fashion possible.

Many local coaches were contacted by the Ledger and all agreed that these kinds of issues should sty on the ice and out of courts.

"Except for the most egregious cases, they should stay out of court," said Hanover coach Jon Abban, a Hanover detective. "The court system is already jammed with criminal cases of far-reaching importance."

"There is a process in place," said Cohasset coach Bob Walsh. "It starts with the officials. Players can be disqualified. Most games are videotaped. There is a supervisor of officials who can step in if the officials aren't doing their jobs. Then there is the MIAA parents can appeal to if they feel it is necessary. In a contact sport, a player has to assume some risk when he signs up."

I agree with both and have to say that if every contested injury went to court, sports as we know them would be done. Gone. Kaput.

That scares me.

So next time you see a hard hit, put those phones down, don't call the cops or a lawyer or demand an apology or suspension.

If the sport is too physical or tough, play something else.

That said, I get the feeling that young Mr. Hannon probably wants to get back on the ice. He's already back on the lacrosse field, where he might see Way on the opposite side.

Parents, leave the lawyers at home.

CHARITIES

Saltalamacchia and Bard named Jimmy Fund Co-Captains

Dana-Farber Cancer Institute announced today that Boston Red Sox catcher Jarrod Saltalamacchia and pitcher Daniel Bard are this year's Jimmy Fund Co-Captains. As ambassadors for the Jimmy Fund for the 2012 season, the two players will help support and promote the mission of Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund to strike out cancer.

Saltalamacchia and Bard will visit Dana-Farber's adult and pediatric clinics, support some of the Jimmy Fund's signature fundraising events, thank donors, and raise awareness and support for adult and pediatric cancer care and research throughout Red Sox Nation.

"Just as Jarrod and Daniel will be instrumental in the Red Sox's success this season, they are key players who support Dana-Farber and the Jimmy Fund's lifesaving mission," said Edward J. Benz Jr., MD, Dana-Farber's president and CEO.

The Boston Red Sox are unequalled champions in the fight against cancer. The Red Sox adopted the Jimmy Fund as their official charity in 1953, and since then, the two organizations have established a deep bond — unlike any other between a professional sports team and a charity. The Red Sox have teamed up with the Jimmy Fund to save lives, find cures, and dramatically change the quality of life for adults and children facing cancer in New England and around the world.

Saltalamacchia has participated in New Stars for Young Stars presented by the Jimmy Fund Council of Greater Boston the past two years and has visited with pediatric and adult patients at Dana-Farber.

"Dating back to the 1950s, the Red Sox and the Jimmy Fund have been united in the fight against cancer," said Saltalamacchia. "Being a Jimmy Fund Co-Captain promises to be an amazing experience. Daniel and I will have the opportunity to visit with Dana-Farber patients and, along with Red Sox fans, raise cancer awareness."

Bard, who is also this year's spokesplayer for the Jimmy Fund's Rally Against CancerSM fundraising program, is thrilled with his newest role.

"I am honored to be a Jimmy Fund Co-Captain," he said. "Growing up, I had family in the Boston area so I knew about the Jimmy Fund at a very young age. Since I started playing for the Red Sox, I have met many people who have been treated at Dana-Farber and are now cancer survivors. I am grateful to be part of the Jimmy Fund and to be able to give back to the community."

About the Jimmy Fund

The Jimmy Fund (www.JimmyFund.org) solely supports Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, raising funds for adult and pediatric cancer care and research to improve the chances of survival for cancer patients around the world. It is an official charity of the Boston Red Sox, as well as the official charity of the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association, the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge, and the Variety Children's Charity of New England. Since 1948, the generosity of millions of people has helped the Jimmy Fund save countless lives and reduce the burden of cancer for patients and families worldwide. Follow the Jimmy Fund on Facebook: Facebook.com/TheJimmyFund and on Twitter: @TheJimmyFund.

ROAD RACE

S.H.O.R.E. Run on agenda

Scituate run/walk benefits schools

This Memorial Day Weekend race features one of the prettiest coastline courses in New England. The fourth Annual S.H.O.R.E Road Race 5K and 2-Mile Walk, presented by Dunkin Donuts, runs in Scituate, Massachusetts on May 26, 2012. As you run or walk enjoy breathtaking views of Scituate's quintessentially New England coastline, the Scituate shore

Parades, remembrances and family gatherings are at the heart of Memorial Day Weekend, of course, and the third Annual S.H.O.R.E. Run in Scituate, Massachusetts is fast securing a place of its own among these start of summer traditions on the South Coast of Massachusetts. This 5K run, named this year after its title sponsor - the Dunkin Donuts Scituate S.H.O.R.E Run, takes place on Saturday, May 26th, starting at 10:00 am. - This USATF-sanctioned event includes a 5K (3.1 mile) race and a two-mile walk, both of which boast some of the most breathtaking views of the Atlantic and Scituate Harbor. It's the perfect destination race for runners in the region and elsewhere to enjoy a weekend; and for locals, it's a great event to run or walk with your weekend holiday guests.

The 3.1-mile race course is manageable even for beginning weekend warriors, while it also attracts those who are out for speed and serious competition. There are a few small hills covering first and second cliffs in Scituate and gorgeous view throughout the course giving a welcome distraction to even the most focused runners. Of course, the Walk component of the event makes it accessible to anyone who wants to enjoy the outdoors on a holiday weekend and take in the scenery and camaraderie of this small-town event with big time appeal. It's a great balance between amateurs or beginners, professional level experienced runners, and people who want simply participate to support Scituate High School.

Proceeds from the race are to benefit Scituate High School's Opportunities for Resources and Education (SHORE) foundation. S.H.O.R.E was established in 1990 when budget cuts threatened the quality of public education. S.H.O.R.E. brings the community together through fundraising events to better promote and fund grants for academic, art, and athletic opportunities for Scituate youths.

The race starts and finishes at Scituate's Peggotty Beach, which is nestled in a quiet seaside neighborhood. Last year almost 600 runners and just as many S.H.O.R.E. supporters came out to participate, volunteer and cheer the runners on. The sound of their cheers was second only to the sound of the surf against the coastline. The race starts and finishes from just outside the beach parking lot.

Registration opens at 8:30 a.m. The race kicks off at 10:00 a.m. This early start, and the fact that it will all be wrapped up by noon, means you can run and walk and still have the rest of your Saturday for barbecues, parades and the beach. You won't want to miss the Free T-shirt toss at 11 a.m., which has become an event unto itself.

All are welcome to Peggotty Beach in Scituate, no matter what zip code you're from, you'll feel at home at this Scituate race. So join in for a day of family fun and fabulous views before, during, and after the race. Register now—the earlier the better—and get that souvenir T-shirt and run a great race for a great cause.

Check out the directions and details and sign up at www.coolrunning.com/major/11/scituateshorerun/ and get in on the fun.

LIFE AT CHS

Prom is right around the corner

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Seniors: only 14 days left in our high school careers! How crazy is that? When we were writing down our heights for our graduation gowns this week, it finally hit me: we are growing up and high school is ending! Which means, including this one, I only have four more columns to write. So sad!

AP Exams start next Monday and last for two weeks. Sophomores, juniors and seniors will be spending this weekend cramming for their tests. Although the exams can be long and stressful, they are worth it! So study up and get plenty of rest.

Speaking of exams, the year's second session of MCAS is taking place in two weeks. On top of that, some seniors will have to take finals in these upcoming weeks while fiercely battling Senioritis.

Prom is in three weeks! I hope everyone has dates and dresses and won't have to scramble to find them last-minute. Those of you not attending prom should still come to the pre-prom gala at the common on May 25th. Prom-goers walk down a red carpet and pose for pictures with friends and family. Then everyone loads onto the trolley cars to go to prom! It's a lot of fun, so you should definitely stop by.

The Winter Sports and Academic Achievement Ceremony took place last week. Hard-working students were recognized and given certificates for being named to the Honor Roll in Terms 2 and 3. Additionally, all winter athletes were given Varsity letters, pins or certificates. Afterwards, seniors stayed for a movingly sad presentation called "Choices," about making smart decisions in college and for the rest of our lives.

The regular season for spring sports is over halfway done. In fact, Track and Field ends next week! Check the sports section for sports updates.

Hopefully the sun will come out this weekend and it will feel more like a May day. Happy Cinco de Mayo, by the way!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

DON'T MISS THIS

Potty Training seminar is May 9

Old Colony Montessori School, in partnership with Carolann's and the Hingham Mothers' Club, will present Potty Talk, a potty training seminar, at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, May 9, in the Whiton Room at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St. This event is free and open to the public.

Potty training specialist Siri Panday will give a brief overview of potty training basics including signs of readiness for both parent and child, a list of supplies and tools needed for a successful potty training experience, and will offer a question and answer session immediately following the presentation.

Carolann's in Hingham Square will have available the tools and supplies mentioned in Panday's potty training overview. Everything from cotton potty training pants to potty training books for toddlers will be available for preview and for ordering, both at the seminar on May 9 and an in-store display will highlight the recommended items as well.

Also partnering with OCMS to sponsor this seminar, Hingham Mothers' Club, founded in 1940 with the mission to promote civic and community welfare and sociability, is an active supporter of educating parents and bringing information to its members and to the entire Hingham community. Membership information will be available at the seminar and can be found online at www.hinghammothersclub.org.

HAPPENINGS

Osgood School May Arts Night

On Wednesday, May 23 from 6 to 8 p.m., Joseph Osgood School will host its annual May Arts Night. This year's theme, Color Our World, is sure to inspire the creativity of students and parents alike. Children will have the chance to create with every color of the rainbow.

In addition to a variety of craft projects for the children to make, there will be dance demonstrations in they gym and of course, the ever-popular line dance stylings of our own Mr. Dykas. Mrs. Ogden and Miss Diminnie will be organizing a special art project and Mrs. Hathon will be keeping the beat going in the music room.

As always, hot dogs and refreshments, including Del's Lemonade, will be available for sale. And in support of the PSO, cool water bottles and customizable eco friendly bags will also be available for sale. If you would like to host a table or lend a helping hand, contact either Kathy Bergers at 781-383-8239 or Heather Nicholls 781-383-9985.

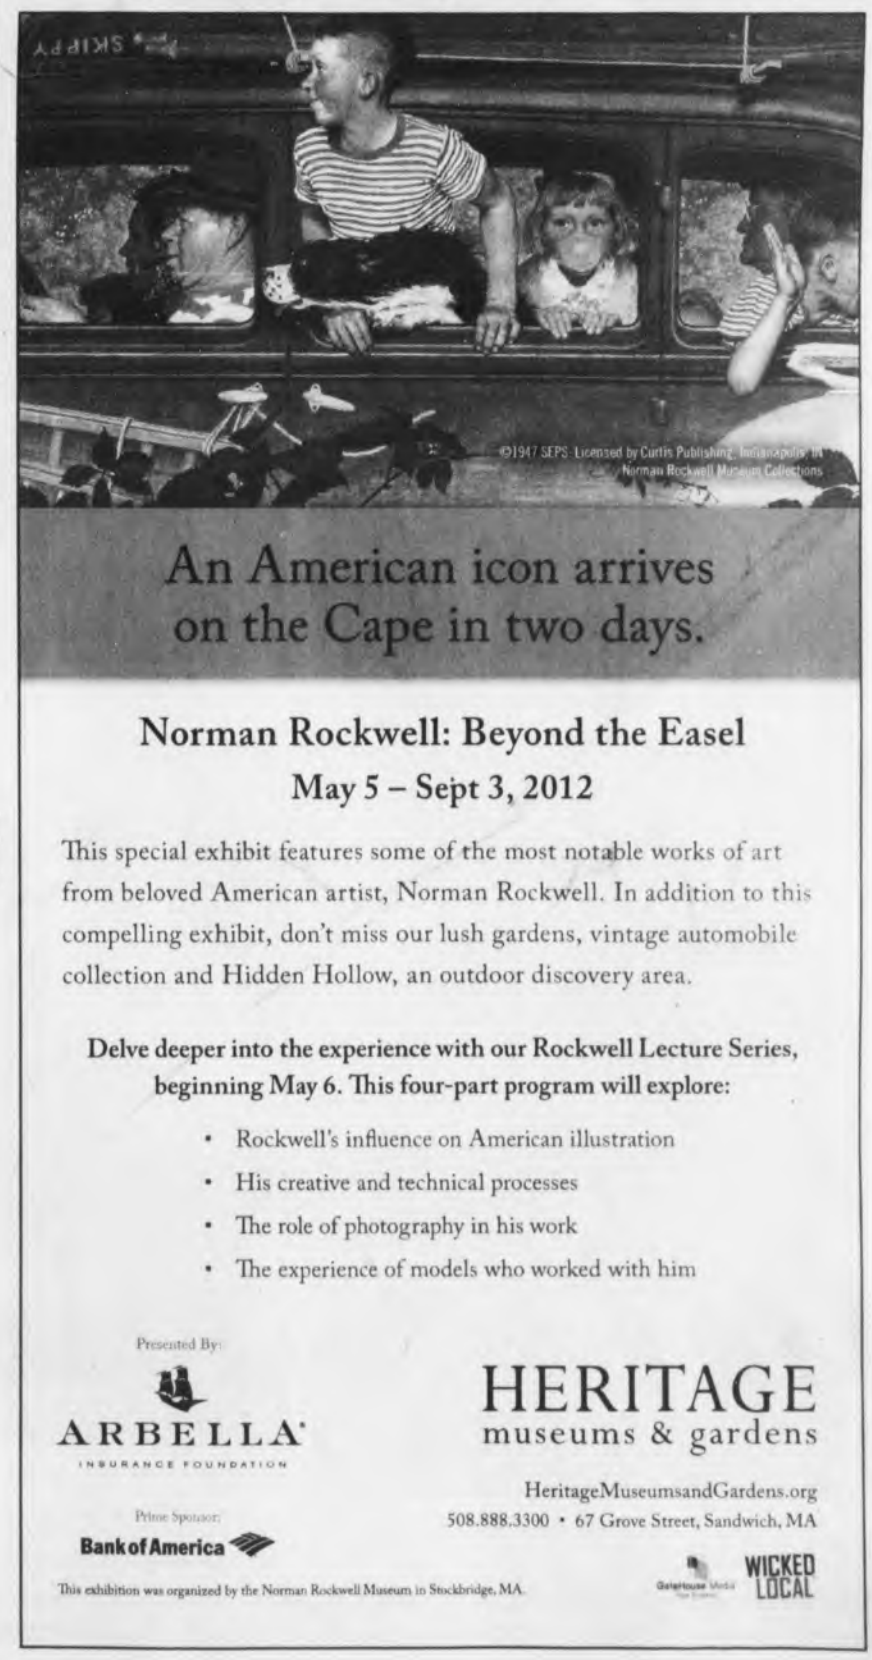
Family Fun Run set for June 10

The Cohassset Education Foundation and the Cohasset Recreation Department will be sponsoring a First Annual Family Fun Run on Sunday, June 10. There will be a 5K road race at 1 p.m., a 1 mile walk/run around the Common at 2:15 p.m., a Tot Trot (for children 5 & under) at 2:45 p.m., and a Family Fun Fair from 1 to 4 p.m.

All proceeds from the event will benefit the Cohasset public schools and the recreation department. The event promises to be lots of fun for all ages with Mr. Dykas leading a race warm-up and Dance Party on the Common. In addition, there will be lots of children's activities including a petting zoo from Penniman Hill Farm and face painting. Come join the fun with live music and concessions from b.good burgers, Del's lemonade, and Nona's ice cream.

Register now at www.cohasseteducation.org. The tax-deductible entry fee for the 5k race is $20, $15 for 1 mile walk/run, and the Tot Trot is free. Free T-shirts will be awarded to the first 200 people to register.

View tall ships in Boston Harbor



Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person, which includes the narrated tour, stationery and passed hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. This is a rain or shine event, but the yachts panoramic windows provide excellent viewing from inside its casually elegant cabin. The Historical Society extends an open invitation for this marine adventure. This seagoing afternoon would make a lovely family outing or special gift.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Tai Chi Classes at Cohasset Rec

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering Tai Chi as part of this year's Spring class line-up. Here are the basics as explained by Instructor Fred Willette.

What is Tai Chi?

It might be loosely described as an internal martial art that is useful as a health exercise, a meditation in motion and a method for self-defense. Each one of these ideas could be elaborated upon if we had more time and space.

Why do you do Tai Chi?

In terms of physical health it gives us a general feeling of balance and relaxation. In Chinese medicine Tai chi is often prescribed as a healing modality. There are studies demonstrating Tai Chi's effectiveness improving balance, oxygen saturation and neurological function.

In addition, I think it's important to have some sort of spiritual discipline. Tai Chi ties us together in a practice that is simultaneously difficult, infinite and continually new. We often get a sense of the energy that permeates and connects everything. We don't have to go looking for it, it usually just shows up. It's beyond conscious thought.

My teacher would often say it's one of the few arts that allows you to physically experience the universe. It may sound esoteric, but it's quite accurate, I think.

What is the usual progression in learning Tai Chi?

We begin with the solo form, this builds a good foundation from which other good things can spring. Most people then go on to push-hands which is a partner exercise It's a meditation in cultivating sensitivity while trying to unbalance each other. It's a fascinating exercise that requires a non-competitive attitude. After students have put in sufficient time, we learn the sword form, which is an opportunity to express ourselves and our energy through an inanimate object. We practice with wooden swords and we also have a dueling practice. The sword form moves at a quicker pace than the solo form. It's a lot of fun.

Is Tai Chi difficult?

Doing anything well is difficult. Sometimes the things that appear to be simple are the most difficult, but I'm certain that with perseverance anyone can do Tai Chi well. Without perseverance it's impossible.

How long have you been doing Tai Chi?

I've been a student of Tai Chi for over thirty years and I'm still learning .I studied in New York with Maggie Newman and with other senior disciples of Grand-master Professor Cheng Man-Ching, one of the first true masters to bring Tai Chi to the United States. I still see my teachers any chance I get. Maggie will turn 89 this may and is still teaching full time. Happy Birthday Maggie!

What sort of results can people expect from the study of Tai Chi?

I simply encourage people to try it and see if it makes any difference in their lives. If it does they might want to keep doing it.

Kitchen Gardening

Backyard Kitchen Gardening from Asparagus to Zucchini – May 5, 10 a.m. to noon. Discussed will be seed varieties, succession planting and harvesting tips for annual and perennial vegetables and herbs. Come share ideas, joys and questions as a kitchen garden is organized with a diverse selection of fruits, vegetables, flowers and herbs. The greenhouse and education garden will be the place of observation and work. Seeds will be sowed, and attendees will pot up some transplants and discuss strategies for a full, organic and sustainable growing season. Take home some seeds, plants, new plans, purpose and confidence. Space is limited so pre-register early. Cost is $15 for members of Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $20 for non-members.

Farm-to-Table Dinner – Holly Hill Farm will host a farm-to-table dinner from 6 to 8 p.m., on Saturday, May 12. This special event, Spring Asparagus & More!, will offer guests a chance to visit the field where asparagus grows, discover its growing habits, learn tips for growing asparagus at home, and then enjoy a dinner that incorporates local organic spring salad greens, leeks, asparagus and more in various recipes. Visiting chef Maryann Saporito has created the menu and selected organic wine pairings to compliment the meal. This fundraising dinner will support Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center based at Holly Hill Farm, and will ensure the continuation of educational programs at the historic family farm and in school gardens around the South Shore. Seating is limited so pre-register by contacting Jon Belber at jbelberholly-hill@hotmail.com or calling 781-383-6565. Cost is $75 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $85 for non-members.

Spring Birding – Join local bird caller and enthusiast Sally Avery for Spring Birding in the woods and trails at Holly Hill Farm from 8 to 9:30 a.m., on Saturday, May 12. Avery has led numerous tours for Mass Audubon, as well as for the Friends of Holly Hill Farm. She has a local and statewide following who delight in her expertise and program presentation. Bring good walking shoes and keen ears and eyes as attendees delight in this rite of spring. Pre-registration is encouraged. Free for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm and $5 for non-members.

FBI training for local law enforcement

The following was provided by the FBI LEOKA officer safety and survival program.

Over the summer Police Chiefs Mark DeLuca, Cohasset and Richard Billings, Hull, wanted to do something to keep students, in their towns, safe. The result was a very informative training session for law enforcement and school personnel.

DeLuca and the Cohasset Police Department agreed to host the training at the Cohasset Library. They also invited law enforcement and school personnel from Norwell and Hingham, their partners in the new regional, dispatch center. FBI agents came and conducted sessions on Internet Safety and Potential School Shooter Threats. The session was attended by 43 officers and school personnel from the four towns.

FBI Special Agent, Gary Coffey, said he wished more towns would get together, for training, like these four towns did as the FBI, with their limited resources, can only train large groups. The training sessions were so successful that the chiefs have invited the FBI back for another training session in May. The May session is for law enforcement and is intended to keep them safer in a very dangerous job. The session is titled L.E.O.K.A (Law Enforcement Officers Killed or Assaulted).

Course description: this program relies on a detailed analysis of the deadly mix involving officers, offenders and the circumstances under which they come together that result in death or serious bodily injury to police officers. Demographic and behavioral descriptors of victim officers and offenders will be discussed, as will the recurring circumstances under which police officers are most often killed or injured.

The course is so popular that it is only available to law enforcement groups of 50 or more and the current waiting period for a training session is over eight months! In addition to Cohasset and Hull, DeLuca and Billings have opened up the training to law enforcement in several South Shore towns, including: Norwell, Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Plympton and the Coast Guard.

Instructor Bill Baker:

Chief William D. Baker is a 37-year veteran of law enforcement. He has been a Police Chief in Massachusetts, New Hampshire & Maine; he served as Director of Police Training, Commissioner & Assistant Secretary of Public Safety in Massachusetts; he has trained and mentored national police leaders in more than 36 countries around the world as Assistant Director of International Training for the United States Department of Justice in Washington DC; and has patrolled cities such as Moscow Russia, Odessa Ukraine, Guatemala City Guatemala, Kampala Uganda & Port au Prince Haiti. He concluded his full time law enforcement career as a Chief in February of 2011 and was active in tactical use of force situations right up until his last day on duty. He is a career long DT & Firearms instructor. Baker is also a lawyer and has served as an expert witness defending police officers falsely accused of excessive force. Baker is a graduate of the 129th Session of the FBI National Academy. Baker is one of five national instructors for LEOKA.

Details:

- Date: May 31
- Time: 8:00am to Noon
- Location: Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Rd.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 14, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You Ewes and Rams will find your ideas cheered by a mostly receptive flock. Those few dissenters could well be turned around by your charm and powers of persuasion.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's time for the bold and beautiful Bovine to shake off the dust of the past and shape up with new ideas for the future. This could surprise some folks, but they'll soon adjust.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those nagging new doubts about an upcoming decision should alert you to step back (at least temporarily) so you can reassess its potential impact from a new perspective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That unpleasant situation you hoped would go away by itself needs immediate attention before it affects an upcoming decision. Expect your supporters to rally around your cause.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're moving up and away from that recent setback. But remain cautious about finances. An exercise in thrift today helps cushion a possible end-of-the-month money squeeze.

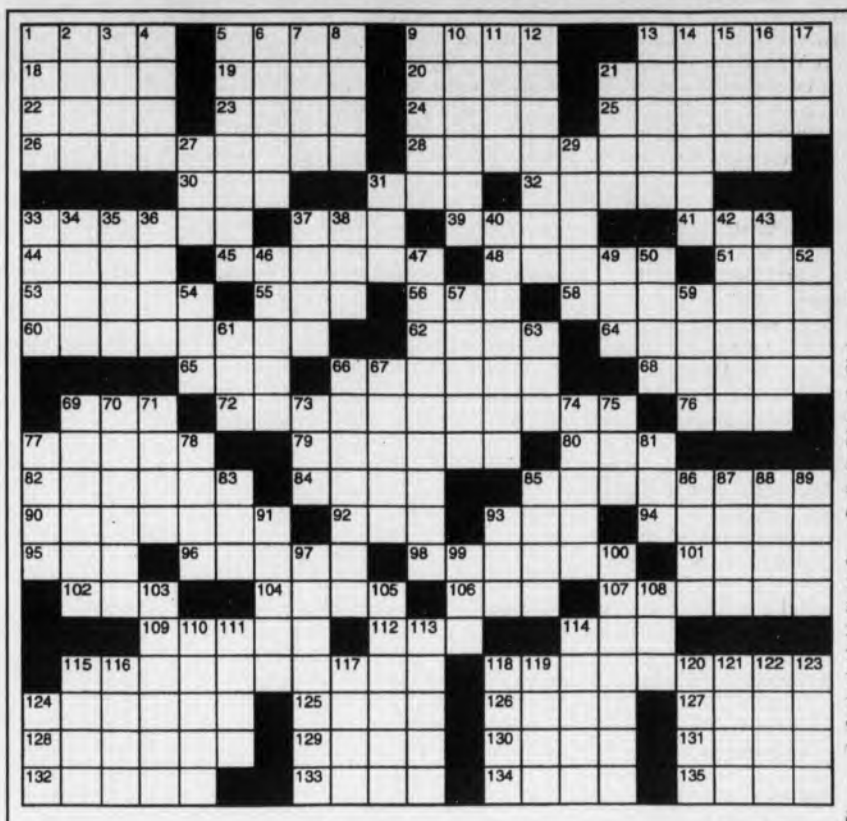
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're still dealing with overtones of pessimism that cause you to doubt your ability to make some needed changes. But the negative pressures will ease up by week's end.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be some fallout from the way you handled a recent family problem. But those who know that you were in the right won't hesitate to step in on your behalf.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Financial strains ease by week's end. Meanwhile, focus on cultivating that new relationship if you hope to have it blossom into something more meaningful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Health matters once again dominate the week. Be careful not to ignore recurrences of an old problem. An almost-forgotten commitment resurfaces.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The emergence of an unusual selfish streak could dismay those close to you. Defy it — don't justify it — so you can become your gracious self again.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Reassess your decision to stay with the status quo. It might seem like the sensible thing to do right now, but changes around you could make that choice a risky one.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Move decisively but cautiously when dealing with a delicate personal matter. The fewer mistakes you make now, the less likely it is that the problem will recur later on.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can find beauty where many cannot. And you enjoy sharing your discovery with others.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

LECTURE SERIES

Pursuing a life of peace

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices will take place at 7:15 p.m., on Tuesday, May 8. John Dear, S.J will present a lecture titled "Lazurus, Come Forth! How Jesus Confronts the Culture of Death and Invites Us into the New Life of Peace."

John Dear is an internationally recognized voice for peace and nonviolence.
COURTESY PHOTO

Dear is an internationally recognized voice for peace and nonviolence. He has served for many years as the director of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the largest interfaith peace organization in the United States. He has traveled the war zones of the world, been arrested 75 times for peace, led Nobel Peace prize winners to Iraq and writes a weekly column for the National Catholic Reporter. In 2008, he was nominated by Archbishop Desmond Tutu for the Nobel Peace Prize. He lives in New Mexico.

Dear will discuss his new book, "Lazurus, Come Forth!," which offers a new reading of the story of Lazurus, which call people to pursue a life of peace: "To remove the stone that traps us in violence, to call each other out of our tombs, to unbind one another and set each other free to live in peace. In doing so, we will fulfill our vocation as disciples of Jesus and enter the fullness of life today."

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Reservations will not be taken. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the website at glastonburyabbey.org.

WORSHIP NOTES

Mother's Day Walk for PEACE

Community members are encouraged to join our "Compassionate Cohasset" walking team on Sunday, May 13 as we participate in Boston's 16th Annual Mother's Day Walk for PEACE. The Mother's Day Walk for PEACE began in Dorchester in 1996 to support families who had lost children to violence.

The Walk is the major fundraiser for the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute – a 501 C3 organization committed to ending violence by offering a nationally recognized Peace Education Curriculum, crises management for families, promoting peaceful resolution to prevent retaliatory violence and training for professionals dealing with families impacted by violence. Participating in the 3.6 mile walk is a powerful and uplifting experience.

If you are unable to walk but would like to pledge your financial support, all contributions are appreciated. For more information, please contact Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

SKY Vacation Bible School offered

A summer kids' event called Sky will take place at St. Stephen's, Cohasset, from June 25 to June 29. At Sky, faith and imagination will soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids will participate in Bible-learning activities, sing songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into treats, experience Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test the Science gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day will conclude with Fly Away Finale – a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned. Family and friends are invited to come at 11:30 a.m., on June 29, for a Fly Away Finale.

Sky is for kids from preschool (age 3) through fifth grade, and will take place from 9 a.m. to noon each day. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

SIXTH ANNUAL

PMC-Kids ride Sunday June 10

The sixth annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC) South Shore Kids Ride will take place the morning of Sunday, June 10, from 9 a.m. to noon. The 2012 ride will be held, rain or shine, at DCR Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. Family and friends will celebrate their rider's efforts during a fun-filled family day with face painting, magic, balloon sculptures, bouncy slide, Plymouth County Sheriff's Children ID Program, free Brigham's Ice Cream, free food and beverages from Stop & Shop, and more.

This year a more accurate name, PMC South Shore Kids Ride, replaces the original event name, PMC Hingham Kids Ride, to better reflect the geography of the communities represented by the young riders. Just like the events from previous years, kids from across the South Shore will raise funds to benefit Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund.

The PMC South Shore Kids Ride is designed to inspire children of all ages to experience the joys of giving and helping others by getting on their bikes to beat cancer. It is moving to learn how many riders' lives have been touched by cancer, and by riding and raising money, kids feel they are helping in the fight. It is important to note that 100% of all PMC donations are used to fund cancer research and help support the lives of pediatric and adult cancer patients at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. Also, The PMC South Shore Kids Ride is an outgrowth of the world famous 190-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) adult ride.

One way the PMC honors pediatric cancer patients is through the Pedal Partner Program, where PMC adult teams and Kids Rides are matched up with, and ride in honor of, Jimmy Fund Clinic patients. This relationship between patient and rider motivates cyclists in their training and provides patients with exciting distractions from their treatments. Participating in the Pedal Partner Program this year is Elena Monteiro, 3 years old from Whitman, who has acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL), who is the Pedal Partner for the PMC South Shore Kids Ride and the PMC's Team Perini. Elena's grandmother, Claire Connolly of Hingham is a 7-year PMC rider as well.

The local schools and their students are an integral part in making the PMC South Shore Kids Ride a huge success. The Kids Ride welcomes schools and their students to be involved with this fundraising and "funraising" event.

Register now and help the PMC South Shore Kids Ride reach this year's goal of 500 riders and $50,000 in fundraising. Kids, ages 3-15, can join or create a team in honor of a loved one with cancer by registering online at http://kids.pmc.org/hingham. Riders can choose from five supervised route options, from Tykes on training wheels to Mountaineers riding on unpaved mountain bike trails. Despite inclement weather last year, the 2011 PMC Hingham Kids Ride raised $62,000, and all 35 statewide PMC Kids Rides combined raised $900,000 in 2011. The goal this year for PMC Kids Rides is $1,000,000! Combined with the PMC adult ride, a grand total of $34,000,000 was raised last year to fund cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Volunteers, ages 12-112, are needed for all aspects of the event and can visit the website to sign up and to view a detailed list of opportunities at http://kids.pmc.org/hingham. Attend the next volunteer meeting on May 17th at 7:00 p.m. at the DCR Wompatuck State Park Visitor's Center in Hingham to learn more about how you, your friends and family can help. Donations can be made online to as an e-gift for a PMC South Shore Kids Rider or in PMC South Shore Kids Ride general fund at http://kids.pmc.org/hingham or via checks made out to PMC (in memo line: PMC South Shore Kids Ride) sent to PMC, 77 4th Ave., Needham, MA 02499. We are actively seeking sponsorships, raffle and goodie bags items for this event from individuals and/or local retailers. Please contact pmchingham@comcast.net for more information and to contact the event coordinators of the event, Jackie Temple and Lisa Patterson.

COASTAL ENVIRONMENT

Student sign ups for summer Institute

It's time for students, currently in grades eight through 12, to sign up for the Summer Institute Research program, hosted at CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research. For those unfamiliar with the Summer Institute, the purpose of the program is to engage students in the complete research cycle of producing and "publishing" data about our coastal environment. The data we produce in the projects listed below is needed by the Town of Cohasset (Jacobs Meadow, Drifters, for example); state agencies such as the Department of Ecological Restoration (wetland monitoring, for example); or local watershed organizations such as the Gulf Association (Gulf River project, for example). The Summer Institute is a hands-on example of education that requires students to apply and strengthen their academic skills and knowledge while actively solving real problems about which people in our community and in our state care deeply. Our school-community-business-government partnership is truly unique.

The program is open to all area high school students. Students enrolled in Cohasset Middle High School, however, are eligible to receive 1.25 course credits provided they successfully complete 54 hours of research spanning training, fieldwork, background study, data analysis, and report writing or presenting.

Students joining a research project join as a member of CSCR, and participate as a member of a research team. While the summer months make up the bulk of our time spent in the field, completing a research project takes much longer. Research teams meet frequently- at convenient times for team members-throughout the year. Therefore, we request that all research team participants become Sustaining Members of CSCR. Sustaining Members benefit from working with CSCR project leaders and project partners year-round. Sustaining Members also support purchase of supplies and equipment not covered in grant funding, in addition to supporting operational expenses of CSCR. A Sustaining Membership is $250. Scholarship support is available upon request.

- Interested students and parents may sign up directly at the CSCR website, www.ccscr.org.

Project Name: Wetland Monitoring

Project site(s): Jacobs Meadows, Parker Ave, or Musquashicut Pond

Description: Wetland research teams collect data for the state's Department of Ecological Restoration. Students monitor fish in the wetland, vegetation, birds, worms and water quality in the marsh.

Project Name: Gulf River

Description: The Gulf River project will include basic water quality monitoring at established sites along the river; it may also include bacteria studies, nitrates studies, and fish studies. This data is critical to the town and to the members of the Gulf Association.

Project Name: Cohasset Harbor Tidal Flushing (the Drifters)

Project site(s): Cohasset Harbor and Cohasset Cove

Description: The Drifters project is entering its third and most critical year. Students will not only calculate tidal currents using surface drifters, students will examine fresh and salt water mixing the harbor. This data is critically important to several groups in town.

Project Name: Macro Invertebrates of the Harbor

Project site(s): Cohasset Harbor (Baily's Creek, Cohasset Cove, Bassings Beach)

Description: This study is designed to locate, preserve, and identify worms, shellfish, crustaceans, and creepy crawlers" that live in the sand, sediment, mud, and muck of the Harbor. This study is critical to the town because everyone says that bio-diversity has declined in the harbor, but no one has data to support the claim. Students on this research team will be pioneers in "unchartered" waters.

Project Name: Sea Perch Robotics

Project site(s): Cohasset Harbor eelgrass beds near Bassing Beach

Description: Sea Perch takes its name from the navy's underwater robotics programs. Students in this project will construct (from a kit) a submersible ROV (remotely operated vehicle) for the purpose of locating and examining (with an underwater camera) an eelgrass bed in Cohasset Harbor. Eel grass is an indicator of a health ecosystem; the last time anyone studied eelgrass in the harbor was 1994. It's time to see if it's still there, grown, deteriorated, or disappeared! SCUBA certified students are especially welcomed.

Project Name: GIS Phragmite Mapping

Project site(s): All three wetland sites: Jacobs Meadows, Parker Ave, or Musquashicut Pond

Description: The wetland sites all have invasive plants growing "out of control." The towns of Cohasset and Scituate are trying to get more tidal water into the marshes in order to kill the salt intolerant invasive plant called phragmites. Students will learn how to use GPS technology to create maps of the plant's extent. These maps will be used to measure change over time. This is a hands-on high tech project that combines fieldwork with computer mapping.

Project Name: Cohasset Harbor Water Quality (NPDES)

Project site(s): Cohasset Harbor (3 sites), plus one site behind the Legion and one on the Gulf River

Description: NPDES is a federal government program, the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System.Working that requires cities and town to test the water into which treated waste water is discharged. This project will be coordinated by the Waste Water Treatment Plant and the CHS student intern. This project takes place only once a week at low tide, on days of the week to be decided by the research team.

Special Projects and Opportunities

1. CSCR Student Staff: Join one or more teams that focus on Lab Management, Website building, Publicity, Grant Writing, Finance, and Data Management.

2. Certification as a CSCR specialists: We are working with the corporation, United Water, to develop competency tests. Students who pass these tests will become eligible to serve as paid interns at CSCR.

3. Boat Building: CMI, the rowing club, is offering a Spring and Summer Boat Building course. See Mr. Buckley for details

4. Organic Farming: Each summer, a group of students tend to the organic garden in the courtyard. See Ms. McGrail for details about this summer's plans.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Not your typical coffeehouse

ANNE SMITH

High school students are invited to come hang out, have a cup of coffee and watch some great performances. SSC Crew Coffeehouse 2012 is Sunday, May 6.

When I was hired as South Shore Conservatory's Duxbury Campus Manager in August 2009, my main responsibility was to raise the visibility of the Conservatory in the Duxbury community. Since then, however, my reach has extended far beyond Duxbury.

We created Open Mic in 2010, initially as a way of getting new people in the building, and as a way to counteract the perception that the Conservatory was a place that catered only to classical musicians. We wanted to bring in artists of all kinds - singer/songwriters, jazz musicians, folk guitar players and Celtic fiddlers, and introduce them to the Conservatory in a casual, supportive way.

Open Mic was an instant hit because it offered teens a way to get together and make music. It offered them an instant community of artistic, creative kids from all over the South Shore. The surprise in all of this was the group of "regulars" that returned every month, and the level of enthusiasm they had for participating in the workings of Open Mic. They wanted to emcee and run the sound equipment and work as stage hands. Not content to merely show up and perform, they were eager to have a stake in the process.

This fall, we capitalized on this energy by creating the SSC Crew, a teen advisory committee of SSC students dedicated to giving high school student-artists from the South Shore an opportunity to work together as problem solvers, community builders and ambassadors for the Conservatory. The Crew meets on Tuesday nights, once a month to socialize, learn from professionals in the field, and work as a team on a series of projects from conception to completion.

Crew members, recommended by their Conservatory teachers, are chosen to represent the many different artistic disciplines offered at SSC. In this year's Crew, there are four Hingham students: Ballet student Sarah Richmond, percussionist Rob Auchincloss, guitar player Sam Sergi, and piano and voice student Aoife Kingsbury. Learn more about them at http://www.sscmusic.org/crew.html. Together with the other six crew members from Marshfield, Kingston and Duxbury, they committed this fall to creating and running an event to raise scholarship money so that others may participate in the arts.

This first event, SSC Crew Coffeehouse, is coming up on Sunday, May 6. They will transform the Duxbury campus performance hall into a chill environment with low lighting, coffee, sweets and couches. Teen artists, recruited by Crew members from all over the South Shore, will come to sing, act, paint and perform. They have raided their hometown music, drama and art departments for talent. This coffeehouse is about bringing people together to celebrate art in all its forms.

High school students are invited to come hang out, have a cup of coffee and watch some great performances. SSC Crew Coffeehouse 2012 is Sunday, May 6, from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Ellison Center for the Arts, 64 St George St., Duxbury. Cover charge is $8 in advance, or $10 at the door. Tickets are available online at www.sscmusic.org and through SSC Crew members. For more information, or to purchase tickets over the phone, call 781-934-2731, ext. 11.

DON'T MISS THIS

Orders for rain barrels due May 9

Aquarion Water Co. of Massachusetts has partnered with the Great American Rain Barrel Co. in Hyde Park to offer recycled barrels to residents of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset as part of a water conservation program.

"We are thrilled to be offering this simple and inexpensive device to our customers to bring down their water costs and help our community protect the aquifers," said Harry Hibbard, vice president of Aquarion. "Like the recycling bin, we hope rain barrels become a standard in each and every home."

Suzanne Gebelein, owner of the Great American Rain Barrel Co. said, "We have been selling barrels for 20 years and we are seeing a very positive trend. More and more water companies nationwide, like Aquarion, are bringing large scale programs to their customers, encouraging more homeowners to conserve water but also help their town mitigate pollution in the water supplies on a larger scale."

Aquarion is offering the Great American Rain Barrel in three colors: Forest Green, Earth Brown or Nantucket Gray for $69 versus the retail price of $119. To take advantage of this community program discount, visit www.greatamericanrainbarrel.com look for community programs in the left side bar, and find Aquarion – Hingham, Hull Cohasset, email info@tgarb.com or call 800-251-2352. Barrels will be distributed to buyers from 4 to 6 p.m., on Thursday, May 17, at Aquarion Water Co., 900 Main St., Hingham. Deadline for ordering is 5 p.m., on Wednesday, May 9th.

Orders can also be placed at Aquarion's open house 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 5, at 900 Main St., Hingham.

Great American Rain Barrel Co. is a subsidiary of a Mediterranean specialty food importing business. Barrels are recycled from 60-gallon shipping drums and distributed nationwide. For information about The Great American Rain Barrel Co. and their products, visit www.greatamericanrainbarrel.com.

TOWN MEETING PREVIEW

Meals tax, water-sewer, more

Starts 9 a.m. Saturday at the high school

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This year's Annual Town Meeting is tomorrow, May 12, starting at 9 a.m. at the Cohasset High School gymnasium. The meeting will come to order as soon as 100 voters have signed in.

Each year, Town Meeting convenes to discuss and vote on a host of issues concerning the town. Town meeting has the ultimate say on how Cohasset's money is spent. And on the town meeting floor, the town's budget for the coming fiscal year is front and center.

Saturday is day one of Town Meeting; a second date has also been reserved: Monday, May 21 at 7 p.m. The reason for the continuation is to allow the Water Commission enough time to review bids for the new water plant contract (the current contract with American Water expires at the end of June).

Town Meeting will conclude on Saturday with Article 21 and will pick up on May 21 with Article 22.

The Mariner has reported on several of the warrant articles the town will vote on tomorrow, detailing many of the complexities and controversies surrounding several hot button issues, including:

• The citizens' petition to reorganize the water and sewer departments

STATION UPDATE

Public safety talk tabled

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This week, Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski planned to share an update on the public safety facility as the police department prepares to move its dispatchers to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham later this month.

Many residents and officials have expressed concerns over what will happen if Cohasset's police station should go dark from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and 24/7 all weekend, since the dispatchers will no longer work out of the station and there are times when all on-duty officers will be on patrol.

Milanoski has said that someone will be working out of the police station most of the time, whether it's the chief, deputy chief, detectives or lieutenants. The town manager has also explained that the police station lobby will be turned into a "safe room" with a video monitor system that will be linked back to the SSRECC.

The costs of needed security upgrades are still relatively unknown, but so far the Capital Budget Committee has reported that it will cost $20,000 to replace the station's current wooden doors leading to evidence rooms with steel-framed doors.

The discussion was on the agenda for Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting and Police Chief Mark DeLuca was in the audience to weigh in on the matter. The discussion was scheduled to occur during the Town Manager's update at 9 p.m.

However, Chief DeLuca made a quick exit during the selectmen's meeting; the board and audience members wondered if he would return later.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr suggested tabling the dis-

Osgood principal resigns

Sharon Bellao leaves after one year in Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Joseph Osgood School Principal Sharon Bellao left her position and left the school premises on Friday, May 8. Bellao has worked in the Cohasset school district for less than a year.

Bellao started as Osgood's principal in July 2011. Before coming to Cohasset, she was principal at Forestdale School, which serves kindergarten through eighth grade, in East Sandwich, Mass. Prior to serving in East Sandwich, Bellao was principal at Woodsdale Elementary in Abington.

Regarding Bellao's sudden departure, Supt. of Schools Barbara Cataldo said in an email to the Mariner, "Mrs. Bellao made the decision to leave her position at Osgood, and I accepted her resignation. We wish her nothing but the best and we appreciate her service to Cohasset Public Schools."

Parents received a letter this week notifying them of Bellao's resignation. The letter stated that Deer Hill principal Jennifer deChiara has

U.S. News ranks CHS among best

What
The U.S. News Best High Schools in Massachusetts report for 2012 was released recently, and Cohasset High School made the top ten.

How
After reviewing 21,776 public high schools across the country, 87 Mass. schools were chosen. Among these schools, 27 were awarded gold medals, 37 earned silver medals, and 23 received bronze medals.

More
To be eligible for a state ranking, a school must have received a national gold or silver medal.
Cohasset was awarded a gold medal and was ranked number 210 nationally. Cohasset High joins schools such as the Boston Latin School in Boston, the Sturgis Charter Public School in Hyannis, Hopkinton

HS, Belmont HS, Weston HS, Dover-Sherborn HS, Sharon HS, Mystic Valley Regional Charter School in Malden, and The Bromfeld School in Harvard in the top ten.

Quote
School Committee member Dr. Paul Schubert said during Wednesday's School Committee meeting: "This is a move up from last year... We achieve a better rating every year. Three of the schools [in the top 10] are charter schools that require an exam to get in; take those three out, and we're ranked number seven."

Kids fishing derby May 19

The Scituate Rod & Gun Club will host its annual Kids' Fishing Derby on Saturday, May 19 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The pond is stocked with fish and rods and reels are provided on a first come first served basis. Those with rods and reels are encouraged to bring their own. Hooks, bobbers and bait provided.

Prizes will be given for largest fish caught and the day includes a lunch of hot dogs and soda. Kids 12 and under only and must be accompanied by an adult. Event is free.

The Scituate Rod & Gun Club is located on Route 3A, North Scituate, opposite mile marker 38. For more information, call 781-545-1510.

Cell phone drive underway

Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Agency is continuing its efforts to support the community with another drive. Ever wonder what to do with old cell phones? During the month of May, people can donate all working and non-working cell phones to Hope Phones. Just drop off used phones at the company's office at 15 Depot Court, Monday through Friday.

Hope Phones will recycle phones collected and use the funds to give isolated people in the developing world access to medical care. All data on the phone will be erased through a certified and secure process.

Poppy Drive in Cohasset

The annual Poppy Drive will take place this year on May 24, 25 and 26.

Each year the VFW's success in performing this drive can only be achieved with volunteers taking the time to man tables at Shaw's, Stop & Shop and Curtis Liquors.

This year the VFW is asking for volunteers to call Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079 to donate the times one can sit at locations.

NEWS UPDATE

Cohasset Police Officer Patrick Kenney escorts John McDonough, 45, of King Street into Quincy District Court Wednesday morning to face manslaughter charges in the death of his brother-in-law after a domestic dispute Tuesday night. STAFF PHOTO/GREG DERR

Birthday party ends in tragedy

From Patriot Ledger and Cohasset Mariner reports.

The attorney for a 45-year-old King Street man accused of killing his brother-in-law at a birthday party said his client was trying to protect his family when an altercation between the two turned deadly.

John T. McDonough and his wife, Melissa, hosted a small party Tuesday night at their home at 344 King St. to celebrate the 45th birthday of Melissa's brother, David M. Hoelzer of East Dennis. Witnesses told police Hoelzer drank alcohol at the gathering and, as the night went on, became more violent and disruptive.

Witnesses say the violence culminated with a fatal fight between John McDonough and Hoelzer.

"He is an emotional wreck," attorney Robert Harnais said of McDonough's reaction to the death. "This is a man who had to take steps to protect himself and his family."

McDonough was arraigned Wednesday morning in Quincy District Court on charges of manslaughter and assault and battery in the death of Hoelzer. He was released on $50,000 bail and has a probable-cause hearing scheduled for June 27.

The victim's father, Arthur Hoelzer, 71, said he witnessed the fight between his son and McDonough. He told authorities he saw McDonough put his son in a "headlock" and then they both fell to the floor. McDonough got up, but Hoelzer didn't, Arthur told police.

Arthur Hoelzer said his son "was becoming increasingly loud and began swearing" prior to his physical altercation with McDonough.

Melissa McDonough, the victim's sister and the defendant's wife, told police her brother "went into a rage and hit someone over the head with a chair."

"The victim was acting out, and he became irrational and violent," Harnais said. "In an effort to subdue the man and protect other members of the party, it had a tragic end."

At approximately 8:50 p.m., on Tuesday Cohasset Police responded to the King Street address and encountered an unresponsive Hoelzer.

Cohasset Detective James McLean administered CPR assisted by Officer Jay StIves and Sgt. Christy Tarrantino. Scituate ambulance and Cohasset Engine 2 arrived. Life-saving efforts were continued by Cohasset paramedic Robert Nadeau and fire Lt. James Curley and Scituate paramedics Donna McGrath and Thomas Doyle, according to the police report available at the courthouse.

Hoelzer was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was pronounced dead at 9:52 p.m..

McDonough is a former executive of the Rugged Bear children's retail clothing chain. He served as chief operating officer of the Norwood-based chain, which once had 29 stores. The company declared bankruptcy in 2010 and was sold to a Boston brokerage, Detwiler Fenton.

The chain was founded in 1980 and owned by members of the McDonough family, which also started the Eastern Mountain Sports outdoor apparel chain.

Standing before Judge Paul McCallum at his arraignment, McDonough pleaded not guilty to both charges.

District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey commended Chief Mark DeLuca and officers of the Cohasset Police Department for their quick response and ongoing work with detectives assigned to the Norfolk District Attorney's Office and the Massachusetts State Police Crime Scene Services.

On Thursday (May 3) at about 11:50 p.m., Cohasset Police officers were dispatched to the intersection of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road for a report of a serious single-car accident.

When officers arrived they observed a 1998 Honda Civic with extensive damage on Black Rock Beach. It appeared that the driver of the Civic breached the seawall at a very high rate of speed (coming down the Forest Avenue hill), flipped several times, and nearly landed in the Atlantic Ocean.

The driver of the vehicle, a 56-year-old Hull woman, sustained serious injuries during the crash, and was transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth by Cohasset Fire.

Cohasset Officers, with the assistance of a Massachusetts State Police State Police Collision Analysis and Reconstruction Section, are investigating this accident. Officers were tied-up on scene for over four hours while the vehicle was removed from the beach with specially equipped wreckers from Express Towing in Braintree.

Hit & run

A 57-year-old Cohasset man reported to police at 3:24 p.m. on Monday (April 30) that his 2004 Toyota Avalon, which was parked at Wadleigh Park, had been damaged. Police said the man parked there to take a walk on the beach and when he returned there was a large scratch on the side of his vehicle. Police said another vehicle had apparently sideswiped his car and left.

Deer accident

A 46-year-old Cohasset man reported that he was traveling down Sohier Street toward the village in his 2010 Honda CRV on Tuesday morning (May 1) when a deer ran in front of his vehicle. The man struck the deer that ran off into the woods, police said. He drove to the station to report the incident and have police look at the damage to his vehicle.

Cell phone

A woman went to the police station last Wednesday at 9:15 a.m. to report a message on her cell phone from a caller claiming to be from her bank and seeking her social security number. She did not provide the caller with her social security number. Police logged the incident but it was difficult to locate the source of the call. They said she was wise not to give out her social security number over the phone.

Dispute

A 45-year-old man with a business on Pleasant Street got into a verbal argument with a letter carrier last week over the fact the letter carrier left a certified mail notice in his mailbox and did not deliver it directly to the office, police said. The mailbox is in a bank of mailboxes. The letter carrier pointed out that none of the offices are marked with a number, so he was not sure where it should go, police said. The postal customer went to the post office to complain. Going forward the postmaster will call the businessman if a certified letter arrives and he can go to the post office to pick it up, police said.

Larceny

On Wednesday (May 2), a 39-year-old Scituate woman notified police that $700 in kitchen equipment, including a stainless steel table and large cutting board, and a $700 spool of electrical wiring were missing from a commercial property undergoing renovations on Ripley Road. Cohasset detectives are investigating the larceny.

Gravel kicked up

A 23-year-old Hull man in a 2004 Saturn Ion was traveling north on King Street (Route 3A) when the 1989 Mac dump truck in front of him, operated by a 58-year-old Marshfield man, dropped some rocks and gravel from the truck bed that kicked up and damaged the Ion. The incident was reported at 2:34 p.m. on Thursday (May 3).

• Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee's project to pay for window repairs at First Parish Meeting House (which has triggered a church-state debate with input from Town Counsel, the national group Americans United for the Separation of Church and Stae, and the state's Attorney General's office)

• A proposed cigarette ban at stores with pharmacies, and

• The possibility of a meals/hotels tax to bring new revenue to the town.

The town, of course, will have the final say on these issues.

This year's meeting is also one of the latest town meetings in Cohasset's history. It was typically held in March in prior years; last year, Town Meeting was on April 30. One article on this year's warrant asks voters to consider giving the meeting date more flexibility; it could fall any time between March and May. The extra time allows town officials more time to develop and vet the budget. The warrant also asks voters to consider moving Town Meeting to a weekday evening rather than taking place on a Saturday (Article 34).

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained at a recent Board of Selectmen's meeting that Saturdays in May are tough due to Mother's Day, graduation parties and other springtime weekend events.

Selectman chair Ted Carr agreed with the town manager. "I'm concerned about turnout," Carr said in a phone call Wednesday. "On weekends, families have conflicts with sporting activities... I want to encourage everyone to show up to Town Meeting."

Carr said that quite a few articles are likely to be heavily debated on the town meeting floor.

"I think certainly the citizens' petition for water management is going to be a significant town meeting discussion... The proposed smoking bylaw changes will also take some discussion."

The selectmen chair added that he is proud of the process that led to developing a level-funded budget for fiscal year 2013, and the "collaborative way everyone has worked to accomplish this.

"We put a lot of pressure on our interim town manager," Carr added. "He has exceeded our expectations."

Overall, Carr said, "We're presenting a strong set of options for the people of Cohasset to vote on around finances."

Town Moderator Dan Evans will oversee the meeting. Articles will be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available on Saturday; the warrant is also available to view in its entirety on the Cohasset town website (http://www.cohassetmass.org/). There are 34 articles on this year's warrant.

Each voter will also receive a printed copy of the Town Manager's recommended motions on each of the articles. Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will be taken on a voice basis.

Annual Town Meeting

When: Saturday, May 12, 2012, starting at 9 a.m.; continued to Monday, May 21 at 7 p.m.
Where: Cohasset High School gym, 143 Pond Street
How many articles? 34
Hot topics: Here are a few highlights on the warrant (please check your warrant for all the articles):

Expected to come up May 12:
A new tax on meals and hotel stays in town; the meals tax would be 0.75 percent; both taxes would take effect on July 1, 2012
A citizens' petition to consolidate the water and sewer commissions into a single board and to also hire a full-time supervisor of both plants
Transfers to the town's stabilization funds as well as the creation of an Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) Liability Trust Fund
An appropriation of $500,000 to repair damaged school floors (the money was recovered from litigation between the schools and the company that damaged the floors)

Expected to come up May 21:
Community Preservation Act monies to pay for clock and window repairs to First Parish; the clock is owned by the town, while the church owns the windows; the clock repairs will cost $12,500 while the window replacements cost $65,000
A bylaw amendment to ban all cigarette sales in Cohasset stores that have pharmacies, namely CVS, Walgreens and Stop & Shop; the smoking bylaw change would also ban e-cigarettes
$15,000 to fund a feasibility study to install a pipe to mitigate flooding at Treat's Pond
Land and easement transfer articles for the proposed Senior Center project
Waterworks operations contract: If bids come in for a five-year operations contract, the new contract must be approved by Town Meeting
Bylaw amendment to change the Annual Town Meeting date

CANDIDATE'S CORNER

From Ted Carr:

It has been such a pleasure to meet with voters and speak with you about the issues that affect all of us in Cohasset. Recent events have been a terrific opportunity for me to meet with many voters. The co-chairs of my election committee, Marty Nee and Donna McGee, have been very busy to ensure we have more opportunities to meet. I want to share a special thank you to Ralph and Jackie Dormitzer who hosted an event at their home and to Sean and Christine Cunning and Patrick Kennedy who hosted the event at the Focus Gallery.

volunteered to supervise Osgood and Deer Hill through the end of the school year. The note also said that those with questions should call either the director of student services or the superintendent's office.

Bellao developed an extensive reading and literacy program during her tenure at Forestdale School. She was chosen as Osgood's principal after a lengthy search by a committee led by deChiara and Director of Student Services Denise Messina.

Messina was recently released from her contract with the district; it was up for renewal this year. She said in a statement to the Mariner that she was disappointed and had hoped to finish her career in Cohasset. Cataldo has formed a search committee to find a new student services director.

Bellao could not be reached for comment, but the Mariner left a message with a family member.

In an interview with the Mariner last summer, Bellao said that the fact that Osgood serves the youngest students, pre-K through second grade, is what attracted her to the school. She spent 14 years teaching first grade in Sharon.

cussion for next Tuesday's meeting; Milanoski said that he could give the update without DeLuca, but Carr said that he preferred to wait.

The chief did not return to the meeting. Police were called to 344 King St. at 8:50 p.m. to respond to a report of a disturbance; a fight between two brothers-in-law resulted in the death of Dennis resident David Hoelzer, 45. The home's owner, Cohasset resident John McDonough, 45, was charged Wednesday with manslaughter (see related story page 3). According to published reports, Hoelzer was at the McDonough residence to celebrate his birthday.

Milanoski said in a phone interview Thursday that he and Chief DeLuca "are working on developing a solution that's going to maintain a safe public safety building for the public going forward."

HAPPENING SATURDAY

Post Office conducting food drive

This Saturday, May 12, marks the Postal Drive for Cohasset's Food Pantry.

Residents interested in helping out can simply leave donations outside their front doors; Cohasset Postal workers will pick the items up and bring them to the Food Pantry.

The food pantry does not accept expired products or anything that has been opened or partially used.

The pantry needs the following items:

Coffee, Fruit juice, Cereal (healthy), Peanut butter (creamy/crunchy), Jam and jelly, (strawberry/raspberry), Mayonnaise, Ketchup, Fruit (no sugar added), Applesauce, Corned beef hash, Beef stew, Tomato soup, Chicken /vegetable broth (low sodium), Solid white tuna in water, Bar soap, and Laundry/dish detergent.

Other news from the food pantry:

Food Pantry director Jane Corry shared that the pantry recently added a nutritionist to their team: Pat Messing-Hague, a Cohasset resident who is volunteering her time and expertise.

"Pat and I have been working together to make the Food Pantry healthier," said Corry. "We are gathering healthy recipes that combine both items from our shelves and fresh produce to make better meal choices. Our first project was a soup box, with a recipe and all the ingredients to make a delicious vegetable soup. It was a big hit! Our clients are asking when we will do another box."

Corry added that she and Messing-Hague have fresh produce on their food pantry "wish list."

"We have one family that continues to support us by going to BJ's and buying an abundance of fruit and vegetables," Corry shared. "They fly off the table! Clients are thrilled when we do this."

Just as in spring and summer times past, the food pantry is also asking local gardeners to "plant a row for the pantry."

"We had a very generous outpouring of fresh vegetables last summer," said Corry. "I hope more gardeners will join our team this summer. We are extremely grateful to the Cohasset Community for generously helping our neighbors in need."

TOWN MEETING

Citizens' petition makes the rounds

Officials vote against proposed water-sewer consolidation

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The citizens' petition for restructuring water and sewer, which calls for the consolidation of the water and sewer commissions into a single appointed advisory board and the hiring of a Public Works supervisor, was presented to both the Board of Selectmen and Capital Budget Committee this week. The petition previously made the rounds at the Advisory Committee and Sewer and Water Commissions.

All five boards – selectmen, Advisory, Capital Budget, and the two commissions – have all voted unanimously not to recommend support for the article at tomorrow's Town Meeting.

Citizens will have the final say tomorrow; the petition is Article 21 on the warrant. If the vote passes, the citizen's petition requires a Home Rule Petition be submitted to the General Court to repeal the acts that created the water and sewer commissions; it would also change Cohasset's Town Manager Act.

Resident and former selectman Karen Quigley brought forward the petition, based on recommendations from a 2010 Melanson and Heath audit and a 2004 MMA (Mark Morris Associates) report.

Of the boards' votes against the petition, Quigley said, "It's really unfortunate that Town Hall has chosen to unanimously oppose the recommendation not of citizens, but of two professional consultants hired by the town to advise us as to what the best management structure would be."

Capital Budget discussion

Quigley went before the Capital Budget Committee last week to discuss the petition. The committee did not take a vote at the time but raised questions about the necessity for the changes that the petition proposes. Chief among their concerns: the committee felt that the problems the petition addresses are legacy issues that have since been resolved.

Capital Budget members also opined that the elected commissions should not be eliminated and replaced with appointed advisory board members because elected officials have a fiduciary duty to serve the townspeople and are held accountable by voters.

Quigley has stressed the need for a qualified professional to oversee water and sewer operations. Water commission chair and Capital Budget member Peter DeCaprio said that by hiring a supervisor to oversee the plants, the petition is asking the town to pay for the same services twice; the contracted plant operators are already doing that job, he explained.

Quigley said after last week's meeting, and in emails to the Capital Budget members, that she found their dismissal of auditor John Sullivan's reports to be "disingenuous."

"They certainly know a lot more about municipal finance law," Quigley said of the audit firm. "If I'm going to take anyone's advice, it's going to be theirs."

Gaumer responded to Quigley in an email that they simply have differing views on the audit's findings.

"Simply put, he made unsupportable initial remarks, and backtracked from them. Additionally, he made a series of recommendations, which were unsupported by his factual findings," Gaumer wrote. "An auditor is paid to provide expert opinion supported by fact, not projections based on only partial investigation."

Quigley wrote back, "It's unfortunate you disagree with his findings but they are the facts. That is my final word on the subject."

The CBC voted Wed. May 9 not to support the petition.

Selectmen discussion

The Board of Selectmen had the water and sewer commissioners in to discuss the petition during Tuesday night's meeting.

DeCaprio told the board, once again, that the petition is seeking to "solve a problem that doesn't really exist."

"From what I can tell, based on what Karen Quigley said to Capital Budget last week, the petition is focused on historic decision-making capabilities of citizen commissioners," said DeCaprio. "We're talking about human beings, and human beings are fallible. I'm not sure hiring a DPW supervisor solves it. If we adhere to the process, it outlasts any human being."

Water commissioner Leonora Jenkins explained that the water commission was created under a Special Act of the Legislature. To eliminate that, she said, would mean the state would dictate and raise water rates.

Sewer commissioner John Beck said that the water and sewer commissions "have a commonality of view on this petition.

"My personal view goes back to recommendation of the Melanson and Heath report, the basis of the citizen's petition in the first place," Beck continued. "I found those recommendations to be completely unsupported by the findings of the audit, which indicated the issues associated with most of the water problems had to do not with the organization, but the performance of the water commissioners and the town finance and accounting functions. It is illogical to then make the leap that we need to change the organization because of these performance issues."

Beck went on to praise the current water commission. "In January of 2011, we got all new water commissioners, and they have been doing, in my view, a stellar job of addressing the issues they were elected to address. They have their arms around strategic problems... and I'm confident that in the case of our accounting and finance function, we are on a very solid path to correct the issues of the past. In trying to reconcile the sewer budget with accounting records... we're making significant progress over the past couple months, and I'm very confident, come fall town meeting, we will have resolved every single question mark that has arisen concerning out town accounting records."

The sewer commissioner concluded, "I think this is an ill-timed, ill-advised solution to a non-problem."

Selectman Leland Jenkins seemed to agree, at least partially, with the petition, stating that he thinks the town needs some sort of civil engineer to oversee special projects as well as plant operations. Adding that, as a civil engineer, he's biased, Jenkins said, "We've got to have some supervision... the town manager can't do it [all]; it's impossible."

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski is looking to hire someone with engineering experience to oversee special projects. He has said that he supports a similar initiative to the citizens' petition, but he does not believe the petition is the "vehicle" to restructure the water and sewer departments. Milanoski has said that the petition is missing the process to accomplish these changes and would also require close to 100 hours of legal work. It also seeks to add additional staff "without knowing where the funding will come from," he said.

Milanoski has explained that while he agrees with the concept of consolidating the water and sewer commissions into a single board, he feels the citizens' petition is not yet ready for prime time and should not be presented at Town Meeting "if you do not have all the answers."

Quigley said of Milanoski's future plans for the commissions, "The town manager has on several occasions indicated that there is some support the petition and that he himself would be working over the next year to initiate a similar plan...but instead of working cooperatively, Town Hall has chosen to be adversarial."

The water and sewer commissioners have also previously stated that they liked the concept of combining their boards in order to make it easier to form subcommittees without having to worry about violating Open Meeting Law (now, if two of the three commissioners meet to discuss water or sewer issues, they would technically be in violation).

Selectman Fred Koed said during Tuesday's meeting that he feels the restructuring proposed by the petition would lead to "too many inherent conflicts" with the commissioners, supervisor, town manager and selectmen.

"I like the independent elected boards because you know you represent [the voters]," said Koed. "When I was a water commissioner we had to put a water ban on; the selectmen weren't happy with that and issued us a letter, but the engineers said this was an emergency to prevent fires... We stuck with the ban. I don't see how an appointed board could withstand [that type of] political pressure."

After hearing from both commissions and from Capital Budget members in the audience, the selectmen voted against supporting the petition.

Selectman chair Ted Carr said, "I feel strongly that it's not the right direction for the town."

CFD responds to Avalon fire

On Tuesday morning, May 1, at 08:06 hours, the Cohasset Fire Department received a call on the business line from a construction worker at Avalon reporting a building fire at 1000 Avalon Drive. The dispatch center was notified and Engine 2 (Lt. Forde and Firefighter/Medic Smith), Engine 1 (Firefighter/Medic Cunningham), Ambulance 1 (Firefighter/Medic Pergola) were all dispatched to the scene. While units were responding to the scene the dispatch center paged out a box alarm for a building fire.

Off duty personnel responded back to the station and manned Ladder 1, which then responded to the scene. On arrival of the scene Engine 2 reported smoke coming from the rear of a multi-family building that is under construction, and Lt. Forde established command of the scene. Members then stretched a hose line to the rear of the building and began to investigate further.

Workers on scene who discovered the fire in a first floor residential unit under construction extinguished the fire, with approximately five fire extinguishers that were already on scene, and had removed the stored kitchen cabinetry that had burned prior to the fire department's arrival. Cohasset Fire Department members then checked for any fire extension in the walls and ceiling of the unit, and also ventilated the six unit multi-family building. One construction worker was transported from the scene to South Shore Hospital by Ambulance 1

The cause of the fire is still under investigation. The incident was then terminated at 09:30 hours.

Police prepared an accident report and the insurance companies will handle it from there.

Stolen firearms

A 63-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last Thursday that a 9-millimeter pistol and a 12-guage shotgun were missing from his yacht while he was down in St. Maarten. Police said the firearms owner believes the suspect works for him and may have taken them as collateral in a dispute over wages. The Cohasset man notified the Coast Guard who told him to report the matter to the local police department. Cohasset police entered the stolen firearms into the NCIC database (National Crime Information Center).

Break-in

A 51-year-old Cohasset woman reported last week that two laptops and $100,000 in jewelry were missing from her home on Jerusalem Road. Detectives responded and processed the scene. They have a couple of leads, police said.

Sign knocked over

On Saturday (May 5) at about 9 a.m., a 69-year-old Hingham man in a 1996 Buick sedan misjudged a parking space in front of French Memories and tapped a traffic sign that fell over. The DPW removed the sign and the man's insurance company will pay to have it replaced, police said.

Parking dispute

Two men got into a dispute on Saturday about the way one of them had parked at the James Street Crossing shops on Pleasant Street. Police said nothing physical occurred and no crime was committed.

Sunglasses

A 55-year-old man flagged police down on Saturday around 7 p.m. and said a group of skateboarders picked up the pair of sunglasses he had dropped and took off. Police checked the area, found a group of four boys (ages 13 and 14), but the man said the boys were not the ones who took his sunglasses.

Prom gala

I cannot believe this time is here but get ready, it is Cohassets Red Carpet Prom Time! Join the Class of 2012 and their families May 25th at 5:45 p.m. on the Common for this year's Pre Prom Red Carpet Promenade and gathering. See Cohasset's seniors and their guests all decked out and looking so grown up before sending them off by Trolley to the Prom at 6:45 p.m. In the event of rain — but here's hoping that no one rains on this parade, the Red Carpet Promenade will take place in the high school gym. Following the prom, Cohasset seniors will again enjoy a safe, alcohol and drug free post prom party sponsored by the parents of the Class of 2012. A tremendous thank you to all of the local businesses and CHS families whose donations and support are making this special!

W&L University

Alexandra Butler of Cohasset, a member of the Class of 2015 at Washington and Lee University, has earned dean's list status for the recently ended winter 2012 term.

Dean's list status at Washington and Lee represents a term grade-average of at least 3.4 on a 4.0 scale. Great news, Alexandra!

Mother's Day Walk for PEACE

Community members are encouraged to join our "Compassionate Cohasset" walking team on Sunday, May 13 as we participate in Boston's 16th Annual Mother's Day Walk for PEACE. The Mother's Day Walk for PEACE began in Dorchester in 1996 to support families who had lost children to violence. The Walk is the major fundraiser for the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute – a 501 C3 organization committed to ending violence by offering a nationally recognized Peace Education Curriculum, crises management for families, promoting peaceful resolution to prevent retaliatory violence and training for professionals dealing with families impacted by violence.

Participating in the 3.6-mile walk is a powerful and uplifting experience. If you are unable to walk but would like to pledge your financial support, all contributions are appreciated. For more information, please contact Connie Afshar at 781 383 6006.

That is the news Cohasset for this week. Send on your news for next week on Tuesday by 5 pm. Remember we love photos – they can be emailed or dropped off at our Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's in the village.

Plant Sale not to be missed!

Perennials, herbs, shrubs, climbers, ground covers, etc. will be on sale. Whatever you have in your garden, whether it is shade, sun, wind, salt, or deer problems, we shall have plants to suite your needs.

Why? Because these plants are fresh from our Cohasset gardens, which have the same challenges you have. These are the plants, which have thrived. We'll share them and our practical experience with you. Bring your big car and load it up. You won't be disappointed. See you on May 19!

Two C.G.C.C. presidents, Linda Fraker (2012-2014) and Janice Todd (2010-2012) of the COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB of COHASSET invite you to join them at the Club's Plant Sale on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society Saturday, May 19, 9:A.M-1:P.M. COURTESY PHOTO

The Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting

The kitchen is the true heart of the home. On Friday, May 18, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., visitors of the Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting are offered a glimpse into five stunning homes located along the Cohasset seacoast while enjoying a sampling of gourmet foods from local area restaurants and caterers.

Proceeds from the tour will be directed towards two really exciting projects at the South Shore Community Center. With the success of the tour, the center anticipates being able to raise the final funds necessary to complete The SSCC Nursery school playground project, and plans to have this project completed within this school year. The second, more long-term project will be to replace the severely outdated SSCC kitchen with a state of the art cooking facility that center's nursery school children, seniors and the community will be able to enjoy.

The tour will be held rain or shine. Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting the center's at www.southshorecommunity.com or calling the South Shore Community Center directly at 781-383-0088. The cost for the tickets will be $35. The South Shore Community Center is a not for profit organization, and relies heavily on the community to support their efforts.

What: The Cohasset Kitchen Tour and Tasting
When: May 18th from 11 a.m.-2 p.m.
Where: Five stunning estates in Cohasset
Who: Sponsored by the South Shore Community Center
Cost: $35
Tickets: Can be purchased by calling 781-383-0088 or www.southshorecommunitycenter.com

HAPPENING

Illustrator, Brian Lies at Buttonwood May 20

Illustrator Brian Lies will be at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 1 p.m., on Sunday, May 20, to celebrate the release of his new picture book, "More" by I. C. Springman. Lies will read "More," a story about a team of well-intentioned mice who intervene when their friend Magpie's habit of collecting becomes too much. The story will be followed by a craft and refreshments will be served.

Lies is the author and/or illustrator of more than two dozen children's books including his New York Times best-selling bat books including "Bats at the Beach," "Bats at the Library" and "Bats at the Ballgame." This event is presented in partnership with Dependable Cleaner's Read to Ride Summer Reading Program, which will begin on May 14 and is open to all children from ages 6 through 15. Read a book and enter a drawing to win a brand new bike.

People who are unable to attended can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to order a signed copy.

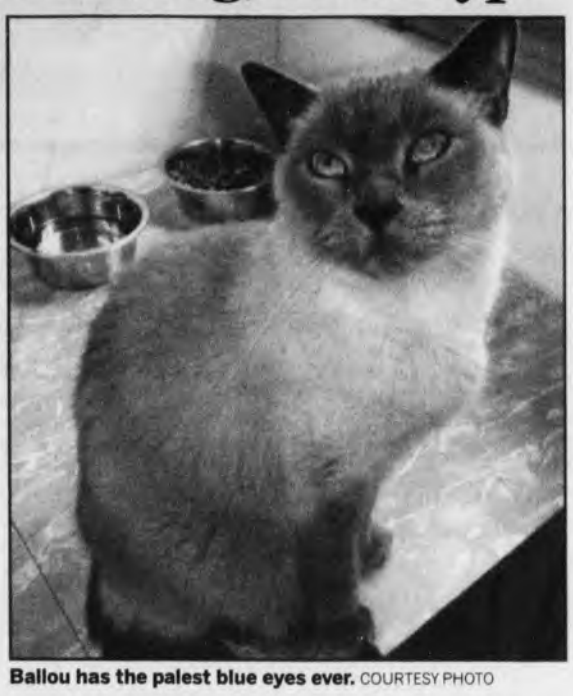
GIMME SHELTER

Ballou is the strong, silent type

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would love to find shelter for their Siamese mix, Ballou.



Ballou is around six and is extremely laid back with the palest blue eyes ever. HSAR has yet to hear him talk. Ballou was in a kill shelter, but HSAR found him and felt they could find someone willing to share their home with him. He would make a great companion for a senior (seniors receive a deep discount) or most any animal-friendly home. Please stop by during open hours and visit this friendly feline.

HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

OUR VIEW

Let your voice be heard

Town Meeting has a life unto its own. Things happen. Issues get aired. Individuals are propelled to speak.

We have made no secret over the years with our admission of being Town Meeting "groupies." Despite the uncomfortable seats – we find Town Meeting to be enlightening, educational and even dramatic.

Town Meeting has a life unto its own. Things happen. Issues get aired. Individuals are propelled to speak.

There are always the "regulars" who attend even if they do not sit on an elected or appointed board or commission. Many "regulars" have been attending town meetings for years. They can be counted on to speak up.

We find it exciting when someone "new to us" stands up to be heard. Sometimes it is someone new to our community or someone whose attention was drawn to a particular article on the warrant.

Whatever the reason – and whether you are young or old, new or a regular – your participation is welcomed and encouraged.

Cohasset has an open town meeting form of government. Town Meeting is where money gets appropriated and it is often where the stage is set for the future in terms of what decisions are made. Remember it was town meeting via a citizens petition about 15 years ago that gave us a Town Manager. We had been served by a Town Administrator, a position with less statutory power.

There is a lot "happening" in Cohasset. Should the water and sewer commissions be governed by a single board? Is it time for Cohasset to adopt the meals tax? Where do you stand on the issue of using Community Preservation Funds to restore the windows at the First Parish Meetinghouse?

While there is no article on the police station "going dark," former town manager Mike Coughlin, a resident and voter, has promised to ask that money be added to the police budget to allow the station to stay open 24/7. If you agree or disagree – you need to be there to weigh in.

We think this could be one of the more exciting town meetings in years! If you cannot attend either all or part of Saturday's "event," reporter Erin Dale will be sending updates on Twitter and Facebook – so be sure you are a Cohasset Mariner follower or friend.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

The Town Seal of Cohasset adopted November 5, 1898

The scene with its ledges and breakers illustrates the meaning of the word Cohasset, "A long rocky place." Minot Lighthouse and White Head are shown with two old fishing schooners at the entrance of the harbor. The three buildings–Town Hall, Osgood School, and First Church–symbolize the three functions of town life – the municipal, the educational, and the religious.

This description was printed in A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset by E. Victor Bigelow, and the Town Seal has been used in subsequent town history publications.

HAMILTON

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time has come for new Senior Center

Cohasset needs a senior center. Some may say the town already has a center, but in truth, it is a shared space that fails to fulfill the needs of Cohasset's exploding population of seniors.

Elder Affairs pays rent for the space it shares with the Cohasset Community Center, and the director makes do in an office that was once a broom closet. Cohasset's seniors depend on the kindness of neighbors like the Second Congregational Church, St. Anthony's Parish and the Lightkeeper's, since larger groups can't fit in the Community Center space. All equipment and provisions for these programs – lunches, breakfasts, bridge classes, tai chi, etc. has to be trucked in because there is no storage space available.

Our seniors, who have contributed to making Cohasset such a beautiful place to live and work, deserve more than this. With space and adequate parking, more seniors – many of whom are not able to access the current, but limited offerings – could take advantage of more programs – resulting in safer and more fulfilling lives. Active and social seniors are healthier than their counterparts, and remain in their homes longer; opening up town resources that otherwise would be required for their care.

Elder Affairs and Cohasset seniors need their own home-away-from-home. We should show our respect and care for the town's elders and not let an opportunity for a center dedicated senior center on Sohier Street disappear.

Anna Abbruzzese, 155 Border St.

CEA, Senior Center are both important

One thing that has not been well understood (including by the writer) is that the signs on the post outside the Community Center on North Main Street, one of which says "Senior Center," do not really contain such a center but the modest offices of the Council of Elder Affairs. Not only has that organization served Cohasset superbly on a tiny budget, but its mission is a very different one.

Thus the Cohasset Senior Center, initial phases of which will be voted on by Town Meeting May 10, has a mission that is entirely different from the Council although it will lean upon the wisdom and experience of the Council but also of their volunteers about whom enough appreciation can never be fully expressed.

My point is that while enormous financial backing has already been pledged to the vision of a Cohasset Senior Center and more millions are, confidently, expected to be forthcoming a vital difference between the Council and the Center has to be recognized. And this is that the mission statement of each organization will be vastly different. While the Council provided much needed services to seniors, and others in their homes, the Center's mission probably will be designed for very different purposes. At least I think so.

I would not presume to draft such a statement because the Senior Center Planning Group has already demonstrated its competence – but I think that the Center will be member directed with its hours of operation in tune with its members use. We should also expect its activities, while being a "work-in-progress" to be very participatory, stimulating, challenging and enjoyable both physically and intellectually. Certainly the SCPG will make use of the experience of well established centers in Marshfield and Duxbury but also of like endeavors that have recently been completed or are underway in Kingston, Hanover, East Bridgewater and Plymouth and Rockland, etc.

I think that, what we call "seniors" may be the largest emerging demographic group in the country and while it might be said that such a group has mightily contributed to the economics and tax revenues where they reside, as in Cohasset , the group has received a minuscule portion of the communities' budget in return. The Council is an example of how well those monies have been spent and I think that the Center will serve the community equally as efficient.

Robert C. Ernst Sr., 60 Elm St.

COMMENTARY

Some tips on moving forward

JOE COGGINS

The political environment in Cohasset may soon qualify for "Superfund" clean up cash. Elected officials, Town Board members, political pundits and editorial addicts have all spent too much time and energy criticizing opposing opinions, attacking alternate views, and circling the wagons defending coveted position and reputation. This low tide, toxic brew distracts, divides and can potentially damn this town to years of extremely expensive consequence unless we all stop and consider the goal to be achieved.

Consider this analogy. Every morning we see a young child trudging to the bus stop, back breaking-ly burdened, by a backpack full of textbooks. Manufacturers continue to employ old methods with slightly more current technologies i.e. articulated straps and weight management, yet the child remains bent, straining under the unrelenting weight. Technology has replaced the need to carry textbooks to and from school with iPads, and tablets, lightening the load, accelerating the pace. Is anyone of us intelligent, or arrogant, enough to be an expert in all areas necessary to navigate the technological, financial, environmental, social management demands of running the town? Cohasset clearly has talented individuals who want to be civically involved to help make our town a safer and more fiscally responsible place to live, however no one I've met has the skill to "do it all".

We need to stop looking back, assigning blame, and accept the fact that today's complex, litigious world demands we amend our standard operating procedure. Stop attacking past errors as prideful or deceitful and recognize that most mistakes were unseen consequences of otherwise good intentions. Stop defending errors as personal attacks against a good faith attempt to do what's best for your neighbors and our town. Mistakes happen; good ideas don't work out, every decision isn't necessarily "the best" or "the right" one. Good intentions sometime have less than great consequences. Let's move forward in the best interest of the town. How?

- Listen to and consider all opinions no matter the source. Just because an elected official presented it doesn't make it right ... or wrong. Give the appropriate weight to concerned citizens petitions
- Consider a change to hire "educated experts" to administrate complex departments. Like us all, the king uses the throne but don't ask him to change the commode.
- Utilize civic-minded citizens as overseers to protect the interests of the town, as we do today.
- Take ego out of this problem and accept that other opinions are as valid as our own because a neighbor is affected enough to venture out of a comfort zone to voice an opinion.
- Be respectful of people's rights to be heard. If you're an elected or a town official it is your responsibility to make it comfortable and convenient for everyone to be heard. If you disagree then ask yourself if you should be in your current position.
- Lastly, accept the end game of your experience to be based on what is best for Cohasset.

Let's listen, look ahead, and make decisions that move us forward. Let's learn from our past without condemnation and criticism.

Joe Coggins lives at 57 Elm St.

HEALTH NOTES

Shingles: Symptoms and treatment

STEVE BOBO

A patient recovering from chickenpox sometimes retains the virus and it does not leave the body, but continues to live in some nerve cells.

Shingles — An age old and painful complaint, shingles usually starts as a painful rash on one side of the face or body which subsequently forms blisters typically scabbing over in 7–10 days, then clears up within 2–4 weeks. The rash develops, often causing pain, itching or tingling in the area where it can develop from 1 to 5 days before subsiding. Rarely, in cases usually among those with weakened immune systems, the rash may be more widespread and look similar to a chickenpox rash.

Shingles can affect the eyes and may cause loss of vision, the same varicella-zoster virus that causes chickenpox in children. A patient recovering from chickenpox sometimes retains the virus and it does not leave the body, but continues to live in some nerve cells. For reasons that aren't totally understood, the virus can become active instead of remaining inactive. When activated in adults, the virus produces shingles; can also produce pain and the same symptoms of the originally introduced viruses.

Minor Problems — Shingles sometimes causes redness, swelling or itching and headaches. If any of the above symptoms occur, see your health care provider and give him the list of unusual sensations. The earliest symptoms of herpes zoster, which include headache, fever, and malaise, are nonspecific and may result in an incorrect diagnosis. Symptoms are commonly followed by sensations of burning pain, itching, hyperesthesia (oversensitivity), or paresthesia ("pins and needles": tingling, pricking, or numbness). The pain may be mild to extreme with sensations that are often described as stinging, tingling, aching, numbing or throbbing which can be interspersed with quick stabs of agonizing pain. Herpes zoster in children is often painless, but older people are more likely to get more severe zoster as they age

A diversity of unpleasantness and considerable pain in most cases after 1–2 days, but sometimes as long as 3 weeks, the initial phase is followed by the appearance of the characteristic skin rash. The pain and rash most commonly occurs on the torso, but can appear on the face, eyes or other parts of the body. At first the rash appears similar to the first appearance of hives; however, unlike hives, herpes zoster causes skin changes, normally resulting in a stripe or belt-like pattern limited to one side of the body and does not cross the midline. Zoster sine herpete ("zoster without herpes") describes a patient who has all of the symptoms of herpes zoster except this characteristic rash. Later the rash becomes vesicular, forming small blisters filled with exudate, as the fever and general malaise continue. The painful vesicles eventually become cloudy or darkened as they fill with blood, crust over within seven to ten days; usually the crusts fall off and the skin heals, but sometimes, after severe blistering, scarring and discolored skin remain Herpes zoster may have additional symptoms, depending on the dermatome involved. Herpes zoster ophthalmicus involves the orbit of the eye and occurs in approximately 10–25% of cases. It is caused by the virus reactivating in the ophthalmic division of the trigeminal nerve. In a few patients, symptoms may include conjunctivitis, keratitis, uveitis, and optic nerve palsies that can sometimes cause chronic ocular inflammation, loss of vision, and debilitating pain.

Herpes zoster oticus, also known as Ramsay Hunt syndrome, involves the ear. It is thought to result from the virus spreading from the facial nerve to the vestibulocochlear nerve. Symptoms include hearing loss and vertigo (rotational dizziness).

Treatment — The aims of treatment are to limit severity and duration of pain, shorten the duration of a shingles episode, and reduce complications. Symptomatic treatment is often needed for the complication of postherpetic neuralgia. However, a study on untreated herpes zoster shows that, once the ash has cleared, postherpetic neuralgia is very rare in people under 50 and wears off in time. In older people the pain wears off more slowly, but even in people over seventy, 85 percent were pain free one year after their shingles outbreak.

Analgesics — People with mild to moderate pain can be treated with over-the-counter analgesics. Topical lotions containing calamine can be used on the rash or blisters and may be soothing. Occasionally, severe pain may require an opioid medication, such as morphine. Once the lesions have crusted over, Zostrix, Topical Lidocaine and nerve blocks may also reduce pain. Administering gabapentin along with antivirals may offer relief of Post-Herpetic Neuralgia. Antiviral drugs reduce the severity and duration of herpes zoster with minimal side effects, but do not reliably prevent postherpetic neuralgia. Of these drugs, acyclovir has been the standard treatment, but the new drugs valaciclovir and famciclovir demonstrate similar or superior efficacy and good safety and tolerability. The drugs are used both as prophylaxis (for example in AIDS patients) and as therapy during the acute phase. Antiviral treatment is recommended for individuals over 50 years old, with herpes zoster preferably given within 72 hours of the appearance of the rash. Because of the risks involved, it is recommended that this combination of drugs only be used in people more than 50 years of age, owing to their greater risk of postherpetic neuralgia.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

The other side of the story

In fact, haven't women always been of vital importance to men from the days of cooking in caves to striding the streets?

MARY KENNEDY

Much has been written over the past several decades — actually over centuries — about the plight of women. With anger and despair accounts describe the wretched treatment of women being used, abused, underappreciated, underestimated, deprived of all rights, legal and otherwise. Like merchandise, they have been bought and sold, (still a thriving practice in some societies today). When young, they were traded as trinkets to amuse exalted leaders; when old, swept like crumbs into back rooms or, today, nursing homes.

But wait — just like opposing political viewpoints, that's only one side of the story.

In fact, haven't women always been of vital importance to men from the days of cooking in caves to striding the streets?

First, who else could conceive, bear, and breast-feed a child, thereby swelling the ranks of the tribe with warriors — or women to bear more warriors? A man might love another man, (sanctioned by some societies, forbidden by others) but only a woman came with a dowry to increase the wealth of the family/tribe/nation. Who else but the queen could ensure a legitimate heir to the throne? (Royal births were always anxiously attended by lords and ladies who kept a keen eye out for bastardly substitutions). Who but a woman handed over in marriage (prices have always fluctuated wildly) could cement the relationship between political allies or establish peace between two previously hostile tribes — oops, nations?

Traditionally, the most priceless treasure a woman could offer a man (first the father who sold her, then the husband who bought her) was her virginity. After all, keeping the bloodlines pure was supremely important. Safely married, the helpless woman would than be "guaranteed" care and protection. Many a Crusader, before marching off to save Christians by annihilating Arabs, attached a metal chastity belt to his beloved, thereby insuring her safety from degradation (i.e. impregnation). Some Moslems —then and now — adopted another preventive measure: not a belt but a burkha to thwart the roving eye of all seducers, Moslem or infidel. Both methods provided a kind of insurance against a husband ever having to wonder whose child his wife just delivered. Of course, today there's DNA for proof...but that's a digression.

Most historians agree that the Western concept of romantic love came about with the birth of the Renaissance, knights in shining armor, chivalry, poetry, literature, women choosing whom to love and marry. Imagine that! Today, there are stay-at-home Dads and go-to-work Moms pounding the pavement en route from the taxi to corporate headquarters. Do men really need women? Do women really need men? Silly questions. Of course they do! Not?

Happy Mother's Day to all those who are....!

FOR THE RECORD

Your News is as important as ever

One of the many good things about the digital age is just about everyone has a camera or Smartphone that takes decent digital photographs.

GREGORY MATHIS

With Memorial Day quickly approaching and summer right around the corner, activity is most certainly heating up around town.

As students (and teachers) count down the final month or so of the school year, events such as prom, senior class-related activities and graduation keep young minds preoccupied as the schoolwork starts to wind down.

It's also a busy time for community events with the weather improving, setting the stage for loads of outdoor fun.

Keeping up with everything can be challenging. That's where you come in with Your News.

Let's take prom as an example. Every school in the region will be holding some variation of a prom over the next few weeks. Some schools have junior proms, some combine the senior and junior class, while others give the graduating seniors their own dinner dance. Some proms are held at the school, but others still have the big night at fancy locations outside our coverage area. As you might imagine, keeping track and assigning coverage for multiple proms for the many towns we cover can be a scheduling nightmare.

One of the many good things about the digital age is just about everyone has a camera or Smartphone that takes decent digital photographs. And parents love to take pictures of their children all dressed up for the big night. Even better, most times there is someone with a quality digital camera who is able to provide us with more photos.

The current reader callout on most, if not all, of our Wicked Local websites is for prom photos. While we still plan to cover as many proms and senior dinner dances as possible, we're asking for the photos you take either before and/or during the prom.

The same idea holds true for upcoming graduations, whether high school, middle school, elementary school or kindergarten. All of those milestones are worth capturing and sharing with the rest of the community.

'Tis the season for many outdoor events as well, including annual road races, golf tournaments, fairs and more. Many of these activities are newsworthy and benefit terrific local causes or memorialize loved ones. We need your help in keeping up with all of these as well during this busy time of year.

Getting the photos to us should be, and can be, easy in this digital age. Emailing the editor directly is always an option, but there are some tools on our website to make it even more seamless.

You also can upload your photos by going through the Your Photos link in the main navigation bar on the website homepage or clicking on a specific subject located under the Your Photos section of the website under Photo Galleries.

You will need to go through a brief registration process, similar to the registration to make comments on stories. It's quick and easy and will allow us to make sure no one is abusing the system.

Many Wicked Local sites also have a reader callout in the Features carousel on the homepage. There's either an email address or link provided to upload and send photos.

Let's plan on getting through this busy time of year by working together to make sure nothing is missed.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South unit, with offices in Marshfield, Plymouth, Hingham, Raynham and Randolph.

SENIOR SCENE

Spring is a busy time!

LOUISE SMULLEN

We were pleased to greet Gail Sacone of the Community Garden Club at one of the April seminars. She showed slides of plants in gardens around town. She spoke about trees, shrubs, perennials, annuals and ground cover. It is wise to grow plants that do well or are native to our own particular area. For example, some plants will not do as well near a salt marsh or beach as they will a little further inland.

Alicia Seaver, the Executive Director of Bridges by Epoch, spoke about the signs and stages of not only Alzheimer's disease but other types of dementia, as well. Bridges is an assisted living facility for people with various kinds of dementia. Ms. Seaver explained how caregivers and family members should react with their loved ones who are in this condition.

Lisa Barrett, R.N., from Nursing Liaisons, spoke at the last April seminar. She covered interactions with someone who is depressed, discussing family problems and other situations.

In early May, a group was driven to the House of Prayer in Hingham where they listened to a concert sung by the Broad Cove Chorale. The concert consisted of songs of the sea and other bodies of water, ending with that beautiful American ballad, "Shenandoah." The singers were accompanied by piano and at times flute, oboe and guitar. It was a delightful way to spend a morning hour. The group was driven back to the Center for lunch.

In April, the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs treated all volunteers to a delicious luncheon at Atlantica. The day was beautiful and the harbor water was deep blue. There are countless volunteers who give of their time to our elders. There are drivers who transport folks to affairs at the Center and on errands in the village. There are drivers for shopping at the grocery and out-of-town shops. There is also a medical van driver who takes people to doctor and dentist appointments. Drivers also deliver meals on wheels to the home bound. There are those wonderful chefs and restaurants who cook tasty lunches and those who serve the lunches and clean up afterward. Then there are those who give their time at the Center making and taking phone calls and keeping track of schedules. I understand that during the past year there were nearly 9,000 hours of volunteer time given for Cohasset Elder Affairs. They certainly deserve our thanks.

- On May 16, Atty. Leana Hamill will present the following topics for discussion: Aid and Attendance Veterans Benefits, how to protect your home and assets, health care proxies, Medicare/Medicaid changes and alternatives to nursing home care.
- On May 23, members of the Rehab staff from Norwell VNA will present a program, "Get Up and Move." It will focus on the importance of activity as we age.
- On May 30, Ellie O'Neill, Caregiver Specialist will cover options for remaining in your home with support.
- On May 29, seniors will be going to lunch at Golden Living. Be sure to sign up for this, especially if you need transportation.

What a pleasure it was to wake up and see the sun shining after three or four days of cloudy weather. Of course, if there were no rain, there would be no flowers to enjoy.

Louise Smullen's column appears monthly in the Mariner.

'Ill-advised solution to non-existent problem'

JOHN BECK

...the elimination of elected officials would eliminate a fundamentally important element of accountability. There is no substitute for answering directly to the people whom you serve.

The comments below are based in part on experience gained from a successful, 45-year career in design, construction and operations in the nuclear industry at all levels of management including Chief Operating Officer of a major nuclear generating company. The last 15 years were spent as CEO of my own consulting firm offering management consulting services to many Fortune 500 companies in the U.S. and a major Spanish utility. I have been honored to serve the Town as a member of the Cohasset Sewer Commission for the past nine years.

The citizens petition to reorganize the water and sewer business in Cohasset is an untimely, ill-advised solution to a non-existent problem. It is ostensibly based on the governance recommendations of the Melanson-Heath audit, which was completed in early 2011. Those recommendations were not supported by any of the findings of the audit. The findings of the audit can be summarized in two root causes: Failure of the Water Commission to adequately plan for and implement a revenue stream sufficient to service long term debt; and significant performance failures in the Cohasset Finance and Accounting departments. In both cases the problem was performance based. Reorganizing is seldom the answer to performance issues, and reflects the naiveté of Melanson-Heath when it comes to governance recommendations. They may be a respected accounting audit firm, but don't pass muster in the area of management practices.

• Before and during the audit the Town changed all our elected Water Commissioners, who have led the way to correct past shortcomings and are well on their way to fine-tuning the operations of the water treatment plant and restoring the health of their operations budget.

• The Town's Finance and Accounting functions are now led by an experienced and proven professional who, with the help of outside consultants and staff, is making significant progress in cleaning up the inherited mess.

There is simply no urgent need to make ill-advised organizational changes.

Some additional highlights of the contents of the Petition and their unintended consequences:

• Part of the groundwork done prior to the Sewer Commission's recent change of the operations contractor at the wastewater treatment plant was to develop a detailed understanding of precisely what it takes to operate the plant. The most expensive option evaluated was to bring operations in-house. Depending on how much the supervisory infrastructure expanded, the cost would be somewhere between $300,000 and $500,000 more per year than what was estimated for a competitively bid operations contractor reporting to the Sewer Commission. The cost of our current operations contractor is very close to our original estimate prior to the bid process, and well over $100,000 per year savings compared with our previous operator.

• The idea that hiring an in-house Supervisor of Water and Sewer could be financed by eliminating all consulting engineering services is naïve and misleading. The inevitable result of doing that would be to create an in-house bureaucracy incapable of doing any engineering work, which would then morph into an in-house manager of outside consultants who would be hired to do any needed engineering work.

• Replacing the elected Water and Sewer Commissions and their current management responsibilities with an appointed Commission with only advisory responsibilities would be a mistake for two reasons. First, an appointed, advisory Commission would be so far removed from the day-to-day activities that their advice would quickly grow stale and irrelevant. Second, the elimination of elected officials would eliminate a fundamentally important element of accountability. There is no substitute for answering directly to the people whom you serve.

John Beck is a member of the Cohasset Board of Sewer Commissioners.

Supports grant for First Parish

RONNIE MCMORRIS

There is no dispute about the legality of these grants. Nor is there any dispute about the public purpose that is served when an historic preservation restriction is obtained by the granting community.

Editor's note: Ronnie McMorris provided a copy of this letter to Selectmen for publication.

This letter is in response to questions and comments that have been raised by Americans United (AU) regarding the CPC recommendation to approve a grant to First Parish to restore the windows in the historic Meeting House located on Cohasset Common.

First, town counsel has correctly informed you that there is no legal authority to support the claims being made by AU. When the group claims that "the law prohibits" or "the establishment clause prohibits," or that "the constitution is being violated," they are merely stating their opinion, an opinion that is not founded on either law or precedent. The cases they cite in a very legal sounding letter are, according to the town's attorney, who researched the issue, "factually distinguishable." That means they are different and do not apply here, most importantly, because they "do not involve funding of preservation, rehabilitation or restoration of an historic structure pursuant to the CPA."

In fact dozens of church projects have been funded with CPA funds and with grants from the MA Historical Commission including the Park Street Church in Boston; Church of the Advent on Beacon Hill; First Churches Meetinghouse in Northampton; Trinity Church in Boston; Gate of Heaven Church in Boston; and the Unitarian Universalist Church of Medford, to name a few.

Lastly, on the federal level, these grants for historic preservation have had a similar validation. In a memorandum opinion written for the Solicitor of the US Dept. of the Interior, April 30, 2003, Acting Atty. General M. Edward Whelan III concluded in the now famous case involving Boston's Old North Church that "the Establishment Clause does not bar the award of historic preservation grants to the Old North Church or to other active houses of worship that qualify for such assistance, and the section of the National Historic Preservation Act authorizing the provision of historic preservation assistance to religious properties listed on the National Register of Historic Places is constitutional."

There is no dispute about the legality of these grants. Nor is there any dispute about the public purpose that is served when an historic preservation restriction is obtained by the granting community.

Jackie Dormitzer, author of the third volume of Cohasset's history had this to say about First Parish:

"The slender white steeple of the First Parish Meeting House rises high above the trees on Cohasset Common. Built in 1747, the Meeting House on the Common is one of the most cherished historical landmarks in Cohasset. It is the oldest church in town and the seventh oldest Protestant church in the United States."

When you see the Meeting House you know you are in Cohasset. The town will be well served by having this cherished icon preserved in a professional and historically precise way. Your support of this project is appreciated.

Ronnie McMorris lives at 89 Doane St.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on May 19 are available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, May 18, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person. People may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury; and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by May 19 to be counted.

People who are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast a vote at the polling place, may file a letter from a physician with the Town Clerk, stating that one is permanently unable to cast a vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot to sign and return will be mailed by the Town Clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Article 21 is not complicated

KAREN QUIGLEY

It simply puts the day-to-day management and oversight of our utilities in the hands of a qualified professional.

It's really not complicated. There are a number of steps that need to be taken that make it seem complicated, but what Town Meeting is being asked to vote is not.

1. Vote to make the water & sewer commissions a combined, 5-person advisory board appointed by the Troika which puts it on the same level as Advisory and Capital Budget.

2. Vote to create the position of Public Works Supervisor.

It won't take effect immediately. The goal is to put into motion, on a specific time frame, the steps that need to happen and which are going to a year to complete. The specifics will be brought back for vote at the next Town Meeting and a ballot vote at the 2013 elections.

It doesn't mean the utilities will be operated in house. It simply puts the day-to-day management and oversight of our utilities in the hands of a qualified professional. It does, however, create the management necessary if/when Town Meeting so voted.

It doesn't require but also provides the opportunity to have professional management of the DPW and Facilities.

The enterprise funds remain as they are pending recommendation by the DOR as part of their Financial Management Review slated to begin in July.

The elected officials serve out their terms, by law, and then they could remain as appointed officials.

We, as a town, must look to the past to learn from our history and use those lessons to ensure our future. Those that fail to learn from history, are doomed to repeat it.

Please Vote YES on Article 21 at tomorrow's Town Meeting.

Karen Quigley is the main proponent of Article 21. She is a former selectman and lives at 27 Clay Spring Road.

Town Meeting participation of paramount importance

TOM WOLF

Context is everything; without it one might view these events as isolated incidents reflecting the turbulent times we live in.

This is about those elected and appointed officials who have led us to the position we're in today and why they are so vested in decisions and commitments they have made that they can no longer see the forest for the trees.

Some selectmen now on the Board will remember it started years ago when a decision was made to stop presenting the accompanying Auditor's Letters to the BoS as part of the annual audit. That seminal change was to signal a new era in Cohasset governance wherein the truth was never fully revealed and the record became whatever someone said it was with sufficient gravitas and repetition that it stuck.

This SOP prevailed through the crisis with the insolvency of the water enterprise fund where the vast majority of town officials proclaimed that there was no management crisis and placed all responsibility on the finance department.

From that point forward, all of town hall's 'best and brightest' who failed to perform job one, the determination that they were dealing with real and accurate numbers, went on the defensive, and rallied around each other individually and collectively.

It is this cadre who has denounced the citizen's petition, primarily in 'argumentum ad hominum' against the main proponent and the professional recommendations that form its basis. It is this cadre who is so compromised by previous acts and deeds as to make their opinions open to doubt.

It is within this context that we can most accurately assess the events of the past year and carry the proper perspective forward into town meeting and beyond. Context is everything; without it one might view these events as isolated incidents reflecting the turbulent times we live in. Taken individually they are a compendium of errors, false starts, and unaddressed conflicts.

Examine just a few events to sharpen your view: the water enterprise fund being subsidized repeatedly by town funds: a Governance Committee which did everything but deal with the issue brought forward by 125 irate citizens; and the latest town meeting warrant, woefully insufficient in facts and details upon which we are expected to vote. Note that the very first article to be voted calls for an accolade to town officials for their skillful governance!

We once could take comfort that people we knew and trusted were in charge; surely they we're on top of everything, managing our town affairs prudently, preserving the goals for our town that we all shared. It is precisely the aim of those whose voices currently prevail in town government that we maintain this complacency, that we do not achieve context and perspective.

I urge you to go to Town Meeting tomorrow. Speak out, vote on the citizen's petition and a host of other mostly undocumented, unbudgeted items; take your best shots at sorting things out and deciding what's best for our town.

Carefully note that Town Meeting will be in two parts, with many important items deferred until the second session to be held a week and two days later on a weekday night. Try to avoid being cynical about this long planned (note I didn't say orchestrated) second session and the implications therein. Grit your teeth and attend that one as well. Your participation is our only hope for salvation.

Tom Wolf lives at 27 Clay Spring Road.

CANDIDATE ANNOUNCEMENT

Debra Krupczak running for Board of Assessors

Editor's note: The candidates provide their own announcements.

"I would like to announce my candidacy for Assessor. It would be my honor to serve the Town of Cohasset following in the footsteps of Michael (Mickey) Patrolia who is stepping down after 42 years on the Board of Assessors.

My husband Paul and I have resided in Cohasset and owned our home for 32 years. Our three adult children Brian, Jared and Alison graduated from Cohasset Middle-High School and are successful college graduates.

I have worked as an assessing professional for the past 19 years, 17 as the Assistant Assessor for the Town of Cohasset and the past two as the Assessor/Appraiser for the Town of Rockland. I serve the Town of Cohasset as the Election Warden and assist at Town Meeting.

My years in assessment administration make me uniquely qualified to serve on the Board of Assessors. I am well versed on the Massachusetts General Laws that pertain to the assessment process. I am certified by the Massachusetts Department of Revenue and have earned the designation Massachusetts Accredited Assessor (MAA) by the Massachusetts Association of Assessing Officers. I also have B.S. degree in Management/Accounting from the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

During my tenure as the Assistant Assessor in Cohasset, I got to know the town and its residents. I inspected hundreds of homes and assisted countless taxpayers in the office. One of my favorite duties was assisting disabled veterans and senior citizens through the exemption process. In my capacity as the Assessor/Appraiser for the Town of Rockland, I successfully completed the Triennial Certification of Real and Personal Property for fiscal year 2012.

Debra Krupczak is running for the Board of Assessors.

In Massachusetts assessed values are based on full and fair cash (market) value. My knowledge of the assessment process will help ensure fair and equitable assessments.

For experienced leadership, please cast your vote for Debra Krupczak for Assessor on May 19th. I look forward to the opportunity to serve the residents of Cohasset. If you have any questions or would like to assist with my campaign, I can be contacted at 781-223-5583 or dkrupczak@hotmail.com."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For selectman candidates: Do you think Cohasset should be doing more for its fast-growing senior population?

SELECTMAN

Ted Carr

The town of Cohasset should embrace the senior population and listen to their needs to meet and exceed the expectations of this important group of citizens. As a Selectman for the past six years, I have been a strong supporter of senior services:

I support and continue to work actively to help the public private partnership for the creation of a new state of the art Senior Center I assisted with negotiating and renewing the Senior Center lease in the current location I approved the proposed budget this year, allowing for additional staff so greatly needed to support the Center's growing needs

The Senior Center is a great start, but we can and should do more for our senior population.

• Diversified Housing: I am a long-standing champion for creating multiple options for housing, giving seniors the opportunity to live in Cohasset the town they love in the type of affordable housing they choose.

• Fiscal Responsibility: We need to keep taxes down to allow those on fixed incomes to afford to live in our town. I am pleased to report that next year, taxes will decrease due to a strong bond rating, sound financial policies, and department payments rolling off our recurring budget obligations. Fiscal responsibility is critical to maintaining low taxes.

• Safety: I support a community liaison program currently under consideration to ensure quick response from our public safety officials. Anyone requiring help from the police and fire station should have a friendly face to greet them upon arrival.

• Community Involvement: I support creative programs supported by the Senior Center and other organizations to help seniors stay active and involved in the community.

Meeting the diverse needs of our seniors is critical to maintaining the quality of our town and provides a wealth of benefits to all of us.

SELECTMAN

Martha Gjesteby

Seniors are a vital and valuable part of our community, and I hope my election to the Board of Selectmen, at 83 years of age, will validate the same. For as long as I have lived here the town has tried to do the best for Seniors. As Selectman, I was liaison to the Council on Aging and was involved in efforts to provide and improve Senior services.

I whole-heartedly support the need for Senior services. However, I am concerned about the lack of focus and professional direction for the Senior Center project that goes back to its first presentation to the CPC as a concept almost 10 years ago.

I do not believe that merely envying and/or copying new centers in Duxbury, Hanover or wherever are necessarily the best course. We need to insure that the Center meets our specific needs. I firmly believe that before any final decisions about the Center are made, the professional survey approved and funded by Town Meeting MUST be conducted and analyzed to better understand the specific needs of today's and tomorrow's seniors as well as aging parents and family members.

We have a truly dedicated and capable staff that works tirelessly to provide not just services but nourishment of body, mind and spirit to our seniors. With the help of many volunteers, they do a terrific job for over 20 percent of our citizens on less than 1 percent of the overall town budget. The survey will provide the answers to the questions of whether we could or should we be doing more, and what type of center, programs and staffing we need. To handle present demands, I would strongly support increasing the COA budget.

For assessor candidates: Do you see a time when Cohasset would go to a split tax rate?

ASSESSORS

Thomas Powers

As I drive around and visit various Cohasset shopping/business districts I continually notice the vacant stores and offices, some that turn over regularly and others that have been vacant for quite some time. As a Cohasset Board of Assessor candidate with a commercial real estate background I am in a position to offer a unique perspective on the commercial/retail real estate market and the uniform/split tax question at hand. In my opinion, asking Cohasset's commercial property owners and retail businesses proprietors to incur even a moderate and disproportionate tax increase would at best, create only a negligible benefit for Cohasset's residential property owners/taxpayers. The small benefit that residential property owners would achieve will be overcome by the higher costs of goods and services charged by town businesses compelled to pass on their increased tax burdens to their consumers. The increased costs and expenses would create an undue burden and further challenge the local Cohasset retail and commercial business economy and economic recovery.

According to the Cohasset Assessor's office, Cohasset's total property value is assessed at approximately $2.4 billion of which only 7.1 percent of this valuation is commercial/industrial and personal property. Therefore, any increase in commercial tax revenue would have a marginal impact on residential property owners who are carrying roughly 93 percent of the town's tax burden.

A differential tax rate would burden commercial property owners/tenants while negligibly benefiting residential property owners.

If we truly want to provide some form of relief to the residential property owner and increase Cohasset's commercial tax revenue we need to consider fair and balanced tax incentives to attract new and desirable commercial businesses. Providing tax incentives for small businesses in Cohasset's downtown village district and redeveloping and expanding Cohasset's Route 3A commercial corridor with short-term economic incentives may provide the means to a long-term solution.

ASSESSORS

Debra Krupczak

Cohasset is primarily a small residential community with nearly 93 percent of the property classified as residential and 7 percent as commercial, industrial and personal property. In a small community like Cohasset, a split tax rate would place an unfair burden on the commercial, industrial and personal property taxpayers while offering minimal tax relief to the residential taxpayers.

I do not see a time when Cohasset would go to a split tax rate because not only would there be the additional burden placed on the business community but it would hurt the town's ability to attract new businesses. We certainly do not want to drive businesses out of the community or discourage new businesses from locating in Cohasset.

Each year after the Massachusetts Department of Revenue certifies the town's assessed properties at full and fair market value, the Board of Selectmen must hold a public hearing to decide whether or not to split the tax rate. The Board of Assessors provides information and offers their recommendation but the Selectmen vote whether to split the rate or go with a single tax rate. The Cohasset Board of Selectmen has historically elected to maintain a single tax rate.

It is generally not recommended to split the tax rate unless the town has at least 25 percent of its taxable property assessed as commercial, industrial or personal property. Even then, Selectmen may not exercise the option to split the tax rate. Once split it is very difficult to go back to a single tax rate without placing a burden on the residential class. If elected, I would not advocate the adoption of a split tax rate.

CANDIDATE PROFILES NEXT WEEK

The Mariner thanks the candidates for participating in the Question of the Week. Next week, the Mariner will feature profiles of the candidates in the selectman, assessor, and associate planning board seat races. Each candidate will receive a questionnaire to complete and return.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

Gjesteby was educated in the Boston Schools and Holds a B. S. in Chemistry/Physics from Simmons College. She was formerly employed at Harvard Public Health. She continues to serve as clerk of a family-owned business.

She has lived in Cohasset for 51 years with Arne, her husband, and children Erik, Rolf, Ingrid and Nils, all Cohasset High School graduates. Her hobbies are sailing, bowling, skiing and running. She is a favorite part of the Cohasset's early-morning landscape when she runs down Pleasant Street or Sohier Street.

"Over these past many weeks I have both visited with and called Cohasset citizens over the many issues that concern us all, issues that prompted me to run for Selectman," Gjesteby said. "As a selectman I will encourage suggestions from all. I believe there are many good people on town boards and committees, but they must have leadership from the Board of Selectmen. Selectmen do their best work when they remember: 'We are a government of laws, not men.' When our laws break down, men break down.

"My agenda on the board of selectmen will be to bring the law back into Cohasset government and to also bring some civility to the discussion.

"Former School committee member Jack Langmaid once said: 'We can disagree and not be disagreeable.'"

Carr seeking third term

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements. In keeping with the stated election policy, the editor did not require word limits on the candidate's formal announcements.

"When I first ran for Selectman, I ran because I thought I had something to offer to the Town of Cohasset. I believe this is true today more than ever, and I'm writing to respectfully ask for your vote on May 19th.

As Chairman of the Board of Selectman, appointed by my peers for a second time, this past year has been an extremely difficult one for me and a very trying time for our community.

At the heart of the challenge was the painstaking decision by the Board to remove our Town Manager who had not been with us very long. While this action brought me and the entire Board well beyond our comfort level, I personally felt that the action was necessary in order to stabilize the Town and create a positive and sustainable path going forward.

To those who are upset with me or find fault with the Board of Selectmen for this decision, I respect your position very much. I ask that you take into consideration that I care deeply about this Town and want you to know that I have always done what I felt was in the best interest of the people. My decisions have always been driven exclusively by the facts as I understand them and my heartfelt desire for what is best for Cohasset.

As a relentless advocate for the Town at the state and federal level, during this past term alone, I have been personally instrumental in delivering more than $800,000 in grants that benefit the Cohasset taxpayer.

My in-depth understanding of the state and federal aid process comes from having worked at the highest levels of state government and my management in the Federal Government as an aid to the President of the United States. I am able to draw on the insight and relationships forged over many years on Beacon Hill and Capitol Hill to help guide me through the process.

The net result of my recent involvement is evident in a $450,000 Federal Grant that Cohasset received for culvert improvements at Jacobs Meadow; two State and Federal Hazard Mitigation grants totaling $80,000 that were stuck in the State process; and a third Hazard Mitigation grant for $280,000 for improvements at Aaron River. In addition, I am currently working on a pending $1.7 million grant to dredge Cohasset Harbor, insuring the protection for Cohasset's commercial Fleet. Without the benefit of these grants, either the work would never get done, or the money would come out of the Cohasset taxpayer's pocket.

Of greater importance, I am pleased to report that the Town has achieved a balanced budget for the coming year. Thanks to the hard work of our Town Employees, interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski, the Advisory Committee, Capitol Budget Committee, Budget Planning Group, our new Finance Director Mary Gallagher, and everyone who worked so hard to maintain Cohasset's AA+ bond rating and develop a level-funded budget; I am proud to say that we are living within our municipal means.

As a result of this collective effort which I have helped lead; Cohasset taxes will go down next year. The sum of $35 in annual savings per average family household may not seem like much, but what is of monumental importance is that our tax burden is actually moving in the right direction for the first time in years.

In addition, a significant amount of long-term debt will be rolling off our balance sheet over the next few years. Much work needs to be done to continue on this path but I look forward to building on the momentum we have achieved.

This year, one of my brightest moments was having the honor to serve on the selection committee for our new Cohasset School Superintendent, Barbara Cataldo. I believe that under my leadership as Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, we now have the best relationship between management town government and the School Committee than has ever existed. I'm extremely proud of this accomplishment.

In closing, I acknowledge that we have been down a rocky path over the past year. But we have emerged from the process as a stronger Town, on a more solid financial footing, with the right people, checks and balances in place to achieve a sound and stable future.

As referenced above, we are moving in the right direction. When you go to the voting booth On May 19th, you will face a clear choice. If you want to build on the momentum we have generated, I respectfully ask for your vote.

It has been an honor and a pleasure to serve the people of Cohasset over the years. I hope that you will consider re-electing me for another term."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

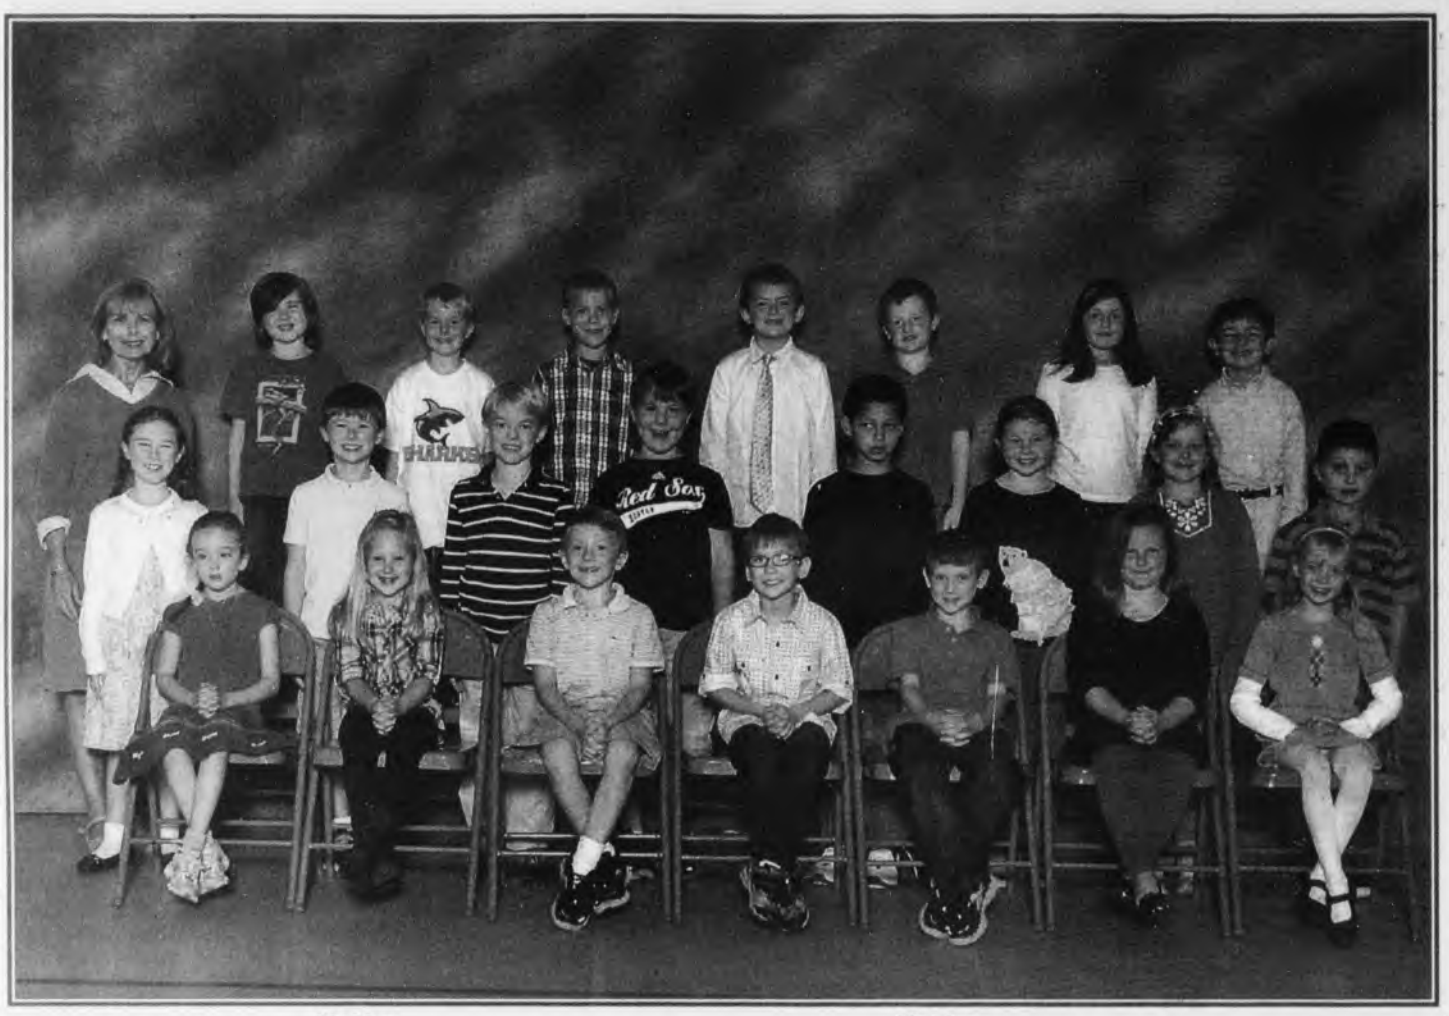
For planning board associate member candidates: Is it time to update the Cohasset Master Plan and how useful is the master plan as a tool for the planning board?

(Editor's note: The Mariner contacted candidate Roger Lowe who said he had not yet formed an opinion on the Master Plan and therefore, chose not to participate in this week's question).

PLANNING BOARD

Michael Dickey

In thinking about whether it is time to update Cohasset's Master Plan, it is important to always keep in mind the old adage, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it". This is not to say that Cohasset is perfect in all respects, but it is critical to ensure that any attempt to make Cohasset better in the future does not have the unintended consequence of subtracting from what makes Cohasset special today.



People don't move to Cohasset in the hope and expectation that the town's tomorrow will be as described in its Master Plan, families move to Cohasset because of its current charm, beauty, character and sense of place. This means in my view, that any move to update Cohasset's current Master Plan must be grounded in these elements and have at its core, a focus on preserving what's already right about Cohasset.

It is also important to keep in mind when discussing any form or type of government planning that government planning, in addition to using up scare resources, often takes on a life of its own and can become little more than an exercise in self justification for those involved in the planning process. In addition, excessive government planning can actually prevent a town from developing and growing in a natural, organic and holistic way.

I am not against change, I want Cohasset to grow and develop, but when elected as an Associated Member of the Cohasset Planning Board, I see my role as not one which will focus on trying to force Cohasset to adapt to the imperatives of a Master Plan, but rather working to ensure that Cohasset's essential town character and feel remain intact and are never destroyed in the name of making things "better."

'Why I love my Mom'

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

QUESTIONS TO ASK YOURSELF AND YOUR CHILD THAT WILL FRAME YOUR SEARCH FOR A BEST-FIT CAMP:
by, Bette Bussel, Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

• What/who is driving the camp search? Unparalleled fun and learning? New experiences, skills and friends? Need for child care? Family tradition? Encouragement from friends?
• What are your leading camp search criteria? Which are "non-negotiable" and which are "preferences"?
• What type of camp are you looking for? Which of your family's values should be reflected in the camp philosophy? How religious? How competitive? How diverse? How much camper choice? Camps are intentional communities. What they do and why is reflected in the staff members they hire, the schedules they follow, the activities they offer, and their materials.
• What activities/programs interest you and your child? What level of intensity are you looking for? Are you looking for opportunities to try new activities, to play, to advance current skills, to practice, to compete, or to specialize?
• What kind of facilities will your camper consider? Discuss electricity, bathrooms, and dining.
• What session length, from 8 weeks to a few days, is comfortable for you, for your child, and for your family's summer schedule? The most common session lengths are: full season (7-8 weeks), half season (3-4 weeks), two weeks, and one week. Remaining flexible about session length can increase your camp options.
• What camp clientele do you want to consider? There are camps for boys only, girls only, coed, brother/sister, religious groups, under-served populations, and children with special needs.
• What is your budget for camp tuition? Camp remains an affordable option for nearly everyone. Some camps offer financial assistance. Financial aid procedures vary from camp to camp, so be sure to ask and to read brochures and websites carefully.

Kevin Cowden

Kevin Millette

Columbia Buick-GMC is proud to announce Plymouth residents Kevin Cowden and Kevin Millette have joined their team as Service Manager and Service Technician, respectively.

Mr. Cowden brings over 23 years of automotive service experience to his new position, including the last 15 as an employee of Shaw Saab. Mr. Millette also has 15 years of experience at Shaw Saab, serving many years as shop foreman.

Both gentlemen are committed to ensuring that all their customers, old and new, are treated with the utmost dignity and respect.

Although their knowledge of all GM vehicles is extensive, their familiarity with SAAB vehicles is invaluable due to the closing of the local SAAB dealerships. Columbia Buick-GMC will now service all SAAB models with the same dedication and efficiency as they do all GM vehicles. SAAB owners now have a South Shore dealership where they can relax and get the type of service they've come to expect.

Dave Delaney and the Columbia Team invite all SAAB owners to visit them on Route 53 in Hanover. For the Month of May, all Saab customers are offered 20% off a lube, oil and filter service. We encourage you to bring your Saab down and say hello to "the Kevins" and give Columbia a try. Call, click, or visit today!

YOUTH LACROSSE

U-9 battle at Bare Cove

The Cohasset U-9 boys lacrosse team headed to Hingham this past weekend for a battle royale with some of the South Shore's finest lacrosse competition.

Our fearless gladiators strapped on oversized equipment and travelled up Route 3A to take on arch rivals Hingham, Weymouth, Hanover and Needham in a jamboree on May 6.

After weeks of grueling one hour practices in Cohasset-this was the Lil' Skippers chance to shine.

More than 50 of our finest players ventured onto the field in a six-on-six tournament that had many highlights, including several goals being scored despite strict enforcement of the dreaded two-pass rule.

Our brave goalies, most of whom had their debut in net, were able to turn away more shots than Tim Thomas during a Bruins playoff win.

Mike Brazis, youth coordinator for Hingham lacrosse and organizer of the event was impressed by the young Cohasset squad.

Girls lax battles Norwell

Baseball fighting for league crown

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset girls lacrosse team had a rough game Wednesday in a 15-12 loss to Norwell.

Still this is looking like a pretty good season for the Lady Skippers as they check in with a 6-2-2 record.

To start the season, the girls were 4-1-1, with a tie at Sandwich and a loss to Duxbury.

In between they won four straight, including wins over neighbors Hingham and Scituate.

The setback at Norwell ended a three-game unbeaten streak that included a 10-10 tie with Weston and matching 16-5 wins over Mashpee and Pembroke.

The boys lacrosse team has been stung by injury, but the team has had some nice moments in their 3-8 campaign, including a 13-5 win over Hull, followed by a 19-0 win at Mashpee.

In more recent games, the Skippers hung close to Lincoln-Sudbury and Norwell.

In the Lincoln Sudbury game, Cohasset lost 8-3, while they were close in an 11-8 loss to Norwell.

On the baseball diamond, the Skippers are still in the race for a South Shore League title, but a pair of losses, to East Bridgewater and Rockland could be a difference maker.

The two setbacks to East Bridgewater and Rockland are the Skippers' only losses in an 11-2 start.

East Bridgewater only has one league loss, while Rockland has three.

All-Stars Molly Fitzgerald and Hope Kissick

The Cohasset High School girls lacrosse team has two players that were selected to the Lower New England All Star team that will participate in the US Lacrosse National Tournament at Stony Brook University over Memorial Day weekend. Junior Hope Kissick and Sophomore Molly Fitzgerald were selected out of 350 top New England players to represent the region at the event. This is a historic moment for Cohasset High School girls lacrosse, as this is the first time anyone from the program has made the team.

Congratulations to Hope and Molly.

COLLEGE LACROSSE / TWO TO TOURNEY

Allard and Flibotte take to national stage

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It isn't often when two locals make it big at the next level, in this case Div. 1 NCAA Lacrosse, but it has happened this season as two of Cohasset's own have found their way to the NCAA Div. 1 Tournament.

Cohasset's Lindsey Allard is a sophomore at Dartmouth College, which recently won the Ivy League title. Allard has started all 16 games for the Big Green and has amassed 29 points on 19 goals and 10 assists.

She also has 15 ground balls and six draw controls.

Dartmouth (12-4) will face powerhouse Syracuse in the NCAA Tournament at Syracuse on Sunday.

Also headed into the Tournament is Cohasset's Gabriella Flibotte, who has appeared in 19 games (16 starts) for the defending National Champion Northwestern University team.

Flibotte has seven goals and three assists, with 34 ground balls and 31 draw controls.

Northwestern is 17-2 as they look to defend their title at home against Notre Dame on Saturday.

NDA athletic participation reaches all time high

Notre Dame Academy is known for its successful athletics program and student participation for the 2011-2012 year reached an all time high of 78 percent. With 18 interscholastic sports, ranging from Alpine skiing to volleyball, the program offers many opportunities for young women.

Athletic director Donna Brickley has tracked participation levels since she began at NDA in 1985. She said, "During the 1985-1986 school year, 47 percent of our students participated in sports. Over the years we've seen interest skyrocket and have responded by adding new teams."

Long after the last goal is scored and the final buzzer sounds, student athletes continue to reap the benefits of competing and this success is evident in the classroom. Every NDA spring team qualified for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association Gold Academic Excellence Awards – recognizing teams with a combined grade point average of 3.0 or above. The varsity softball team topped all spring teams with a team grade point average of 3.838.

Brickley, a member of MIAA's Board of Directors, is not surprised by these numbers. "Whether it is leadership qualities, time management skills or goal-setting skills, each NDA athlete, like female athletes across the country, gains something more than just success on the field," she said.

Several Cohasset residents attend NDA.

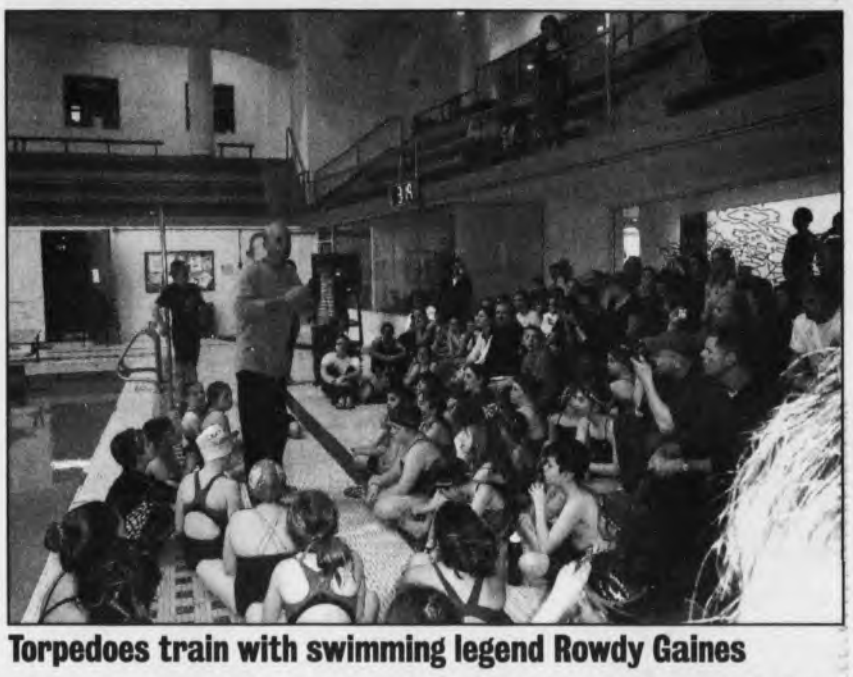
Cohasset Swim Center opens in June

The Cohasset Swim Center is getting ready to splash into the Summer of 2012. C.S.C will be opening weekends in June.

Register for your membership online at www.cohassetswimcenter.com.

Swim lesson registration for both members and non-members is also available online until June 15.

Swim lessons will be offered in four two-week sessions: Session I: June 25 – July 6, Session II: July 9 – July 20, Session III: July 23 – August 3, Session IV: August 6 – August 17.



For those who miss the June 15 swim lesson online registration deadline, walk-in registration for swim lessons will be available at the front desk on weekends.

Once the CSC opens full-time for the season, members and non-members can sign-up anytime at the front desk for any one of the four, two-week sessions on a first come, first service.

Torpedoes train with swimming legend Rowdy Gaines

On April 1, at the MIT Zesiger Center, the Torpedoes Swim Team of Norwell, joined by the Norwell Barracudas and the Weymouth Dolphins, were honored to host a swim clinic led by legendary Olympian Rowdy Gaines.

In the late 70's and early 80's, Rowdy was "the fastest swimmer on the planet" as holder of 8 world records in freestyle. He was World Swimmer of the Year twice.

He was favored to win multiple medals at the 1980 Olympics, but they were boycotted by the U.S. Rowdy continued training, and in 1984, as captain of the team, he won 3 gold medals. Today, Rowdy continues to break world records in Masters swimming.

He is a motivational speaker and broadcasts for his sport regularly on ESPN. He has announced swimming at the Olympics since 1992 and will be announcing for the sixth time this year in London.

Rowdy taught the Torpedoes about perseverance, discipline, and believing in oneself. They learned many new drills, but best of all they all got to race Rowdy!

Nobody came close, but we all had the time of our life climbing on the blocks next to Rowdy and racing this humble, funny, very competitive Olympian!

Swimmers from Norwell, Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield, Cohasset and Hanover are on the team.

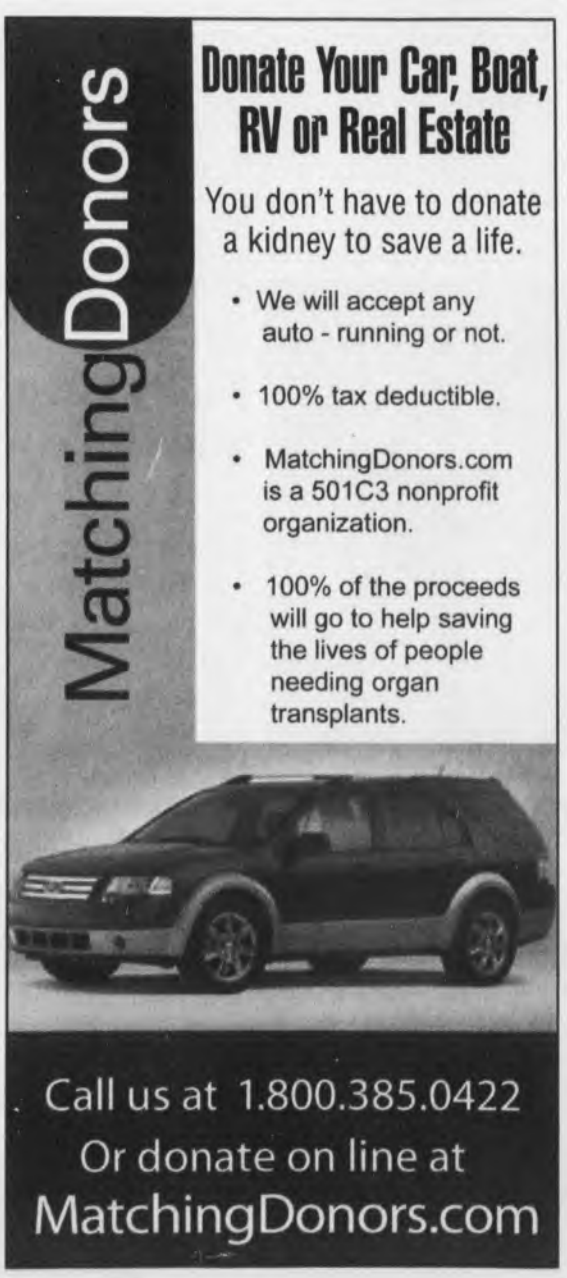
Cohasset hosts Rockland May 15, and closes the season by hosting East Bridgewater, May 24.

In their most recent action on Tuesday, Cohassed exploded offensively in a 20-5 win over Carver.

Jamie Faber led a balanced attack with a 3-for-3 afternoon with two homeruns and seven RBI.

He also scored four times.

John Collins, Chris Murphy and Colin Gideon-Murphy also had three hits each.



Collins had a homer and knocked in two runs, and Chris Murphy drove in four.

Gideon Murphy chipped in three RBI.

On the hill, Connor Dooley tossed two scoreless innings

"These kids really came to play," he noted. "Not even the musical ice cream truck strategically parked near the field could keep them from the game."

Coach Appleton was especially impressed with his squad and credits his coaches with such great organization for the event.

"These 12 fathers were able to singlehandedly control over fifty first and second graders with dangerous weapons," he said. "I have not seen herding like that since living in Scotland watching well trained border collies."

The U-9 team returns to action on May 20 with a battle against Hanover followed by a repeat grudge match against Hingham on June 10.

Both games will be played at Alumni Field in Cohasset. Come early to ensure a good seat.

Fifth grade girls White start strong

The Cohasset fifth grade White girls lacrosse team is off to a strong start with a 3-0 record.

The team is made up of fifth grade girls from Cohasset and a few girls from Hull.

Cohasset hosted Pembroke on Sunday and defeated Pembroke's sizable sixth grade team the week before.

Cohasset dominated Pembroke from the first draw taken by Jane Hansen who sprinted down the field dodging several defenders before placing her first of four goals high in the corner.

Cohasset White controlled the draws and came up with most ground balls ensuring the team had possession most of the game. Most girls on the team have scored this season.

Ellie Arnold, Lanie Hixson, Annie Toomey, Tillie McLean, Caroline Cooper and Bridget Osten all notched goals this game.

Natalie O'Brien was one of many girls getting an assist.

Elizabeth Bernstein and Eleanor Dunn played smart defense all over the field and Morley Pace and Emma Thomas stood tall on close "D".

Jane Cavanaro played her second game of the day for the fifth graders and made several good saves. She is also improving on her clears each game.

The team is looking forward to keeping the streak going next weekend against Hingham.

Fifth grade Blue beats Hanover sixth grade in Mid-Season Challenge

Midway through the season the fifth grade girls from Cohasset and Hull continue to improve and grow.

We are currently undefeated for the season.

Cohasset hosted Hanover sixth graders this past weekend. Hanover was a challenging competitor. In the end, Cohasset won 11-8.

Goalie Jane Cavanaro with seven saves on 15 shots made the difference for this game.

The Blue team is made up of all fifth grade girls from Cohasset and Hull.

From Hull we are lucky to have three strong players: Haley Walsh Peterson, Charlotte White and Ciara Redfearn.

The girls from Cohasset who scored goals were Julia Placek, Maggie Lucier, Caleigh Durkin and Madison Ahern.

Sophie Swartwood also had assists. Hanover's sixth graders were shocked at how well we won ground balls.

This game could have been close, but our efforts at ground balls by Jenna Herman, Hannah Burnett, Caroline McManus, Emma Stephens, Kristina Dietrick and Elise Wimberly made all the difference!

LIFE AT CHS

Graduation approaching fast!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

This week was extremely busy at CHS! AP Exams began this Monday. So far, students have been tested in Psychology, Chemistry, Spanish, Calculus, European History, English Literature, and US History. AP testing will finish up next Friday thankfully! For seniors, that means the majority of us will be done with any "real work" (in our minds). With only 8 days left until we say goodbye to CHS, it's unlikely for teachers to see seniors putting 100 percent effort into their studies...Hopefully the weather will improve quickly for the summer, prom in 2 weeks, and graduation in 3. After that, there will be many graduation parties to attend, food to eat, yearbooks to sign, and hugs to be given. I can't believe high school is ending, it's beyond surreal...

This week has been a big week for CHS sports. The track and field team faced Carver on Monday. Although they suffered a loss, 2 individuals and one relay have qualified for states so far this season. Melinda Dignam qualified in the 100 Hurdles, Rob Weiss in shot put, and Chrissy Secatore, Alexa Perez, Julia Canney and I in the 4x400 relay! Congrats everyone. Additionally, the girls' lax team lost to Norwell on Wednesday, but ended their regular season in second place in the league!

MCAS will take place next week on Tuesday and Wednesday, and finals for certain classes are coming up too. Also next week, a Grade 10 Parent Coffee will take place at 7:45 am. The 17th will be an Advisory day for CHS.

These next few weeks are big for the arts at CHS. Next Friday, the chorus and band will travel to New York City for their biennial trip! They will perform at a festival, go to a play, eat out, and enjoy time in the City That Never Sleeps. Fingers crossed for a successful performance and trip. Additionally, on Tuesday, May 22nd the CHS Arts Night will take place in the cafeteria. The chorus, band, and jazz band will perform and student's art from the past year will be on display. Senior artists will have their portfolios shown as well to commemorate their incredible work over the past four years.

Along with prom, seniors have a few important events coming up. First, the Senior Salute edition of the Spinnaker comes out on Thursday, May 24th, the seniors' last day. Next, Senior Class Night is Thursday, May 31st. Scholarships and awards will be presented to deserving seniors in front of family and friends. Lastly, graduation will take place on Saturday, June 2nd at 1:30 pm at the Music Circus. Come watch the 96 seniors of the Class of 2012 celebrate their accomplishments and receive their diplomas!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS. Her column runs weekly during the school year.

DON'T MISS THIS

Lecture looks at where we were Cohasset Historical Society will presents the last of its spring Wednesday Evening Lecture Series on May 16 at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. The topic for the evening will be "The Way the World Was," an interactive program examining the past 50 to 100 years and the changes that have taken place.

We live in an ever-changing world with science and technology having a continuing effect on our lives and the way we live. We'll take a nostalgic trip into the past, looking into such areas as transportation, communication, medicine and domestic life noting what has changed and looking for things that have stayed the same. Bring one's memories, items that have either changed or are obsolete, and a willingness to take this backward journey with others.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. with short presentations by members of the society. All are invited to attend, there is no charge and light refreshment will be served.

History alive

Deer Hill School third graders helped bring colonial times back to life during a special interactive performance by actress Linda Myer as Abigail Adams, the wife of John Adams, second president of the United States. Myer's performance is geared for elementary school students and focuses on the events of the American Revolution through the eyes of Abigail Adams. Students were not merely spectators but were invited onstage to act out events alongside Myer, including the Boston Tea Party and the reading of the Declaration of Independence in Boston. The event was sponsored by Cohasset's PSO.

HAPPENINGS

DTC movie night May 18

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's last scheduled spring movie night will feature "Hot Coffee" at 7 p.m., on Friday, May 18, in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The public is invited to view this documentary that examines the case of Liebeck v. McDonald's Restaurants, the so-called "hot coffee lawsuit," in which a woman sued the fast-food giant after she spilled her coffee and burned herself.

Looking past the negative publicity of the trial, the filmmaker, Susan Saladoff, examines the reasons why McDonalds's invested heaps of money to sway public opinion against the plaintiff. The cast includes John Grisham and Al Franken.

Everyone is welcome to the films, which are featured to inform and entertain viewers on issues of social, environmental, health and political interest. Refreshments (not including coffee) and the movie, are free.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 21, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A stubborn refusal to go ahead on a project mystifies colleagues who expected more flexibility. But once you explain your position, they'll understand and even applaud you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A relationship seems to be stuck in the same place. Now it's up to you, dear Bovine, to decide how far you want it to go and how intense you want it to be. Choose well and choose soon.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relationship progresses more slowly than you would prefer. Best advice: Insist on a frank and open discussion. What is learned could change minds and, maybe, hearts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's all right to be grateful to a workplace colleague who has done you a good turn. But gratitude shouldn't be a life-long obligation. The time to break this cycle is now.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's going to be especially nice to be the King of the Zodiac at this time. A recent money squeeze eases. Plans start to work out, and new friends enter Your Majesty's domain.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Before you make a commitment on any level (personal, professional, legal), get all the facts. There might be hidden problems that could cause trouble later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Personal relationships improve. Professional prospects also brighten. A job offer could come through by month's end. An old friend seeks to make contact.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your senses detect that something is not quite right about a matter involving a workplace colleague. Best advice: Follow your keen instincts and don't get involved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A prospect offers rewards, but it also demands that you assume a great deal of responsibility. Knowing you, you're up to the challenge, so go for it, and good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A favor you did a long time ago is repaid, as a trusted colleague steps in to help you with a suddenly expanded workload. A family member has important news.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new job offer could require moving across the country. But before you let your doubts determine your decision, learn more about the potentials involved.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sense of fair play doesn't allow you to rush to judgment about a friend who might have betrayed you. Good! Because all the facts are not yet in.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a romantic nature that allows you to find the best in people. You would excel at poetry and drama.

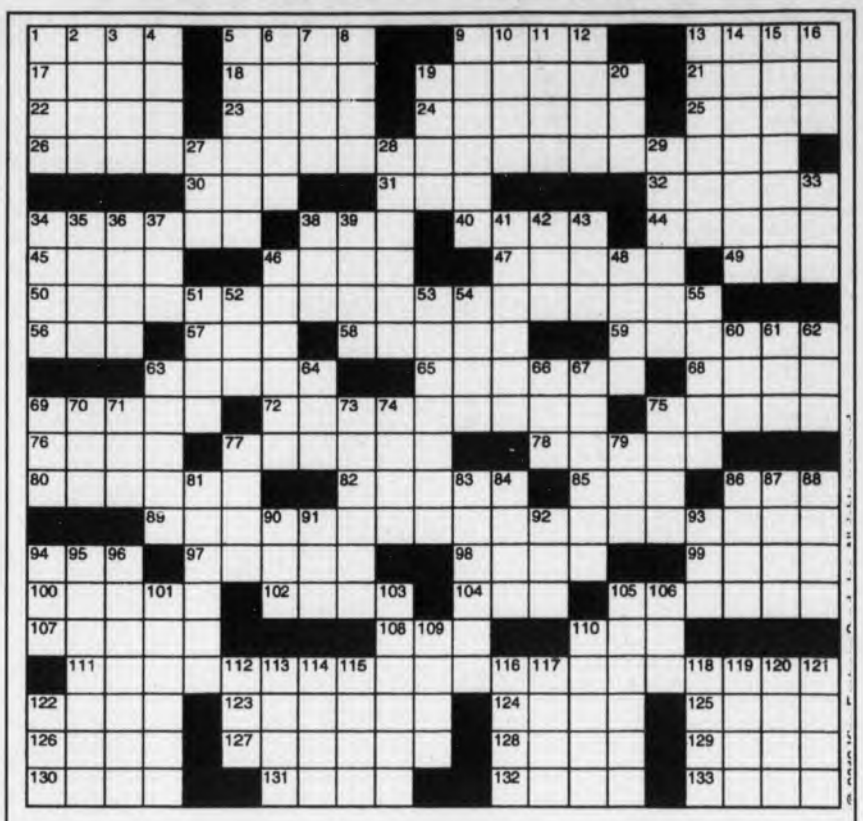
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Local congregations to host Community Supper

The parish hall at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will once again play host for an Old-Fashioned Community Supper, on Friday, May 18. The community supper is the brainchild of local clergy, who sought a way to bring their congregations and the community together for an evening of food and fellowship. "The first community supper in January was an overwhelming success," said associate Rector of St. Stephen's Adam Thomas. "We expected people to come by, eat some dinner, and leave, but so many people remained to chat with one another and just enjoy each other's company."

Members of St. Stephen's, St. Anthony's, 2nd Congregational, and 1st Parish will be teaming up to provide a main course, salad, bread and dessert for hundreds people. Everybody in the community, whether or not they are members of a local church, are welcome and encouraged to attend. Dinner will be served beginning at 5 p.m., and continue until 8 p.m. Just come as you are and leave full of food and good company. There is no cost to attend the dinner.

"Seeing folks of all ages and backgrounds come together to share a meal and serve one another at the first Community Supper in January was a beautiful thing to experience," said St. Stephen's events coordinator Mary Whitehouse. "Serving side by side with members of the community and other churches is something that I hope many more will experience when we gather again later this month."

At the supper, there will be a special Children's Corner with books and toys, and plenty of music– feel free to being a favorite instrument if it's portable. Cohasset Elder Affairs is planning transportation for any who need it.

For more information, to volunteer to serve at the meal or need transportation to the event, call St. Stephen's office at 781-383-1083. The dinner will take place at St. Stephen's, the stone church on the rock off of Cohasset Common, 16 Highland Ave.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Arthur L. Lehr Jr.

Arthur L. Lehr Jr.

COHASSET – Arthur L. Lehr Jr., age 92, of Cohasset, passed away Wednesday, May 2, 2012 surrounded by his family.

He was predeceased by his wife of over 50 years, Roberta Talbot Lehr. Arthur was the loving father of David Lehr, Allen Lehr and his wife Sandra, and Philip Lehr and his wife JoAnne, and grandfather to Robert, Rebecca, Samantha and Victoria Lehr, all of Cohasset. Involved in boy scouting for 80 years, Arthur's philosophy in life was service to others. He derived a great deal of satisfaction in volunteering, being involved on many boards in Cohasset and the wider community. He was selected as Cohasset Citizen of the Year in 2003.

After serving in the Navy in World War II for four and a half years, Arthur returned to Cohasset with his wife, Bobbie, he had met on leave in California. He settled in Cohasset, where they built their home. He was a Safety Engineer for Commercial Union, and also the co-founder of Lehr and Barnes Insurance Agency.

Visiting hours was on Friday, May 4, 2012, from 5 - 8 p.m.. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset. A Memorial Celebration was held this Saturday, May 5, at 1 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset.

Dorothy I. Remick

COHASSET – Dorothy I. Remick passed away peacefully at home Wednesday, March 28, 2012 after a long and valiant struggle.

Known to her friends as "Dottie" and grandsons as "Pookie", she was born in Portland, ME in 1920 to Philip and Bernice "Bunny" Ilsley. She attended Portland High School and graduated from Virginia Intermont College.

She became a flight attendant for Northeast Airlines, now Delta airlines, during World War II. There she met Captain Raymond "Ray" Remick of West Newton, MA. They married and after eight years in Egypt, MA, settled in Cohasset to raise a family. A s a longtime member of the Cohasset Yacht Club, Cohasset Golf Club and Cohasset Indoor Tennis Club, she enjoyed sports thoroughly. She and Ray were founding members of the South Shore Music Circus. As a patron of the arts, she frequented the Boston Symphony Orchestra, South Shore Art Center, Boston City Women's' Club and Cohasset Garden Club. The Remick's generously donated many acres of land for animal conservation to the Town of Cohasset. Dottie was very environmentally protective in matters affecting her small New England town. She volunteered regularly at the Cohasset Consignment Shop and Cohasset Historical Society.

She is predeceased by her husband of 50 years, Ray (Raymond Sr.); and son-in-law, Keith Sorensen. She is survived by her daughters, Deborah Remick of Cocoa Beach, FL; Diana Sorensen of Simi Valley, CA; step-son Ray Remick Jr., "Sonny" of Monhegan Island, ME; grandsons, Kris and Parker Sorensen and great-granddaughter, Ellia Rae. She will be greatly missed.

The entire family gives sincere thanks and much appreciation to her dear friend, Lois Silvia, for her care and attention to Dottie in her final months.

A memorial service will be held Wednesday, May 16 at 11 a.m. at the First Parish Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common. Both, Ray and Dottie and Dottie's beloved dog, Dolly, will be interred at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, please donate to American Cancer Society or SPCA (society for the protection of cruelty to animals).

Vocal jazz trio E.S.P. set to dazzle

The Third Sunday Series welcomes E.S.P., Boston's newest vocal jazz trio. Featuring original songs and compelling new arrangements of familiar and lesser-known jazz tunes, E.S.P. has captivated audiences at the Regatta Bar and other venues in the Boston area with their sensuous blend and savvy musicality. They will be at First Parish Cohasset at 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 20. First Parish is located on the green at North Main St., Cohasset. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. This is the last concert of the season for the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset.

E.S.P. will be presenting their trademark mix of jazz tunes new and old, familiar and obscure. Their stunning mix of songs will include "There Is No Greater Love," a 1930's standard covered by Billie Holiday and Dinah Washington; "Have a Little Faith in Me," previously covered by Etta James and Chaka Kahn, Stephen Sondheim's "Take Me to the World," George Gershwin's upbeat and triumphant "They All Laughed," and also "Help Me" by Joni Mitchell.

E.S.P. is Boston's newest vocal trio, featuring the diverse talents of Emily Browder, Sandi Hammond, and Patrice Williamson. In collaboration with pianist-arranger Mark Shilansky, E.S.P. delivers original songs and compelling new arrangements of familiar and lesser-known jazz tunes. The trio has captivated audiences at the Regatta Bar, Ryles, Johnny D's, the Acton Jazz Cafe, and other venues in the Boston area with their sensuous blend and savvy musicality. E.S.P.'s members have toured in cities including Singapore, Harare, Toronto, New York City, Washington, D.C., and Atlanta.

Patrice Williamson, is a favorite in Boston and beyond, where her fluent scat style and sensitive ballad work have earned her Boston Magazine's "Best of Boston" award and several Boston Music Award nominations. She's been heard at both the Tanglewood and Marblehead Jazz Festivals, as well as at the International Women's Forum in Singapore. Both of her independent recordings, "My Shining Hour" and "Free to Dream," have received high praise from jazz critics around the country. She is also actively passing on her knowledge and love of the jazz tradition through her teaching at The New School of Music in Cambridge, Wellesley College, and Milton Academy.

Sandi Hammond is a Boston-based indie singer-songwriter who writes in an alternative style all her own on both piano and guitar. With two solo records behind her "Rubbergirl" on Aspire Records and "This Summer Night" on Brave Records and a track on the internationally renowned Respond compilation (Columbia Records), she is currently working on an original two-act musical with gospel-style songs, in collaboration with songwriter-lyricist Mark Stepakoff. Sandi also runs her own commissioned songwriting business, Your Own Lullaby.

Emily Browder has received critical acclaim in the Boston area as a versatile singing actress. She has sung several roles with Opera Boston and has also appeared as a soloist with Boston Modern Orchestra Project (BMOP), Opera UnLimited, the Cantata Singers, the Boston Music Theater Project, Boston Vocal Artists, New England Voices, and various Walter Robinson productions. She can be heard in the role of The Boy on BMOP's acclaimed recording of Lukas Foss's Griffelkin (Chandos) and as Eve in Daniel Pinkham's GardenParty (Arsis). Upcoming releases include "The Humble Heart," produced by New England Voices.

For more information about the concert, contact Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

DON'T MISS THIS

View the tall shops in Boston Harbor

Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person, which includes the narrated tour, stationery and passed hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. This is a rain or shine event, but the yachts panoramic windows provide excellent viewing from inside its casually elegant cabin. The Historical Society extends an open invitation for this marine adventure. This seagoing afternoon would make a lovely family outing or special gift.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Change of heart prompts call to nursing

Graduate School of Nursing at UMass Medical School offers three-year program for nontraditional students

UMass Medical School

Robert Svensson's "ah ha!" moment arrived as he sat at his terminally ill mother's bedside, in the presence of compassionate caregivers delivering wisdom, support and aid during his family's darkest hour.

The longtime accountant, then in his mid-40s, had already begun reconsidering his career, tired of his stomach twisting in knots as he dreaded each stressed-out day at the office.

"I was kind of burned out," said the divorced father of two from Wilmington, who spent nearly 30 years crunching numbers on tax returns. "I really wasn't happy going to work anymore. I believe a person should go to work whistling and that wasn't happening for me."

The nurses that cared for Svensson's mother Betty, 75, in the final days of her 2002 battle with lung cancer provided needed relief for his family and a life-changing experience for him. Trading in his calculator for a stethoscope, Svensson set his sights on becoming a nurse practitioner.

"When my mom was dying, the hospice nurses in and out of her room explained what was going on and really helped us get through it," said Svensson, 56, who will graduate in June from the Graduate School of Nursing at the University of Massachusetts Medical School (UMMS) in Worcester. "She got quite a bit of care from a nurse practitioner and it was then that I was able to appreciate how knowledgeable and skilled they are. I realized I could see myself doing this."

Svensson moved to Worcester and entered the Graduate Entry Pathway (GEP) at UMMS in the acute care nurse practitioner track, a program specifically designed for career changers like him who have a bachelor's degree in a field other than nursing. Next year's GEP graduating class, for example, comprises six men and 26 women, including a musician, a fashion designer, two teachers and a prior restaurateur and personal trainer, as well as 12 recent college graduates who worked in other health care disciplines such as nutrition and mental health.

Established at UMass Worcester in 2004 to address the nursing workforce shortage, the GEP program prepares students to become registered nurses after a full year of accelerated coursework. After another two years of graduate study — including working 1,000 hours as registered nurses — they earn a Master of Science in Nursing in one of several advanced practice nursing specialties.

"We have a more mature, a more motivated and focused student who really knows what they want, wants to make a difference in the world and wants to truly work with patients," said GEP Program Director Eileen Terrill, Ph.D., an assistant professor of nursing at UMMS. "We realize that nursing education leading to nursing practice isn't a straight path from attending a traditional school. It really has been enriched by those who have delayed going into nursing because of a prior career or their families or other life choices."

Terrill said students range in age from 22 to 60 and come from a wide variety of backgrounds.

"I don't regret my music degree at all," said GEP student and oboe player Kristin Fleischmann-Rose, 27, of Sudbury, who earned a bachelor of science in music from McGill University before deciding on a nursing career. She will graduate next year with an advanced nursing degree as a primary care nurse practitioner. "I think it's really important for people to come from diverse backgrounds."

A literature class at McGill that included a discussion on women's health care piqued Fleischmann-Rose's interest in the field. She said she was also influenced by her experience as a doula, in which she spent many hours supporting women in labor and helping them make informed decisions on their care.

"I decided I wanted to be an advocate for women and men," she said. "I really liked the feeling of serving as a doula, making the women feel they were being supported. I'm very passionate about patient advocacy."

Finding a line of work that was fulfilling and rewarding was key, she said.

"There was a really good chance I would have found a job in music education, but, for me, it's never been about whether I could find a job," she said. "I want to make sure I have a good quality of life and enjoy what I'm doing. People find it really intriguing that I have a music degree and I know music will always be in my life."

Paulette Seymour-Route, Ph.D., dean of the Graduate School of Nursing at UMass Medical School and professor of nursing, awards Graduate Entry Pathway (GEP) student Robert Svensson his nursing pin at a 2010 ceremony. The annual GEP pinning ceremony marks the completion of the first year of the intensely accelerated study and passage of the national exam that will license the students as registered nurses. Fifty-year-old Michael Lovelace, a married father of three in Shrewsbury with an undergrad degree in fire protection engineering, was also focused on quality of life when he enrolled in the GEP program. With more than two decades as a firefighter/paramedic and then several years in the lucrative field of risk engineering, Lovelace knew his next career had to allow him more time with his family.

"A lot of people said to me, 'Wow, I'm really floored you're doing this ... a 50-year-old guy going to grad school,'" said Lovelace, who is on track to graduate with an advanced nursing degree in acute care in 2014. "And in some ways it is kind of crazy. But I think if you have a passion in something you should take the risk and don't be afraid to make that change."

For Svensson, the former accountant, going into nursing was a change he finally had the courage to make. The seed had been planted decades earlier when he worked as a hospital corpsman in the U.S. Navy after high school.

"When I got out of the Navy and went to college for accounting, I wasn't sure I really wanted to do it," he said. "People said, 'Geez you should go to medical school because you're smart and you can do it,' but I didn't have the self confidence then. And in 1978, men didn't go into nursing."

The UMass Amherst accounting grad, who will soon hold a master's in advanced nursing, said it is a "privilege" to be able to care for others.

"There's a whole lot more human contact on the nursing side rather than just looking at a bunch of numbers on a computer screen (as an accountant,)" he said. "If someone's thinking seriously about a career change, I would say the answer is embrace change. Change is good."

Charging max for public records

Cohasset Mariner gets estimated bill for $7,000

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Unfettered access to public records in Cohasset just got a lot more expensive.

While town government is required to maintain a public correspondence system that is easily accessible to any citizen under the state Public Records Law – in Cohasset, accessing public records either in paper or electronic form at the Selectmen's Office is proving to be difficult and costly.

Since Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski took over the reins in the Selectmen's Office in February when then Town Manager Mike Coughlin was suspended — the availability of weekly correspondence "packet" that traditionally had been readily available and accessible on a regular schedule has been sporadic at best.

For more than 20 years, the Cohasset Mariner has perused the correspondence packet — which includes letters, minutes, state correspondence, correspondence from other town boards, department reports, the Town Manager report, and more — and has paid 20 cents per page for any photocopies. The correspondence packet should be available to any citizen.

To that end, the Mariner emailed Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr on May 2 and copied that email to all the selectmen about concerns regarding availability of correspondence. Included in the Mariner email was a website link to the state Public Records Law. In an email reply that same day, Carr promised a proper response later, saying he would "fix it."

A little bit country:

Furniture, design store buys nearby barn

To open new showroom at former Joseph's site

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Country House Furniture and Interiors is more than a home furnishing store — it's a family business that spans four generations.

The Ferreira family has provided home decorating and interior design services to locals and customers in the greater New England and New York area for over four decades, making their business one of the oldest family-operated ones in Cohasset. Now, the family plans to expand their business from their current location along 3A to another commercial space right across the street: the barn that formerly housed Joseph's Hardware.

It all began back in 1964, when Bob Ferreira opened a carpet and flooring business called Town and Country Flooring in Hingham and Cohasset. Bob has been a Cohasset resident all his life: "My grandchildren are the sixth generation," he says.

Bob and wife Arlene purchased their first home together in town in 1965. After years of her husband providing carpeting and vinyl flooring to customers, Arlene followed her passion for home decorating and opened Country House Antiques in 1979.

As the market for antiques began to lessen over the years while the interior design industry grew, the Country House evolved into both a

ROUND 2 MONDAY

Town Meeting

Voters veto meals tax, citizens petition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The most controversial and heavily debated articles on the Annual Town Meeting warrant were soundly defeated on the floor last Saturday.

These were the articles on implementing additional local option taxes on meals and hotel stays in town, along with a citizens' petition calling for the restructuring of the water and sewer departments.

Town Meeting began at 9 a.m. on Sat., May 12 in the Cohasset High School gymnasium. Voting could not begin until 100 citizens had signed in; a quorum of 100 voters was reached at 9:26 a.m. The meeting wrapped around 3 p.m. after two five-minute breaks and over five hours of discussion, deliberation and debate.

Voters supported most of the 21 articles in the warrant (see sidebar for full list and votes), including:

- Approving financial management policies recently adopted by the Board of Selectmen;
- Unpaid bills from previous years;
- A transfer of $500,000 from litigation funds won by the schools to repair damage done to the floors;
- Reappropriating $250,000 from the closed-out Jacobs Meadow culvert repair project to the Bound Brook project on Beechwood Street;
- A nearly $35 million town operating budget for fiscal year 2013, which includes some new headcount in Town Hall;

ASSESSORS NEWS ALERT

Extended deadline for important filing

The Cohasset Board of Assessors has mailed a second request for Income and Expense information from rental property owners and commercial and industrial property owners for fiscal 2013.

In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 59, Section 38D, failure to comply with the Assessors' request by April 1, 2012 could result in a $250 fine assessed to the fiscal 2013 tax bill. However, the Board of Assessors will accept Income and Expense information through June 2, 2012 from owners who wish to avoid the $250 fine.

The Board of Assessors intends to assess the fine for those who do not provide a completed form by the extended deadline. For further information, contact the Assessors' Office at (781) 383-4114.

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F).

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level.

PUBLIC SAFETY UPDATE

'Dead set against' dark station

Police Chief makes his stand clear

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Police Chief Mark DeLuca has been outspoken about wanting to keep the police station staffed around the clock; interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski has said that there is no money in the budget to staff the station 24/7.

The issue has been debated around town as Cohasset prepares to transition to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham. When the dispatchers move to the Hingham location, there will be times when Cohasset's public safety building will be empty. The station could go dark from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m. weekdays and all day on weekends.

Selectmen voted to approve moving to regional dispatch during a November 2009 meeting but did not take a vote on whether or not the station would go dark. The chief has said that a feasibility study was never done to explore alternatives.

At one point last year, selectmen proposed having junior cadets at the station overnight, but former Town Manager and attorney Michael Coughlin quickly vetoed that idea because of the liability issues involved. Coughlin said last week that he was going to speak up at Town Meeting and move to change the police department's budget from $1,343,424 to $ 1,434,424 "to maintain round the clock staffing at the Cohasset Police Station." The former town manager, who was removed without cause in March, decided to withdraw his amendment the day before Town Meeting in deference to the police chief. "The town should always hear first from its chief law enforcement officer," Coughlin wrote in an email to Town Moderator Dan Evans.

Milanoski has stated publicly several times that 1) the station will hardly ever be empty because officers, lieutenants and either the chief or deputy chief could be on duty and 2) the station's lobby will be turned into a "safe room" with a video monitor that will be linked to the dispatchers at the SSRECC. But the chief has remained adamant in his preference to keep the station staffed full-time.

Saturday's Town Meeting gave DeLuca the opportunity to take to the floor and state why he is against the station going dark. He addressed the voters during the discussion on Article 9, which concerned the town's fiscal year 2013 operating budget.

The chief said that since Milanoski took the helm as interim town manager in March, the two of them have been discussing potential solutions to "the situation that's been thrust upon us from several administrations prior to us."

"I've been here two and a half years and I've worked with four different town managers in the course of my short tenure here. I love working for you, I love serving you here in Cohasset; it's a fantastic community," said DeLuca.

"My opinion has been the same throughout all four administrations. I am dead set against the dark police station. I think the police station should be manned 24 hours a day, seven days a week. I think that it's something the residents here have grown accustomed to, and I think it's something you all deserve."

The chief told voters that "on the onset" of the regional dispatch initiative, impact studies were not conducted to learn the effects of darkening the station. The current administration is trying to deal with this legacy issue, he said. "I think the level of services will drop, and our ability to provide the level of safety that you're accustomed to will change. The town manager and I have spent many hours crunching numbers, statistics, checking walk-ins to try to justify it... not manning the station. It's not an easy decision... We're trying to come to some type of resolution that serves the community best. . I can't state this strong enough that a dark police station, in my opinion as the chief of police, is not the direction that we want to go in."

The Supt. Of schools Barbara Cataldo then took to the microphone to discuss the school budget. After Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore gave his comments on the proposed operating budget, the town moderator opened the discussion up for public questions.

Taffy Nothnagle, Atlantic Avenue, brought the conversation back to the police station. She asked if the police department budget being presented included funds to keep the station staffed.

Milanoski addressed the question, but hedged in giving his final answer.

"The police department budget includes fully funding all the existing police officers that are operating out of the building," he said. "It includes funding the deputy chief, the chief, the secretary, and again, all of those normal expenses. It also includes funding the regional dispatch. So we have dispatchers that are no longer going to be working in the station; they're going to be moving to the regional station. That money has been reallocated to that program. So the difference that you see in this budget is that the personnel [line item] for dispatchers is no longer funded; however, the bill from the SSRECC, if you will, is now funded in this budget; that's the only significant change you see in this budget."

The police department's recommended total budget for fiscal year 2013, including personnel services, overtime and general expenses, is $1,947,163 as voted on by Town Meeting.

The moderator asked Milanoski to "address the question on the darkened police station."

The town manager responded, "This budget does not include any additional personnel."

"Could you answer the question, please?" Evans repeated.

Milanoski answered, "We're still in the process of working with the chief to determine how we're going to implement the project. That does not include any additional personnel to work around the clock at this point."

The town moderator asked one more time: "If the budget is passed as proposed, would the station at be dark at some time or not?"

"At some time or not, as proposed, that answer is correct," said Milanoski.

There were no further questions on the station after that. A few days after Town Meeting, Chief DeLuca told the Mariner that he stands by what he said that day.

"I made my statement at town meeting on Saturday morning and 100 percent believe if the station goes dark... if it goes unstaffed, there's definitely going to be a negative impact on my ability to provide the level of public safety services the town currently has. How could it not?"

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

POLICE BEAT

Break-ins under investigation

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Police Department's Criminal Investigation Division is investigating a series of residential and commercial breaking and enterings that have occurred over the past two-weeks in the area of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street.

The most recent was a breaking and entering to a home on Jerusalem Road last Wednesday (May 9). The 52-year-old homeowner reported that her Apple desktop computer valued at $2,000 was missing. Police said there was no forced entry, as the home appeared to have been unlocked.

In another recent break, the resident is reporting that over $100,000 in jewelry was stolen.

Chief Mark DeLuca stated that "all residents should be sure to secure their homes when they are away." The chief also asked that residents immediately report any suspicious people or activity to the police department immediately.

Not neighborly

Police said two next-door neighbors in Cohasset are not getting along and the dispute has resulted in court action. Last week a 58-year-old Cohasset man reported that the family next door was hanging pictures and posters in the windows facing his house mocking him and he had had enough.

Police are summonsing a 21-year-old man to court for criminal harassment, as he is the one responsible for the posters and pictures.

The 58-year-old neighbor went to court and obtained a harassment prevention order against the whole family, police said.

Probation

A 17-year-old Cohasset boy was arrested last week on an outstanding probation warrant. Police said the boy did not fulfill conditions of his probation and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

Domestic

Police responded to a domestic incident in one of the Avalon units last week. Police said it involved an older couple and the husband had become verbally abusive and blew up at his wife. Police said there was no physical violence and the couple was able to sit down and talk it out.

Protester

A walk-in at the police station last Monday (May 7) was upset about a protester outside the post office with a poster that disparaged President Obama. The protester was on public property and within his first amendment rights, police said.

Metal missing

Numerous pieces of cast iron and steel equipment were reported missing from the DPW yard off Cedar Street last week. Police said a gasoline sander motor, manhole covers and water gates and grates, with a total value of about $3,000, were taken, likely for scrap. The theft is under investigation.

Ran red light

Police responded to a three-car crash at around 9:42 a.m. on Friday (May 11) at North Main Street and Forest Avenue. Police said a 2006 Nissan Murano, operated by a 39-year-old Weymouth man, was driving on lower King Street and apparently ran the red light hitting the passenger side of a 2008 Lincoln MKX sedan, operated by a 71-year-old Cohasset man. A third car rear-ended the Nissan but took off, police said. Police were unable to get a description of the third car that turned left onto North Main and put out an alert to area towns. Police believe both the Nissan and the car behind it were trying to beat the light.

The Lincoln was towed. There were no reported injuries. The Weymouth man was cited for failure to stop at a red light, police said.

Fired employee

The manager of a local restaurant off Route 3A asked police to be present last Friday while he terminated an employee. The employee, a 41-year-old Quincy man, was brought to the train station without incident.

Tight spot

Police responded to a minor motor vehicle accident at 1:49 p.m. on Friday (May 11) on South Main Street. Police said a 41-year-old Hull man in a 2001 Jeep Cherokee was traveling on South Main from the direction of the common when he clipped a 2007 Chevrolet pickup parked in one of the angled spaces in the narrow area across the street from the ledge below St. Stephen's Church. Police said he hit the back of the pickup truck that was unoccupied at the time but is owned by a 52-year-old Cohasset man.

Hit pole

At 1:07 p.m. on Sunday (May 13), police responded to a single-car accident on Margin Street. Police said a 17-year-old Weymouth boy in a 1992 Pontiac Bonneville drove off the road near the Roy Estate into a utility pole. He also damaged a stonewall. The driver and his 16-year-old passenger were transported to the hospital. The driver was cited for marked lanes violation and for a violation of his junior operator's license restriction for having an underage passenger. The car, which had heavy front-end damage had to be towed, police said.

Into building

Police said a 90-year-old Cohasset man in a 2007 Ford Ranger pickup hit the accelerator instead of the brake when pulling into a parking space in front of Tedeschi's in the village on Sunday at about 5:30 p.m. and drove into the side of the building near the "pocket park" between Tedeschi's and French Memories. The driver was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. Police filed an immediate threat with the Registry of Motor Vehicles that revoked the man's license.

RECORDS

The Public Records Law, which is available online, also makes it clear that emails and other electronic correspondence are also public records and should be readily accessible.

The Mariner filed a public records request with Milanoski on May 2 to be able to inspect all emails generated or received by the Selectmen's office from April 1 to May 1. On Friday, Milanoski provided the Mariner with an estimated bill of more than $7,000 for the emails.

The Selectmen's Office also provided a citizen with an estimated bill for his recent request.

Howie Altholtz of Woodland Drive recently filed a request for all correspondence and emails generated by the Community Preservation Committee on the proposed grant to restore the windows at First Parish. Altholtz has been a critic of the grant proposal, which goes before Town Meeting on Monday, on the grounds that it is unconstitutional.

This week Altholtz received an estimated bill from Milanoski for more than $700 for the emails. He found the estimated bill to be disconcerting.

"The CPC response calls into question their ability to stay objective," Altholtz said. "It creates an unlevel playing field by preventing public access to the same information town officials have."

The Mariner has retained the law firm, Caruso & Caruso LLP, in connection with the response the Mariner received to its public records request.

In a May 16 letter to Carr and Milanoski, attorney Peter J. Caruso stated: "E-mail messages must be managed as part of the office's record holdings. E-mail messages are subject to the same records management principles as all other records in the office. Your response indicates this is not followed in Cohasset."

"It creates an unlevel playing field by preventing public access to the same information town officials have."
Howie Altholtz, Woodland Drive

Public Records Law

- Every document, paper, record, map, photograph, etc. as defined by law, that is made or received by a government entity or employee is presumed to be a public record. The Legislature has created statutory exemptions, which are discretionary to the records custodian, that allow the records custodian to withhold a record from the general public. The records custodian has the burden of showing how the exemption applies to the record and why it should be withheld.
- Records custodian must respond to a request within 10 calendar days in writing with a good faith estimate of the cost of providing the record if the cost of compliance is expected to exceed $10 or a denial of access to the record by claiming a specific exemption to the public records law.
- A custodian may charge 20 cents per page for photocopies, 25 cents for microfilm copies and 50 cents per page for computer printouts. In the interest of open government, all records custodians are strongly urged to waive the fees associated with access to public records, but are not required to do so under the law.
- A records custodian may charge and recover a fee for the time he or she spends searching, redacting, photocopying and refiling a record. The per-hour charge for this process may not be greater than the prorated hourly wage of the lowest paid employee who is capable of performing the task.
- If a requestor wishes to review records in the records custodian's office but does not require copies of the records, a records custodian may charge and recover a fee for his or her time spent searching and redacting the records. Access to records viewed in this manner should not be denied and only minor fees associated with securing the record should be charged.

Public records request from the Mariner

May 2, 2012
Town Manager Michael Milanoski
Michael:
Under the state Public Records Law, I am requesting to inspect or have copies of all email correspondence generated or received by the Board of Selectmen's Office, and members thereof, from April 1 through May 1, 2012.
Mary Ford, Cohasset Mariner

May 11, 2012
Dear Mrs. Ford,
This message is in response to your Public Records Request (the "Request") to the Community Preservation Committee (the "CPC") dated May 2, 2012. The Request states that "you are requesting to inspect or copies all email correspondence generated or received by the Board of Selectmen's Office, and members thereof, from April 1 through May 1, 2012."

The Public Records Law, M.G.L. c.66 §10, states that the custodian of public records may provide the requester with a good faith estimate of the cost to search for, segregate, redacting, and reproduce the applicable public records. The good faith estimate of such cost for the records you have requested is $7,018.29 a breakdown of which is provided below.

Searching, segregation, redacting, and copy time: 63 hours x $ 21.83: $1,375.29

Copies: 11,286 x $0.50 per page: $5,643.00

Total: $7,018.29

Please forward a check made out to the Town of Cohasset in the amount of the Total stated above. We will begin the process of assembling and copying the public records you have requested when we receive the check. You will be refunded in the event that the expenses listed above are less than those stated and conversely you will be charged in the event that the actual expenses are greater than those listed above.

Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

$700 estimate for CPC documents

Editor's note: The following is the estimated bill that Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski sent to Howie Altholtz for his public records request. Mr. Altholz provided the Mariner with a copy of the email.

Dear Mr. Altholtz,

This message is in response to your Public Records Request (the "Request") to the Community Preservation Committee (the "CPC") dated May 3, 2012. The Request states that you would appreciate copies of all correspondence between all CPC committee members related to the Window, Grant Request; all correspondence between any CPC committee member and any other source outside the committee related to the Window Grant Request; Minutes from any meetings where a vote was taken on the Window Grant Request and summary as to vote results, i.e., which members voted for and which members voted against the Window Grant Request."

The Public Records Law, M.G.L. c.66 §10, states that the custodian of public records may provide the requester with a good faith estimate of the cost to search for, segregate and reproduce the applicable public records. The good faith estimate of such cost for the records you have requested is $761.96, a breakdown of which is provided below.

Search, segregation and copy time Copies: 12 hours x $21.83: $261.96

1000 x $0.50 per page: $500.00

Total: $761.96

The Request states that you are seeking a "summary as to vote results, i.e., which members voted for and which members voted against the Window Grant Request." Please note that the Public Records Law does not require the creation of new documents.

Please forward to me a check made out to the Town of Cohasset in the amount of the Total stated above. We will begin the process of assembling and copying the public records you have requested when we receive the check. You will be refunded in the event that the expenses listed above are less than those stated and conversely you will be charged in the event that the actual expenses are greater than those listed above.

Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

Response to request from Chairman Ted Carr:

Editor's note: Mary Ford received the following email from Chairman Ted Carr after she contacted him via email for comment on the public records story.

"The town of Cohasset did receive a written request for public records from Mary Ford, the editor of the Cohasset Mariner. The request was reviewed consistent with State law and local guidelines. A response was delivered to Mary Ford via email as to the approximate cost of fulfilling her request. Mary Ford in a written response declined to pursue the request due to the cost estimate provided.

"The Request from the paper for records over a month-long period was very broad. It included almost 12,000 pages of documents that must be printed, and reviewed consistent with State law and local policy. Because the correspondence included in most cases but was not limited to, personal data, draft contracts both for Union and Non union personnel, correspondence between town and Attorney which is privileged due to the nature of the correspondence which in some cases dealt with strategy as to real estate, the Dismissal of Town Manager Michael Coughlin and other items. It was determined that the 12,000 pages must be fully reviewed by Town Counsel, the Boston firm of DW.

"Before work would begin, a quotation and estimate of costs $7000 associated with the project was presented. I feel strongly that this cost should not fall on the shoulders of Cohasset taxpayers. It would be unfair to the people of Cohasset to accept such a cost in an environment when the budgets are so taxed to begin with. We are glad to provide the information requested, but because the cost was out of the ordinary and excessive, I stand by the decision of the town it was simply not appropriate to waive the fee.

"There are many problems pertaining to administration that the town has faced and our board has addressed over the last year. The availability of public records such as meeting minutes and correspondence, to name a few, continue to be addressed. I am committed to fix this issue. At no time do I or the other members of the board stand in the way of public records reaching the public. We are on the road to the right direction. Cohasset is like many other towns that struggle with common issues and, at the end of the day, each day Cohasset grows stronger."

FOR NEXT YEAR

Students devise new calendar

Seniors will have extra week of school

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Talk about senioritis.

Cohasset High School juniors learned this year that in 2013, they are going to graduate high school one week later than their peers in the past. The School Committee recently voted to change the Saturday graduation date by a week in order to accommodate the Cohasset Music Circus' schedule. Graduation will be held on June 8 next year.

"It's expensive for them to open up so much earlier [to hold graduation]," said School Committee chair Dr. Helene Lieb. "They don't charge us, and we don't want to abuse our welcome."

Student representatives to the school committee, juniors Andrew Barrett and Bobby Nahill, were tasked with creating an all-new schedule and asking their fellow students to contribute ideas.

"We had a lot of input from our classmates," said Barrett.

"We wanted to be efficient with it," Nahill said. "We'll be sending [the proposed schedule] out to the class to get parents' signatures."

Rather than an additional week of classes, the seniors will enjoy a few extra days of bonding time and fun activities with their classmates and teachers before they bid their high school days goodbye.

The time-honored senior barbecue and senior meeting were both traditionally held on the same day, allotting a half-hour for each activity; in the proposed schedule for next year, those events will take place on two separate days.

"We took everything done in past years and divided it into two days so there's more time to say goodbye and thank teachers," Barrett explained.

School committee members were impressed with what their student reps presented.

"It's unbelievable, the amount of work they've put into this," Supt. Barbara Cataldo said of Barrett and Nahill.

The school committee plans to submit the proposed schedule to the new Middle-High School principal, Carolyn Connolly; they will vote on it during their May 30 meeting. In the meantime, they hope to gain community feedback.

"We're creating some new traditions moving forward," said Cataldo.

Senior class last week schedule, 2013

Student representatives to the School Committee have proposed the following schedule change for next year:

May 24: Last full day of school
May 28: Half day
- Release at 11:30 a.m.
- Possible "Senior Salute" pep rally to send off seniors

May 30: Senior meeting with parents
- Breakfast and yearbook signing
- Meeting will emphasize the student code of conduct; seniors will sign the conduct document

May 31: Prom (no school)
June 3: Seniors off from school
June 4: Senior barbecue and field day
June 5: Seniors off
June 6: Class night rehearsal during the day and ceremony at night
June 7: Graduation rehearsal
June 8: Graduation

NEWS UPDATE

Water samples clear of E. coli

Water dept. said repeat samplings are all clear

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The latest well water samples from Ellms Meadow are clear of E. coli, the Cohasset Water Department announced Tuesday, May 15.

Supt. Norman Lavigne of American Water (operator of Cohasset Water) said in a phone call, "We got the results from the lab, and the repeat sampling came back clear."

On Monday, May 14, the water department issued a Tier 1 public notice (see sidebar) to its customers stating that a water sample collected from Ellms Meadow on May 8 tested positive for E. coli, a fecal indicator. The Mariner posted the notice online, and it also ran on the local TV stations and in a reverse 911 call. The water system was notified on May 12 that E. coli was found.

Customers were told that they did not need to boil water, but were instructed to discard all ice, food products and formula made with tap water collected on or before May 8.

Only the untreated sample from the Ellms Meadow well (the only well station that supplies drinking water to the Cohasset system) tested positive for E. coli; none of the chlorinated samples tested positive.

No E. coli was found in the follow-up samples; the water department received an update on the test results late afternoon on Tuesday, May 15.

Water Commission Peter DeCaprio said, "It was in the raw water source, and the treatment systems did what they are supposed to do. No E. coli was found in the treated water samples, which means that our treatment processes worked as designed. No finished water leaving any of our facilities was tainted."

A few Cohasset residents told the Mariner that there were perplexed as to why the public was notified nearly a week after samples had been taken, but they did not wish to comment on record. DeCaprio explained why, if the sample was collected last Tuesday, the water system was not notified until Saturday that week, and the public didn't find out until this past Monday.

The announcement was made per state guidelines and the proper timeline; the public wasn't informed within 24 hours because the findings were "not at the level of an emergency," said DeCaprio. "It is assumed E. coli is going to be in your water system, which is why you treat it with chlorine."

The water commissioner explained that the water sample is collected monthly, and was done so as per usual on May 8. The water department received a preliminary notice that E. coli was found in the untreated sample; they then notified the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), which requires that the water department issue a public notice once the lap samples are confirmed.

DeCaprio said that the town's water plant operator, American Water, "did exactly what they were supposed to do, within the schedule set by the state, and did everything according to state guidelines. They did a great job."

The water commission expanded on this in an online commentary on the Mariner's website:

"American Water's performance in this was exemplary and I thank their employees for their dedication and diligence. They got on this immediately and did everything that was required and then some out of sheer professional pride. The state requirements for such incidents follow a very detailed decision tree, and American Water followed state guidelines scrupulously, as you would expect from a highly competent, very professional organization. Everyone in Cohasset should be grateful we have them helping us. The employees we have are a credit to their organiza-

TIER 1 PUBLIC NOTICE: Bacteriological Situation or Violation

Bacteriological situations or violations that require a Tier 1 public notice include:

Tier 1 Situations

- Acute violations of the Total Coliform Rule in the distribution system (i.e., whenever an E. coli-positive repeat sample is detected, or a total coliform-positive repeat sample follows an E. coli-positive routine sample).
- Fecal indicator positive detections under the Ground Water Rule (E.coli or Enterococci) in the source water.
- Repeated non-acute bacteria violations or severe violation of the Total Coliform Rule (i.e., widespread total coliform in the distribution system) due to a specific incident or potential source, treatment, storage, cross-connection or other condition, as determined by MassDEP on a case-by-case basis.
- Waterborne disease outbreak, interruption or equipment failure in treatment or supply, loss of system pressure (i.e., water outage or main break) or use of an unapproved source, as determined by MassDEP on a case-by-case basis.

Immediately and no later than 24 hours of your knowledge of a Tier 1 situation or violation, you are required to notify and consult with MassDEP, implement your emergency response plan, and provide public notification to consumers.

AROUND TOWN

A big welcome to Thomas Pologruto

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hi Cohasset, how is everyone this week? From what I have heard, we are in for a bright and sunny weekend so I hope everyone enjoys it. I know that this time of the year is filled with many graduations of children and students of all ages, congratulations to all!

Special day

Happy Birthday wishes going out to Cody Piepenbrink as he turns 17 on Thursday, May 24th! Love you Cody, have an awesome day!

New arrival

Dawn, Tom, and big brother John Robert Pologruto announce the newest addition to their family: Thomas James Pologruto. Thomas was born on April 24, 2012, at 8:17 a.m., in Huntington, N.Y. He weighed 9 pounds, 10 ounces and measured 21 inches long. Welcome to the world, Tom – you are such a cutie!

If you see Thomas' grandmother Barbara Meehan smiling more than usual around town – but sure to congratulate her on her new grandson!

Xavier honors

Andrew Cantillon of Cohasset was named to the spring 2012 dean's list in the Williams College of Business at Xavier University in Cincinnati, Ohio. Andrew is a sophomore at Xavier, majoring in economics. Son of Philip and Catherine Cantillon, he graduated from Boston College High School in 2010.

Great work, Andrew!

Red carpet

Next Thursday, May 24th is the final day of classes for this year's CHS Class of 2012. The following day, Friday the 25th is Prom Night and it all begins with the much anticipated Pre-Prom Red Carpet Gala held for the 7th straight year on Cohasset Common. This event begins at 5:45 and is of course opened to everyone as the Seniors alone or with their dates walk down the carpet and pose for pictures among family and friends and get ready to board the trolley to head to the Prom at the Venezia. In the event of rain, the event will take place in the high school gym. To order a DVD of the special event for $20, please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197 or email him at shaun_galvin@yahoo.com

Work out!

The Fit Club Work-Out event is being offered free of charge at Cohasset Family Chiropractic at 814 CJC Highway, Tuesday, May 29 at 7 pm and is being led by Independent Beachbody Coach, Angela Nuss. To register, call 781-923-1226. Fit Club is a fun and energizing work-out that is completely modifiable. There will also be time for nutrition and healthy eating advice. Great event to attend....

Car wash

Here is a great way to get rid of the pollen, worm stuff and other Springtime crud on your car AND support a fantastic program. The Cohasset ASP Car Wash is being held tomorrow (Saturday) from 10 a.m. –2 p.m. at the 2nd Congregational Church. Come get your car washed and help fund the 25th work camp trip to Appalachia this June!

Go blue!

On Thursday, May 24th the Cohasset Lacrosse team will honor their Seniors. Please come out and support the Skippers as they play the Scituate Sailors. The JV team will play at 5:30 pm and the Varsity team will take the field at 7 pm. All Cohasset Youth players wearing their Cohasset pinnie and accompanied by an adult will get in for free. The shack will be open for your dining pleasure.

Plant sale

Following a Spring of heat, drought, cold, rain, rain, rain, heat, ...are you ready to plant? This year's Community Garden Club of Cohasset's sale of all that blooms best in Cohasset' gardens, plus shades of green beyond counting, will be for sale, tomorrow, Saturday from 9-1 on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society at 106 South Main St. Come and help make Cohasset even more beautiful...

That's the news for this week Cohasset...Send in next weeks news by email, phone or text by 5:00 on Tuesday night.

Austin honored for his top essay

Hingham District Courthouse hosted a Law Day Ceremony on May 1 with the theme "No Courts, No Justice, No Freedom."

Cohasset Middle School's grade eight students were asked to write an essay based on a prompt that highlighted the recent proposal to close two of the four District Courts in Plymouth County and asked students to reflect on how society would be affected by the elimination of courts.

Riley Austin was honored at this ceremony, receiving an honorable mention for his submission.

Riley wrote: "The court system of the United States of America is integral to a citizen's rights, the implementation of the Bill of Rights, and the Constitution, as well as justice for all. If there were no courts in our society, the responsibilities of people who ensure justice would be compromised and inequality would occur, which would be inconsistent with our democratic way of life and traditions."

BARN

home furnishing store and interior design business. Today, the husband and wife team work side by side with daughters Lisa Evans and Kim Jalewsky, who both provide interior design services.

When the Ferreiras first opened up shop in Cohasset, their business was located across the street from the Country House's current location, 818 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), which is practically on the Cohasset-Scituate border. Their first location housed the carpet business; after a year there, they moved to Cushing Plaza, where Shaw's is currently located. In 1979, the Ferreiras purchased the small commercial building across the street, where they are still situated today. Now, Country House is expanding its reach back across the street — to the barn where, most recently, Joseph's Hardware operated. The hardware store shuttered over two years ago when, in a dramatic scene, the Holbrook Cooperative Bank had Plymouth and Norfolk County police seize the store's inventory.

The space has sat empty ever since; now, the Ferreira family has a chance to create a bright spot there. From the sound of it, that's exactly what they plan to do.

"We've always admired the barn," says Arlene. "We watched as it was being built." After the hardware store closed, she says, "We thought it would be a great space to sell furniture."

Arlene explains that the demand for interior design and home decorating services has increased exponentially over the years. This is why the store's name changed from "Country House Antiques" to "Country House Furniture and Interiors."

"We've always admired the barn. We watched as it was being built."
Arlene Ferreira

"We had a lot of antiques when we started here, but we evolved into doing a lot of new furniture," she says. Over at the barn, however, "We will carry a few more antiques upstairs."

The plan, so far, is that the barn will house showrooms with furniture displays and homeroom settings: "It's a dynamite place to show rooms in," says Arlene.

The family's outpost over there will also feature a different – but related – name than Country House Furniture and Interiors, though that has yet to be decided. One thing the Ferreiras might move away from — the name "country." Both Arlene and daughter Lisa explain that the word is a misnomer when it comes to the business, whose aesthetic is really more "casual elegance" and "traditional."

"It's more 'town and country,'" Arlene explains.

And, yet, having a "country" furniture store in a barn seems so fitting.

While the barn will likely house the showrooms, the current Country House store will function as the design center, says Arlene. Clients will go there for in-store design consultations.

"The space here is different," she says of the current location. "It's worked well for us, but now we need more space."

Lisa adds that the new location will "offer us more space to spread out and focus on all our categories. We're excited for the opportunity and visibility."

The Ferreiras have expanded the Country House floor space at the current location four times, Bob says, adding more showrooms for the furniture. They also offer a wide array of fabrics, carpets, window treatments, bedding, pillows, wallpaper, lamps, dishes and other home accessories. While the current space isn't exactly cramped, one could definitely call it cozy. As Arlene leads the way around the store, pointing out custom-made tables with matching chairs, along with couches, lamps, mirrors and table settings, it's clear that expansion will do the business – and the customers – some good.

Bob explains that it made sense for them to buy the new space to expand the interior design portion of the business, which Kim and Lisa oversee. "If we didn't have our two daughters [working with us], we wouldn't be here," he says.

Arlene says that their daughters, as interior designers, "picked up a large portion of our business, which has expanded.

"They will carry on the business," Arlene adds. "But we're not ready to retire yet... I don't see that happening anytime soon. We love this, and we all have fun with it."

While a grand opening date for the new location has not yet been set, the Ferreiras hope to open up shop in early summer.

No matter what, the Ferreiras plan to continue running Country House, in both locations, as "a one-stop shop" for home furnishings. Says Arlene, "We can do everything for your home right here."

For more information, visit the Country House Furniture and Interiors store at 818 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), Cohasset, call 781-383-1832, or visit them on the web at www.countryhousecohasset.com. Stay tuned for more news on the new location's opening.

Country living

Offering customers traditional home furnishings with a casual, elegant look, Country Home Furniture and Interiors is one of Cohasset's oldest-run family businesses and is located along Route 3A. Now, the Ferreira family plans to expand their reach across the street— to the barn that most recently housed Joseph's Hardware. The Ferreiras offer a glimpse into their brand new space.

One of the store's current showrooms features a large variety of furniture and fittings.

View the tall ships

Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

SPECIAL REPORT

Celebrity chef on the common

Gordon Ramsay films in Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Celebrity chef Gordon Ramsay has brought his "Kitchen Nightmares" to the South Shore. This week, Ramsay has been filming an episode of his restaurant makeover reality show at Barefoot Bob's in Hull.

Many Cohasseters were not aware, however, that the famously caustic chef would be stopping by the common on Wednesday afternoon. The Mariner learned of this during a phone conversation with Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who said there was a restaurant makeover event happening on the common that day.

Under deadline in the office and unable to hit the street to investigate, we did what most hard-hitting journalists would do: we posted a question to Facebook. We figured that one of our friends would be on or near the common and could be our eyes and ears.

We were in luck.

Comments poured in immediately. Barbara Rhind told the Mariner that she heard Ramsay was in town. Chrissy Sladen McCormack volunteered, "I'll be your detective." McCormack headed to the common, updating Facebook from her phone as she observed the scene.

She first reported seeing a large gathering near Town Hall.

"Ok, so I am here and there is a big spot in front of the church blocked off as if a bus were to arrive and there are a number of people 'waiting,'" McCormack wrote. "I just talked to my husband who works at the town hall in Weymouth, and supposedly Gordon is there at 5:00, so I will see if I can ask one of these people who are all 'dressed for the occasion.'"

As the minutes passed, McCormack said that she was asked to sign a release prohibiting her to take any photos. She also updated Facebook the moment cameras arrived: "Lots of camera crews now. No Gordon yet. Excitement building."

Commenters went back and forth asking if anyone could provide a photo. McCormack and others in attendance later filled the Mariner in on exactly what went down on the common.

"So the story is that they filmed at Barefoot Bob's already, today they were in Weymouth and Cohasset and I am sure other places," McCormack wrote Wednesday night. "I watched the whole thing unfold." She added that there were around 30 people on the common who all had to sign a release agreeing not to take photographs; the folks in attendance were also photographed by the film crew, "which they did to me," said McCormack.

"Then the Barefoot Bob's truck pulled up and had the staff hand out new 'grand reopening' menus and clam chowder, which was all being filmed. Then Gordon Ramsay pulled up and more filming took place. Anyone that even came near the common had to sign a release or stay away. I left after a bit, but it was quite interesting. I did notice one guy taking pictures, but he was in their staff. They will be doing that all around the South Shore this week."

Trish Morse wrote on our Facebook wall that she was there as well.

"They were handing out bowls of their new clam chowder with pancetta and then handed out samples of fish and chips," Morse said. "Gordon Ramsay was there in the truck doing the cooking and handing food out through the window. He came out afterwards and met people and was very gracious. Beautiful night on the Cohasset common for it. Tonight is the night that they 'redo' the restaurant over night.... so stop by tomorrow [Thursday] and see how different it looks. My understanding is that this will be the first show of the new season. Don't know when it will air."

Rhind said that she plans to attend Barefoot Bob's relaunch.

"Just had to print out a release form — can't wear white, bright colors, patterns, etc.," Rhind reported on Facebook. "No cell phones, or any cameras or recording devices, etc.— all to be expected... Really looking forward to the big re-launch," she added. "My one and only experience at the restaurant wasn't good and I [have] never gone back ... giving them another shot... LOVE Gordon Ramsay and ALL of his shows, so hoping he can boost their business and maybe bring in some more for the rest of the town. Will report back this weekend!"

The Mariner would like to thank our team of "detectives" who did some good old-fashioned shoe-leather reporting on Wednesday.

"Kitchen Nightmares" airs at 8 p.m. Fridays on Fox. A date when the episode featuring Barefoot Bob's will be shown has not been announced.

Meet the Candidates

SELECTMAN

Ted Carr

Edwin G. "Ted" Carr, 44, lives at 88 South Main St., with his wife, Tanya Bodell Carr, and their three children, E. Clayton Carr, Carrington, and Clarissa. They have lived in town for nine years.

Education: St. Sebastian's Catholic High School, Cornell College, Iowa (B.A. Political Science), University of Salamanca, Spain (Spanish), Harvard University – John F. Kennedy School of Government (M.A. Public Policy).

Occupation: Consultant on International Business Strategy.

Civic/municipal experience: Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, having served as a member of the Board for six years. Member of Deer Hill School Council. Former member of Governor Patrick's economic development team, as Executive Director of the Massachusetts Office of International Trade and Investment (MOITI). Former Chief of Staff for the Executive Office of Housing and Economic Development for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the agency to which MOITI reports. Served as a member of the Clinton Administration for eight years in the federal government in various capacities focused on economic development. Serves as a member of the Board of Directors of the Kennedy-Donovan Center (KDC).

Quality you most admire: The care and compassion that Cohasset citizens have for family, neighbors and their community.

Favorite quote: "Do not be afraid to go out on a limb because that is where the fruit is."

What can you laugh at most about yourself? Local editorial cartoons that make me look like Winston Churchill.

Fun fact: I've visited every one of the 50 states in the US and 40 Countries.

Voters' biggest concern: Voters in Cohasset want to elect competent, well-qualified public leaders who will work hard, be honest and support the best interests of the town.

Reason for seeking office: I am running for re-election because I believe my 20 years of public sector management experience at state, Federal and municipal levels allows me to make unique contributions to this town. I have been instrumental in obtaining nearly $1 million in state grants and championed new initiatives that will have long-lasting, positive impacts on Cohasset residents. Working collaboratively, we have begun to fix key issues facing the town. I would like to see through the positive changes we have begun to ensure we stay on track to achieve lower taxes, fiscal responsibility, and efficient and effective town operations.

Martha Gjesteby

Martha Gjesteby, 83, lives at 81 Old Pasture Road, with her husband Arne. They have four adult children, Erik, Ingrid, Nils, and Rolf. The Gjestebys have lived in Cohasset for 51 years.

Education: Simmons College, B.S. Chemistry/Physics

Occupation: formerly employed at Harvard Public Health. Currently serve as Clerk of a family business.

Civic/municipal experience: I served the town as a Selectman for 9 years, School committee 6 years, Planning Board 2 years. Capital Budget, 5 years; also the Tri-Town commission, Joint Regional Transportation committee and the Citizens' Advisory commission to study the restoration of the Old Colony /Railroad. State level appointments: past member Governor's local advisory council, VP Mass Selectmen's Association, Metropolitan Area Planning Council (4 years as treasurer and 2 years secretary – served on the council for 10years). Civil associations: former director of the Cohasset Community Center, Cohasset Community Garden Club board members, past president of the Cohasset Historical Society.

Quality you most admire: Honesty, truthfulness and willing to compromise on issues.

Favorite quote: "It is better to give than to receive." This was my mother's maxim and I have tried to live my life by it.

What can you laugh at most about yourself? I'm always telling people how to eat good food, even giving out lists and driving them crazy.

Fun fact: My grandfather worked for Al Landon, the Republican nominee who ran against Roosevelt. My great uncle worked for James Michael Curley.

Voters' biggest concern: Water and Sewer and how to run the plant efficiently, and the general instability of town government over the last six years. We have had two town managers and two acting town managers.

Reason for seeking office: No office should go unchallenged. I bring some history and new ideas to make government more efficient and open to the public.

PLANNING BOARD ASSOCIATE

Michael J. Dickey

Michael James Dickey, 49, lives at 216 South Main St. with his wife, Paula. They have two children, two Matthew and Evelyn. They have lived in town for seven years.

Education: B.A. (English), J.D., M.B.A., LL.M. (Banking Law)

Occupation: SVP & Sr. Counsel, RBS Citizens, N.A.

Civic/municipal experience: No prior Civic or Municipal experience.

Quality you most admire: Grace and good humor under pressure.

Favorite quote: "The great enemy of clear language is insincerity. When there is a gap between one's real and one's declared aims, one turns, as it were, instinctively to long words and exhausted idioms, like a cuttlefish squirting out ink." - George Orwell

What can you laugh at most about yourself? Invariably, just as I'm starting to "squirt out ink," one or both of my kids will puncture my bubble.

Fun fact: I, along with 2 others, sailed across the Atlantic in a 28 foot boat – took 27 days.

Voters' biggest concern: The issue that appears to be of paramount concern is how to manage the inevitable changes Cohasset will face going forward in a way which will preserve Cohasset's essential character and sense of place.

Reason for seeking office: Cohasset is a great place to live and raise a family; I plan on living here for a long time. I want to take a more active role in the town's life and give something back to my community. Nobody knows exactly what the future will hold, but we do know Cohasset will continue to grow and change. I feel the Planning Board is a venue where I can help guide change and hopefully ensure Cohasset remains true to itself. In addition, given my legal training and expertise, the Planning Board is a good fit for my skill set.

Editor's note: Roger Lowe, who is also running for the Planning Board Associate position, declined to participate in the candidate profiles.

ASSESSORS

Debra Krupczak

Debra Krupczak, 57, lives at 71 Aaron River Road, with her husband, Paul They have three children, Brian, Jared and Alison. They have lived in town for 32 years.

Education: B.S. Management/Accounting University of Massachusetts, Boston; Massachusetts Accredited Assessor No. 914

Occupation: Assessor/Appraiser Town of Rockland.

Civic/municipal experience: I have worked as an assessing professional for the past nineteen years. Seventeen as the Assistant Assessor for the Town of Cohasset and the past two as the Assessor/Appraiser for the Town of Rockland. I serve the Town of Cohasset as the Election Warden and assist at Town Meeting.

Quality you most admire: Integrity.

Favorite quote: "Treat others as you would like to be treated."

What can you laugh at most about yourself? I love to sing but can't carry a tune.

Fun fact: I enjoy cruising. My goal is to visit every Caribbean island.

Voters' biggest concern: Voters want good fiscal management and fair and equitable assessments. They want to know everyone is paying their fair share.

Reason for seeking office: I am running for the Board of Assessors for the opportunity to serve my community. My nineteen years experience in assessment administration makes me uniquely qualified to serve on the Board of Assessors. I have no hidden agenda and no special interest group supporting me. I want to share my knowledge and help ensure fair and equitable assessments for all taxpayers. For experienced leadership, please cast your vote for Debra Krupczak for the Board of Assessors on Saturday, May 19.

Thomas A. Powers

Thomas A. Powers, 53, lives at 55 Hobart Lane, with his wife, Christine. They have three sons, Thomas Jr., Jeffrey and Michael. They have lived in town for 14 years.

Education: BA, University of Hartford.

Occupation: Commercial Real Estate Entrepreneur, Investor, Developer, Broker/Dealer Representative, Financial Consultant.

Civic/municipal experience: Original member of the Cohasset Economic Development Committee that created the Cohasset Transportation Overlay District where the Old Colony Square development is located. Involved in drafting and obtaining approval for the Cohasset Route 3A Commercial Parking By-Law Modification. Member of the Cohasset Soccer Club Board of Directors, past Coastal Stars Board of Directors member, current and/or past Cohasset youth lacrosse, hockey, baseball and hockey coach.

Quality you most admire: Commitment and accountability. Saying what you do and doing what you say. There are a few people out there who like to hear themselves talk and I appreciate those who commit to do what they say – on all levels.

Favorite quote: "Then you shall know the truth, and the truth will set you free" - John 8:32

What can you laugh at most about yourself: As I get older, I try not to take life as seriously as I use to.

Fun fact: As a high school athlete I was an All American lacrosse player. Sports taught me a great deal about living my life: winning, losing, falling down and getting up, never quitting or giving up, meeting new players and friends, and above all, appreciating the moment at hand, because it always passes.

Voters' biggest concern: The biggest concern I hear from residents is that their real estate taxes continue to increase and the level of town services and/or the range of town services seems to diminish. For some of those living on fixed incomes, living and remaining in Cohasset is a challenge.

Reason for seeking office: I have always been involved in my children's sports activities as a coach and as I live here in Cohasset and appreciate all that the town has to offer. I come to the same conclusion – if you can help out – you should? The open seat on the Board of Assessors is a good point of entry for me personally as I have a commercial/residential real estate background and I can provide transparency, communication, fairness and progressive thinking. I understand the importance of values, location and budgets and when I was asked if I would be interested in the position – I said yes. This is just another way of giving back and helping out in your community.

OUR VIEW

Public records

Is this Cohasset, USA or Cohasset, Russia?

While the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski talk a lot about open government and transparency – their rhetoric has amounted to just a lot of hot air when it comes to easy, open access to public records at their office.

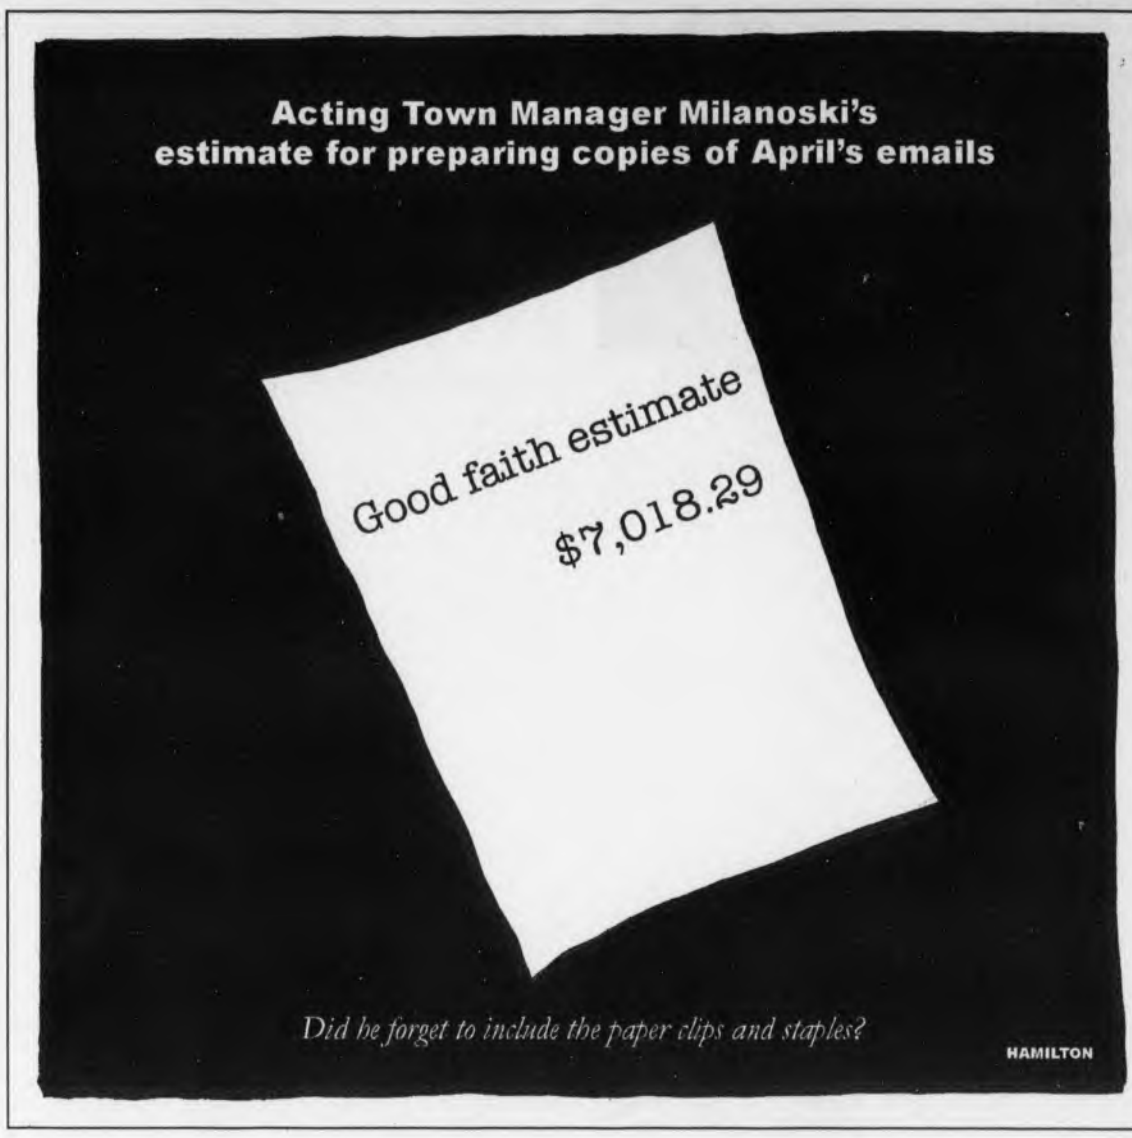
For the record, all correspondence and documents whether via US Postal Service, email, fax or even "texted" that are made or received by a government entity or employee are presumed to be public. The state Public Records Law allows for certain exemptions but the burden falls on the custodian of those records to show how that exemption applies and why the document should be withheld.

The Cohasset Mariner asked to inspect or have copies of all emails generated or received by the Board of Selectmen's Office from April 1 to May 1.

The response received along with an estimated bill of more than $7,000 stated there were 11,286 pages of emails during that month alone.

In our weekly efforts to view the correspondence packet at Town Hall during that same time period – there was not a single email included. It should be noted that in the past few months, the availability of the weekly packet of correspondence has been sporadic at best. The Mariner has recently had to make multiple trips to Town Hall and make multiple requests to view the correspondence in any given week. Hence, the Mariner made the public records request.

Requirements of the Public Records Law are ongoing despite staffing changes at Town Hall. The Mariner believes missing several weeks or months of logging in, numbering, and maintaining a public records system for all documents that should include emails while Milanoski settles into his new job could complicate accessibility.



What is very disturbing is that "government by email" has become the norm. Emails apparently outnumber the old-fashioned, traditional method of correspondence by the thousands.

By not being allowed – as is the public's right – to inspect emails in an easily accessible way, we are being shut out of the process and we are being denied access to unfiltered information.

So where do we go from here? The Mariner is seeking legal remedy in response to its request for emails.

Going forward, we have asked Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr and Milanoski to include all emails in the weekly correspondence packet that should be available to anyone as a routine matter. Another solution would be a public computer where citizens could view email and printout copies that they want. Also, each commission and committee should maintain a correspondence folder that includes emails, which is readily available to any citizen.

And that information should be provided at a reasonable cost, if any at all, not at some inflated rate designed to shut the public out of its government. After all, this is Cohasset, USA.

Petition affort applauded

BRYAN TAYLOR BALDWIN

As a town resident of 17 years, the takeaway for me from the discussion on Article 21 at Annual Town Meeting, the citizen's petition to restructure the Sewer and Water Commissions, is that we all owe many thanks to Karen Quigley and her fellow proponents for appropriately raising public awareness of town governance issues.

Countless hours of dialogue have taken place in numerous public forums over the past several months exploring both the merits and costs of the proposed alternative organizational structure for these important institutions. Although the Board of Selectmen, Advisory, Capital Budget, the respective Commissions, and ultimately Town Meeting did not support Article 21, all residents are better for the inspection of both Commissions in response to the citizen's petition. For that, the petition effort was a resounding success!

Fortunately for all of us, the Sewer Commission has not required supplemental funding from the Town within the past decade, and has not required an increase in rates in the past six years – while expenses continually increased over that period. The capacity of the wastewater treatment plant was significantly increased two years ago, and a major capital expansion project was recently completed with a projected funding surplus in excess of $1 million.

In spite of these demonstrated positive results I welcome the recent scrutiny placed upon the Commission. I have spent the last nine months as the Vice Chair of the Board of Sewer Commissioners, and in that capacity I must attest that yes there is opportunity for self-improvement of our administrative operations. Although great progress has been made in Town-wide financial reporting, we will continue to run our own independent accounting as a means of checks-and-balances against other departments responsible for our billings, betterment collections, and debt service. We will continue to improve distribution of financial data to solicit review and comment. We will continue to grow retained earnings to fund future capital expenditures that we will encounter. The Sewer Commission has not been nor will be immune to human error, so we will all benefit from enhanced risk management and greater transparency.

As elected officials, your Sewer Commission diligently pursues its fiduciary responsibility for the interests of our ratepayers and all town residents at large in the management of the Town's municipal waste water system. If we cannot earn the citizen's trust by demonstrating efficient and effective management of those interests, then the residents should absolutely demand revisiting the structure of the Commission. Hold us to task as you would any board, department, or committee; all town officials should be accountable for their actions.

The current state of "all-hands-on-deck" at Town Hall orchestrated by the Town Manager has every elected and appointed official as well as our hard-working staff pursing cost reduction opportunities and improvement of business practices across the board. Central to this action is the overwhelming increase in communication and cooperation across departments, committees, and commissions. The past year has not been an easy time for anyone as we dig into sometimes unpleasant history, especially surrounding financial accounting, while trying to remain objective and unemotional in making corrections for past performance. Those that are not intimately involved in town government should know that those of us that are yearn to close the books on FY12 as of June 30, and to solely focus forward on the future with an approved balanced budget for FY13. Thank you for your support.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Voters urged to table water article

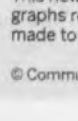
This past Saturday the citizens of Cohasset met to practice the purest form of American democracy – the New England Town Meeting. This Monday the town will meet again to consider amongst other issues – the future of the Water Department.

American democracy is based upon an informed citizenry. Yet on water – this has not been the case.

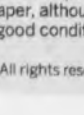
The Chairman of the Water Commission promised that the contract would be the most vetted in town history. However, on Monday – there will be no contract for the voters at town meeting to vet.

Most voters will have little idea what they will be voting on. The bids were opened on Thursday – conveniently after the Mariner went to print. If voters wanted to view the bids at Town Hall – one must remember that it closes at midday on Friday – it is also closed on Saturday and on Monday – most have to work.

Is this the transparency we were promised? As most in Town know, since my appointment last June, I have questioned the process associated with the contract. Whether coincidence or not by coincidence – let's look at the record – the town manager who questioned the water contract was removed for "no cause," the town employees with engineering backgrounds who were asked to oversee the process are no longer employed, the department set up to manage all public works functions has been dismantled, the understanding if not promise by the Chairman of the Board that town meeting would decide all issues including the contract has evaporated, the bids were opened after the Mariner's publication deadline and the voters at town meeting have little or no time to review the bids before they are expected to vote on Monday. This is not transparency – this is not good government and this is not something that Cohasset voters should tolerate.



This past Saturday, I listened to many officials tell town meeting that they discuss governance issue ad nauseam. I heard these officials talk about other communities and best practices. I heard these same officials proclaim elected officials can better safeguard the public than appointed ones. Well, at town meeting every citizen is an elected public official. As public officials, voters at town meeting should demand the information needed to make an informed decision. As to best practices, in my last community – major contracts were finalized before they were brought to town meeting.



On Monday, although I have many concerns – I am not asking that town meeting vote the article down – but I am asking that the water article be tabled until a proposed contract is brought before the voters – so town meeting will be able to truly consider the issue.

Opposed to CPC windows grant

HOWIE ALTHOLTZ

Much has been said about First Parish Church request for Town Money to fix their windows. First they are 'original', now not really (updated in 1950s -'maintenance' prohibited under the CPA). Then it's on the National register of historic places, not really ('in the district' like other properties on common). Then the Attorney General's office supports this. No, won't touch it. Then need costly 'museum quality reproduction', not really, already have a plastic steeple housing their cell tower.

Selectmen support the grant. Advisory Committee opposes it as Privately Owned property. They say, 'next it will be the roof then the gutters'... CPC member Jenkins opposes it as a Slippery Slope, ' every other religious institution otherwise qualified will be in line'. The CPC Chair admits it would be difficult to say no... bring 'em on.

CPC is an extra tax some say circumvents Prop 2-1/2. Any 'state match' is our money too. Marginal projects on shaky legal ground hurt a well-intended program and put the town at risk.

Yes it's beautiful, and historic. It's just not legal under the Massachusetts Constitution.

Forget the lawyers, judge yourself: No grant or use of public money shall be made for purpose of maintaining or aiding any church, religious denomination...

There is no gray and no exemptions. And no one has identified any legal authority even suggesting one.

Let's preserve American values of separation of church and state, the integrity of this program, and Cohasset's long history of avoiding these projects. This would be a first for Cohasset and a terrible precedent.

Their main argument is that a handful of others have done it. Someone else bending the rules or breaking the law is not an argument. Try that on a cop next time you're pulled over.

In a brief opinion issued months after the CPC decision was made, town counsel mentions one case dealing with the US Constitution and a liquor license. No law on the Massachusetts Constitution. At Saturday's town meeting Selectman Koed offered, 'just because we've paid for an opinion, doesn't mean we need to follow it'. Common sense is plenty sufficient here.

Rather than a voting on a request, the CPC have become aggressive advocates, calling into question their ability to be objective. Passion replacing judgment, backfilling details, and scrambling to support a poorly thought out decision with after the fact opinions, etc. That can lead to structural defects such as Open Meeting problems, possible inattention to Conflicts rules, etc.

Slippery Slope fears are right. The core of their own argument is: someone else did it. Others will follow that theme both here in town, and around the state for churches, synagogues, mosques, etc. (under CPC, we kick in for other towns too).

Cohasset has a severe money shortage and major infrastructure issues.

The church gets plenty of town benefits. And have other resources: National Unitarian loan program for repair and renovation; a $1.7 million Parish house across the street with lots of equity; Congregants; 100 percent of the revenue from cell tower, etc.

First Parish website cites that separation and the end of town money (1824). This would break a 188-year contract. Suddenly there's government money on the table and no one can live without it?

These cases are percolating around the country involving leading national civil rights authorities like the American Civil Liberties Union and the American United for Separation of Church & State, which found CPC grant improper under Mass law.

Talk of federal grants and the old North Church are a distraction. The weight of authority from Jefferson to Franklin, and a long line of Supreme Court justices cautions against this. So do the underlying principals in every case cited by AU.

The constitution is clear. Judge for yourself and review all the legal opinions and other info by emailing me howie02025@comcast.net

Does it seem right to have government fixing the windows of a privately owned church?

Don't compromise core principles. Let's table this by voting no, step back and get it done the way it has for 300 years: Friends and congregants. Not government. I will be the first to contribute to that effort.

Keep commenting in line, online

(Editor's note: a variation of this column ran in October 2010 but is as relevant today as it was then).

Rules for online commenting (from our online 'Pool Rules')

- Keep it clean.
- Stay on topic.
- Be honest and accurate.
- No personal attacks. Don't bash anyone based on their race, creed, heritage, or sexual orientation.
- Don't say anything here you wouldn't say in front of your mother at the dinner table.
- Use the 'Report Abuse' button when you spot a rule violation. (Don't report comments just because you disagree.)

Among other very important freedoms, the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution ensures the right to free speech and freedoms for the press that allows for the exchange of ideas and opinions. Those values have been a cornerstone for our American society since the days of the Founding Fathers.

As the media takes up space in cyberspace, we've been tested by an online community that has the ability to anonymously comment on stories, blogs, etc. Don't get me wrong, we want people to comment on stories. If it were as simple as people weighing in on various topics of interest and keeping the discussion civil and respectful, it wouldn't be an issue at all.

But some people are downright nasty and disrespectful. Some even lie, or distort the truth so much it becomes an issue of libel. While freedom of speech does exist, there are laws to protect people from being wrongly accused of something, or from being personally attacked so that it causes harm.

While we absolutely want and seek reader feedback and comments, allowing people to take potentially libelous and harmful shots at town officials, or anyone for that matter, anonymously makes many in the industry cringe.

We require people sending letters to the editor to provide their name, address and phone number for verification of the letter. We value letters greatly because those willing to provide their real name as well as other personal information have credibility. That doesn't mean we run every letter. Some letters include facts that are questionable and can't be verified and some cross the line of libel or poor taste.

Those kinds of rules and restrictions haven't all found their way to the World Wide Web, and maybe never will. Policing letters is a little different than policing everything being said – good or bad – on the Internet. So, commenting online is still a bit of a free-for-all. We have some safeguards in place, including minimal registration requirements and a function for readers to report abuses. We don't require people to use their real names, but if necessary we have the ability to ban a commenter from posting comments from that computer. And if someone reports an abusive comment, we have the ability to remove that comment or disable the commenting function for a particular story.

But we don't remove every comment we get an abuse report for. Some people hit the button simply because they don't agree with a comment. Unless it's profane, libelous or in such bad taste that it would make a reasonable person cringe, we want to keep the discussion going. And quite often, it is our readers who help us keep the conversation on track and aboveboard by responding to an abusive commenter.

Our goal for online comments is to allow for a lively community discussion on a variety of topics. It's there for you, so we ask that you use it wisely and often.

Questions addressed about CPC grant for church windows

RUSS BONETTI

I would like to address some of the questions that have been raised concerning the recent decision by the Community Preservation Committee to recommend a grant of $65,000 to restore the windows in the Meetinghouse, which houses First Parish church.

We are restoring plain glass windows. The windows will still have the old "wavy" glass, and any replacement glass will have to have the same look. The individual panes will be cataloged, photographed, and place back in their original places.

When we were initially approached by the church in January, our first question was whether CPC monies could be used for work on a church. Upon checking with the CPC at the State level, we found that over two dozen towns have used CPC money for the restoration of churches through out the state. Further investigation revealed that CPC as well as federal funds have been used in the restoration of historic churches. The Old North Church and Trinity church in Boston received federal money for restoration work. In Quincy, the United First Parish Church (also known as the Church of the Presidents), used both CPC ($200K) and a grant from Save America's Treasures, which is administered by the National Park Service in the Department of the Interior.

Speaking about the church Rev. Sheldon Bennett said: "It is one of a kind. It's a remarkable historical site as well as a historic congregation. There's a lot of history here, it's an architecturally historical building. It's right in the town center, it's an icon for the city." Sound familiar?

The Meetinghouse is the crown jewel of Cohasset common. It's on the Town seal. It's eligible for placement on the National Register of Historic Places. It's what gives the commons the look of what people conjure up when they think of small New England villages. If this was 1812, Town Meeting would be held there. Duxbury, Hingham, Dennis, Bridgewater, Easton, Nantucket, and many other towns have used CPC money to restore historically significant church buildings. Most of these grants involved window restoration. In some cases (Nantucket in particular), the windows that were restored depicted religious themes. We are restoring plain glass windows. The windows will still have the old "wavy" glass, and any replacement glass will have to have the same look. The individual panes will be cataloged, photographed, and place back in their original places.

A group called Americans United for the Separation of Church and State raised the question of whether this grant is a violation of the First Amendment, and the Massachusetts constitution. Town Counsel has addressed this issue. Responding to the CPCs' inquiry about this, Town Counsel has written; "We have reviewed the correspondence and researched this issue and have located no legal authority supporting the claim that funding of the project pursuant to the CPA would violate the Establishment Clouse of the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution or Article XVIII, section 2 of the Article of Amendment to the Massachusetts Constitution. The cases cited in the correspondence are factually distinguishable from the facts involved here. None involve funding of preservation, rehabilitation or restoration of an historic resource, nor funding pursuant to the CPA.

It has been held that a "statute does not offend the establishment clause so long as it has a secular purpose, it's principal or primary effect neither advances nor inhibits religion, and it does not foster an excessive government entanglement with religion...."

We have located no legal authority supporting the claim the CPA funding of preservation, rehabilitation or restoration of an historic resource such as the Meeting House would violate this standard."

Further, Ted Carr of the BOS contacted the Attorney General's office and received the same response. This grant is an acceptable use of CPA funding. Michael Steinitz, from Massachusetts Historical Commission (a state agency) has stated that 20 percent of the projects that Mass Historical has funded with are churches, mostly for exterior uses.

First Parish allows the use of the building to various groups at no charge. The concerts on the common in the summer use the church's' electricity, again at no charge. After the filming of The Witches of Eastwick, First Parish received $25,000 from Warner Brothers. Though the church could have used that money for a variety of purpose, they used the money to develop a shelter for people in need. They have spent a considerable amount of money maintaining the building, and preserving it.

Questions have been raised about the age of the windows. The CPC originally thought the windows were original. The church has since approached the CPC in the spirit of full disclosure, noting that some windows had been restored in 1950. CPC adheres to Department of the Interior guidelines for historic preservation. According to those guidelines, anything over 50 years old is considered "antique". According to Mason Cook, who is going to do the restoration work, the restored windows should last at least 60 years, if not a lot longer. Mason has also done work for the Historical Society properties in town, as well as being involved in the restoration of the Louis Comfort Tiffany windows in the above mentioned Nantucket project. This will be a restoration project of the highest order. The CPC will be requiring a Historical Preservation Restriction be placed on the building to protect the architectural, and historic qualities of the building. This building is the grand old lady of Cohasset, and keeping it in good condition benefits us all.

Questions have also been raised regarding CPC funds being used on privately owned property. To date, Cohasset CPC has made grants in excess of $650,000 for restoration of properties owned by the Cohasset Historical Society, a private organization. In total, CPC has funded historic projects in excess of $2,500,000.

Some people feel that CPC money should be used for town needs. They have been. The Beechwood Ball Park, the playing fields on South Main St, Beechwood, and Central cemeteries, Town Hall restoration, the preservation of the old Town records have all used CPC money. The Town Clock, which will be on the agenda at Mondays's Town Meeting, will undergo a restoration of its four faces. The library, the pond on the common, field drainage for the Middle/High School playing fields, improvements to the elder housing properties, the culvert under Border Street at Parker Avenue, the Hagerty house, and the boathouse at Mariners Park, as well as numerous studies have all been funded by CPC grant proposals. Well in over $1,000,000 have been used on Town properties.

CPC funds of almost $700,000 have been used to help acquire open space. Also on Monday's meeting will be a proposal to grant $100,000 to acquire a Conservation Restriction on a 34-acre plus parcel of land that the Cohasset Conservation Trust is acquiring. This is yet another way that CPC money is spent for projects that benefit everyone in town.

CPC funds are a combination of a 1.5 percent tax levy on real estate. The first $100K of valuation is exempted. There is a match from the State that this year will be approximately 25 percent. The State funds come from a fee levied on recording fees at the Registry of Deeds. The CPC money is subject to strict guidelines set by the State. CPC funds can only be used for Historic Preservation, Affordable housing, Open Space acquisition, and Recreational uses.

The CPC has made its grant proposals after careful consideration, and we take our charge seriously. We look forward to helping fund various projects throughout town. We hope you will support our efforts as well.

Russell Bonetti, of Parker Avenue, is chairman of the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee.

DEADLINE IS JUNE 1

Sister Cities have new exchange project

The towns of Scituate and Sucy-en-Brie, sister cities since March 2011, announce an exchange program called "L'été indien" (Indian Summer) for senior residents age 55 and older of Sucy-en-Brie, Scituate, and surrounding towns. Cohasset already has a close connection with Sucy-en-Brie because of the joint CHS/SHS French exchange program with students of English at the Lycée Christophe Colomb. There has been a strong relationship among the three towns for the last eight years. The teachers involved with the high school program hope that senior residents in Scituate and Cohasset will take advantage of this opportunity to interact with interested residents in Sucy-en-Brie, a town of 25,000 residents 17 kilometers from Paris.

This new collaboration will bring residents of Sucy-en-Brie to the South Shore between Sept. 16 and Sept. 25. They will be hosted by residents of Scituate, Cohasset and other neighboring towns. The French visitors will explore the South Shore, make excursions to Boston, and, perhaps, see New York. In April the American host families will participate in a reciprocal experience in France.

If interested in taking part in this experience, contact Patricia Jacquart at pjacquart@scit.org or Beth Marat at bmarat@cohassetk12.org as soon as possible. The goal of the exchange is to provide South Shore residents a relatively inexpensive opportunity to become acquainted with French citizens and to visit one of the most beautiful regions in the world. The deadline to sign up is June 1.

Town Meeting Special

What passed, what didn't, and what's next

MEETING

(OPEB) liability (the town currently has a $32 mil. liability);

• The Sewer Enterprise Fund fiscal 2013 budget;

• And more.

The aforementioned articles passed with nary a nay; however, when it came time to consider some major changes in town, the majority of voters proved reluctant.

No new taxes

Officials were hungry for the revenue additional taxes would provide, but voters showed no appetite for a meals or hotel local option tax.

"The town needs to start thinking of ways to collect revenue," said Advisory Committee member Chris Blackburn. "I urge the town to think of this from a fiscal management standpoint."

Blackburn asked Town Meeting if folks had been to a restaurant in Hingham recently, a town that has enacted the local options meal tax. "Did you stop going there two years ago because Hingham implemented the tax? The answer is probably no."

Still, Town Meeting strongly opposed the proposed taxes in Cohasset, along with the stabilization fund that would have appropriated the collected tax monies to facility maintenance of town buildings. Despite being told by officials that the taxes could bring in an additional revenue stream of $200,000 to the town annually, many voters stated that they felt it was unfair to burden small business owners or discourage out-of-towners from frequenting Cohasset eateries and inns.

Atlantica owner Joe Campbell stepped up to the microphone more than once to explain how the hospitality and restaurant industries are struggling; he told voters that the hotel tax in particular would affect only two businesses in town and was therefore unfair.

"The end user is paying more," said Campbell. "As a business owner trying to be competitive with other places, do I simply pass that tax along [to customers] or eat some of that myself?" He added that he felt the taxes were better suited for "tourist trap" towns for out-of-state residents vacationing on the Cape or in Boston, not for "a Marshfield person who wants to eat at the Old Salt House."

Campbell said that the additional meals tax might seem incremental, but would add up to a rather hefty amount for weddings and other catered events.

"At first glance, it doesn't seem like a lot— 75 cents for a $100 meal," said Campbell. "But at weddings, the end user will pay over $150 more."

Ray Kasperowicz asked if any of the town officials had spoken to any of the small business owners in town to see how they felt about the additional taxes, which would mean more paperwork for them. Selectmen chair Ted Carr later said that he had spoken to the owner of the Red Lion Inn to ask how business is and learned that things were going well on the restaurant side. "I had the conversation to make my own decision to see how it would affect the local economy," said Carr. "What I based my decision on was that this is a worthwhile investment, something I'm willing to make an investment for."

Also in support of the taxes, Advisory member Andrew Willard spoke to Town Meeting as a citizen, explaining that as a frequent business traveler, he notices several taxes on his bill all the time. "For the typical traveler, it's not seen as a burden to anyone who stays in hotels," said Willard. "It's a consumption tax; I have no issue with this."

Two of the three tax articles had contested votes; article 16, for the stabilization fund, was so close between the "yays" and "nays" that it required a hand count, while the moderator asked Town Meeting to repeat their votes for article 18, the meals tax. Article 17 for the hotel tax, however, was voted down in a resounding "nay."

Citizens' petition

The only other article that lost out was the citizens' petition to restructure the water and sewer departments by hiring a full-time public works supervisor to oversee both utilities and report to the Town Manager, adding part-time clerical support staff, and changing the elected sewer and water commissions to appointed advisory boards. These changes would have required a Home Rule Petition and revisions of the Town Manager bylaw, among other legal work and studies.

The petition followed recommendations from a 2010 Melanson & Heath audit and a 2004 MMA (Mark Morris Associates) report.

Prior to the Town Meeting vote, the petition failed to garner any support from the town boards that reviewed it; five boards – the selectmen, Capital Budget, Advisory and water and sewer commissions – all voted to reject the petition in the weeks leading up to Town Meeting.

The petition was brought forward by former selectman Karen Quigley, who stressed to Town Meeting that the measure was not "an indictment on any town official; I have great respect for anyone dedicating time to serve on town boards." However, Quigley said the management of the water and sewer departments had been flawed and the town needed to hire a "qualified professional" to oversee both departments.

Officials said that they felt the petition sought to fix problems from the past that had already been corrected.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer said that the petition's proponents "failed to identify what the flaw was" in the management of water and sewer operations. He added that any poor financial reporting in the past was "not the function of the elected commissioners" but had to do with problems in Town Hall.

Sewer Commissioner John Beck echoed his thoughts from previous board meetings, stating that he found the petition to be "an untimely, ill-advised solution to a non-problem."

Water Commissioner Leonora Jenkins warned that if this petition passed and the Special Act of 1886 that created the water enterprise fund were to get abolished, the state's Department of Revenue "would love to

Al Moore, Planning Board
Ralph Perroncello, Cohasset Housing Authority

Article summary and votes

Part one of Town Meeting included 21 warrant articles; all but four articles passed with voice votes. The list in full:

Article 1: Cohasset Financial Management Polices

• What: Asked the town to approve policies that the selectmen had already voted on and implemented. Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said by way of explanation, "We've got the financial management policies which we're talking about today; you're going to see us speaking about a transparent budget process. We're trying to get all the information out to the public so they know fully what's going on. We have an open door policy. Any documentation that's in the board of selectmen's office is available to the public and we make sure everybody gets copies of that."

• The vote: After a few townspeople questioned why Town Meeting should vote to approve something the selectmen are already using, Town Meeting voted to approve the first article, though there were many resounding "nays."

Article 2: Annual Town Report

• What: Asked for a Town Meeting approval of the town's 2011 annual report to file as a permanent record.

• The vote: Passed unanimously.

Article 3: Reports of Committees

• What: The Governance and Advisory committees were the only ones to give reports on the Town Meeting floor.

• The vote: No vote; this article was indefinitely postponed.

Article 4: Unpaid bills

• What: Requested Town Meeting approval of $4,826 from the town's stabilization fund to cover the following: $176 to pay for police detail at a Feb. 24, 2011 Planning Board hearing; $650 to East Coast Electric Recycling; and $4,000 to the MAPC South Shore Regional Services Consortium

• The vote: Roy Fitzsimmons raised the only question here, asking why these bills weren't paid on time; Finance Director Mary Gallagher, who started her position in Cohasset in January, simply responded that she wasn't here, but "these are the only three bills I've received to date from a prior fiscal year." Town Meeting voted unanimously to approve the funds.

Article 5: Transfer of funds to Cohasset Schools from settlement

• What: The school department recovered $500,000 in restitution for damages done to the school floors by a vendor who left a chemical cleaner on for too long, causing the tiles to come up and create a safety hazard, School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro explained. The schools have already received the funds but needed a Town Meeting vote to use the monies to pay for floor repairs.

• The vote: The motion passed unanimously.

Article 6: Rescission of authorized but unissued debt

• What: This matter was indefinitely postponed.

Article 7: New projects or old projects requiring additional funding

• What: Requested voters to agree to reallocate $250,000 from the closed-out Jacobs Meadow culvert repair project to the Bound Brook project on Beechwood Street (see related article for the full story).

• The vote: Despite the revelation that the Jacobs Meadow project was found to be $165,000 overspent, according to the Capital Budget Committee, voters did not raise any questions on the matter. The motion passed unanimously.

Article 8: Supplemental Appropriations for fiscal 2012

• What: This was a clean-up of the current fiscal year budget. Town Meeting was asked to approve $696,856, involving a transfer between various line items. Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore explained that Cohasset started the year in bad financial shape, which is why a spending freeze was enacted in town departments. "It could've been much worse," he said. At $190,000, the police department's overtime contributed a major expense, as did Town Counsel legal services ($100,000).

• The vote: Roy Fitzsimmons wanted to know how the inflation in the PD's overtime budget took place; Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that the matter is partially due to minimum manning requirements with the police union and "unforeseen issues" like injuries that are "outside the chief's control." Town Meeting approved the appropriations unanimously.

Article 9: Operating Budget (FY13)

• What: Town Meeting was asked to OK the town's $34,359,544 operating budget for the next fiscal year, which begins on July 1, 2012. Milanoski gave a detailed presentation of the budget and explained some new headcount he plans to add at Town Hall: a part-time assistant town accountant, DPW equipment operator/truck driver, part-time service coordinator for Meals on Wheels at Elder Affairs, a part-time Elder Affairs secretary, a full-time Director of Project Management and Planning, a full-time Chief Technology Officer that will be shared cost- and duty-wise with the schools (the position was already funded on the school side), and the Assistant Fire Chief and Deputy Police Chief positions that were approved by selectmen last fall but still required a Town Meeting vote. Police Chief Mark DeLuca spoke during this presentation about his desire to keep the police station staffed 24/7 (see related story). Supt. Barbara Cataldo shared how she has been working closely with Milanoski on the school budget for the next fiscal year, which will offer level services for the staff and will be level funded for provisions. She added that she hopes having the new CTO position will enhance the schools' technology and shared that Cohasset High was recently ranked in the top 10 best public high schools in the state by U.S. News. Pescatore then spoke on behalf of Advisory, explaining that the town's budget is level funded: "Not everyone got everything they wanted, but the funds support the greatest need in most cases."

• The vote: Questions were raised about the schools' METCO costs, the scope of the new Director of Project Management position, and whether the police department's budget included funds to staff the station 24/7 (see related story). Ronnie McMorris said that there were a lot of questions on this article because in the warrant's informational summary, it read, "for more information, see the Town Manager's report." However, there was no such report provided to the voters. "Why was such an important piece not mailed to the members of the community?" asked McMorris. Selectmen chair Ted Carr responded that the interim Town Manager, who took the helm in March, was "under a terrific amount of pressure" and was unable to provide a report in time to be added to the warrant. "I take responsibility for not having it there," said Carr. Town Meeting adopted Article 9 unanimously.

Article 10: Stabilization Fund

• What: Asked Town Meeting to appropriate $400,000 for the town's stabilization fund.

• The vote: There was no discussion on this; voters quickly gave the OK.

Article 11: Capital Stabilization Fund

• What: This asked for $499,548 to fund capital expenditures, which would be raised and appropriated from taxation and other town revenues. An unexpended balance of $5,150 was listed here; this money was left-over from the purchase of a thermal imaging camera for the fire department that the Fire Chief was able to purchase for less money than Town Meeting appropriated last year.

• The vote: Town Meeting voted this, too, unanimously and with no discussion.

Article 12: Capital Improvements Budget

• What: Requested $253,000 to pay for $80,000 in improvements to the public safety facility – "Disrepair is a kind word," said Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer – $20,000 for police station security upgrades, $55,000 in additional funding for a town-wide software implementation, $10,000 to replace a fire department thermal imaging camera, $25,000 to replace the fire departments Jaws of Life, and money for new police vehicles: $33,000 apiece for a police frontline cruiser and an unmarked hybrid vehicle for the chief. The article also asked the town to bond, over a three-year period, $66,000 for a new DPW utility truck and $90,000 for a new 77-passenger school bus.

• The vote: After Milanoski explained that he plans to have all town departments go through a full inventory of their vehicle rolling stock – including boats – to determine which vehicles are no longer "street-worthy" and unload the ones that aren't... Town Meeting adopted the motion unanimously.

Article 13: Other Post-Employment Benefits Liability Trust Fund

• What: The town has a reported $32 million unfunded OPEB liability, according to officials. This article sought to set up a trust fund to start chipping away at that cost.

• The vote: Town Meeting had no problem earmarking a special fund to deal with this cost, and no discussion on the matter, either.

Article 14: OPEB Liability Trust Fund

• What: Yes, Articles 13 and 14 shared a title, but the second article had a specific amount listed — $164,000 – to deposit into the trust fund; with Town Meeting approval, $144,000 would be transferred from the town's Health Insurance Stabilization Fund while $20,000 would be raised and appropriated from the FY13 tax levy and other general town revenues. "It's a small amount, but a start," said selectman Paul Carlson. "We must plan on adding more in the future."

• The vote: Town Meeting agreed that this is a need; the motion passed unanimously.

Article 15: Betterment Debt Service Stabilization Trust Fund

• What: Requested Town Meeting vote to establish a trust fund to pay debt service on sewer project borrowings. Carlson said that officials anticipate having available funds to transfer to the trust fund in FY13.

• The vote: Another money matter passed unanimously without discussion.

Article 16: Meals and Hotel Tax Stabilization Fund

• What: This article would have established a trust fund for the monies collected from additional local options taxes on meals and hotels. The fund would have been dedicated to funding building maintenance on town facilities. Ronnie McMorris of the Recreation Commission wanted the fund to also contribute to parks, fields and playgrounds.

• The vote: The matter proved too polarizing for Town Meeting; the fund was voted down. This made the two following articles seem less likely to pass; if they had passed, however, the tax money would have gone toward the town's general fund. The vote was close, however, and required a hand count.

Article 17: Acceptance of Local Option Hotel Tax

• What: This tax, if approved by Town Meeting, would have set a six percent tax rate for hotel rooms in Cohasset over the state's tax starting on July 1.

• The vote: Joe Campbell, manager of the Cohasset Harbor Inn and Atlantica restaurant, argued that the hotel tax would affect only two businesses in town, and was therefore unfair.

Article 18: Acceptance of Local Option Meals Tax

• What: This would have implemented a 0.75 percent tax on restaurant meals (including catered and prepared foods, ready meals and coffee).

• The vote: It was a close one; the moderator asked Town Meeting for a repeat. But the majority of voters showed no appetite for a meals tax.

Article 19: Assessor's Article

• What: This is a standard article that's done every year, Town Moderator Dan Evans explained, asking for Town Meeting approval to accept Section 4 of Chapter 73 of the Acts of 1986 to grant an additional real estate tax exemption of no more than 100 percent.

• The vote: Town Meeting raised no questions and voted the motion through.

Article 20: Sewer Enterprise Fund FY13 Budget

• What: Asked voters to approve the Sewer Commission's $2,965,755 budget, which was approved by both selectmen and Advisory. This is a balanced budget, said Pescatore, and is even showing a "significant surplus at end of the year."

• The vote: Town Meeting approved this unanimously.

Article 21: Citizens' Petition to Reorganize Water & Sewer

• What: The final article of the day took the longest to discuss and debate. The petition, which was signed by 10 residents, asked Town Meeting to approve the restructuring of the water and sewer departments. If approved, A Home Rule Petition would have been filed to appeal the acts that created the elected water/sewer commissions in order to combine these into a single advisory board. The petition also sought to hire a full-time supervisor of the water/sewer plants.

• The vote: After an hour long debate, the vote was a close one; many afterward thought the "nays" were simply louder but were not, in fact, the majority. Some even say that several folks stood to contest the vote, but the Moderator did not acknowledge them because he thought they were standing to leave the meeting. It began in controversy and ended in controversy; the petition that had been rejected by five different town boards was defeated on the Town Meeting floor.

eliminate" the elected commission in order to raise water rates.

Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio, who has said in the past that he was partially in favor of combing the water and sewer boards, said that Town Meeting was not the place to explore this issue. "Changing the commissions' role... needs to be studied in greater detail than here on the floor of Town Meeting," said DeCaprio.

Selectman Fred Koed, who served on the water commission in the nineties during a water crisis, explained that the town gets "reports from consultants all the time," and that they shouldn't always follow the advice outlined in these reports the way the citizens' petition sought to follow recommendations from consultants' reports. Koed also argued that changing the elected commissions to appointed advisory boards could mean that appointed members would be under more political pressure because they would answer to selectmen rather than voters who elected them.

Speaking in support of the petition, Tom Callahan agreed with Quigley that the water and sewer departments should not be overseen by "people who don't do this for a living but volunteer part-time... these are utilities and require expertise."

Throughout the hour-long discussion, more arguments were made for and against the petition; some citizens seemed to be partially in favor of the changes.

Chartis Tebbetts suggested that the town's governance committee, selectmen and town manager should study the petition's recommendations; then, the town could take the issue up again at the next Town Meeting.

"I do think all of the statements in the motions are really quite appropriate," said Tebbetts. "I don't see the passing of Article 21 as anything but assuring ourselves that we're doing something about water-sewer to make them better... We need to have some plan in town; this needs to be addressed."

Tebbetts concluded, "I think of this as a roadmap... We can come back at another Town Meeting with proposals; if we don't like it [then], we can vote it down."

Agnes McCann said that after living in town for over 30 years, "I remain unpersuaded that I need nine different elected officials on three separate boards" to advise on water-sewer matters. She concluded that those who did not want to see the boards change were like children clinging to a "childhood toy — we need to get over it."

After the hour of back-and-forth between the water and sewer commissioners, members of the Advisory and Capital Budget committees, selectmen and citizens both for and against the petition, Town Meeting finally took to a vote after two citizens asked the Town Moderator to cut off the debaters by moving that the Town call the vote to question.

The voice vote sounded close, but the motion was defeated. There will be no new taxes in Cohasset, nor will the water or sewer commissions change from elected to appointed officials.

Quigley said in a phone call that she was disappointed by Town Meeting's outcome.

"I think that it's discouraging that they chose to disregard an option that was a proven viable option," she said, adding that she felt the defeat represented "an inability of the status quo to recognize the system could be run in a different way.

"I think the town government in itself kept arguing in misdirection and confused people," Quigley continued. "Everyone was thinking [the petition was] so complicated, but it wasn't complicated at all. I remain fully convinced that that is the best course action for the town... but I have to respect the vote of Town Meeting."

Next week

Last Saturday's meeting was only part one of Town Meeting; the second half is scheduled for Monday, May 21 at 7 p.m. Day two will pick up where day one left off, tackling articles 22-34. The extra date was added to allow the water commission enough time to review bids that had yet to come in for a new water plant contract.

Bids came in on Thursday, May 17 and were, at press time, going to be discussed later that night at the Board of Selectmen meeting.

May 21 second session

Tackles warrant articles 22-34

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

This year's Annual Town Meeting was broken into two parts: part one took place last Saturday, May 12 from 9:00 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the High School gymnasium. Town Meeting voted on the first 21 articles in the year's warrant, approving town fiscal management polices, the nearly $35 million fiscal year 2013 operating budget, and voting down the articles involving new local option taxes and a citizens' petition to reorganize the town's water and sewer departments (see related story).

Town Meeting, part two, is Monday, May 21 at 7:00 p.m., also in the high school gym. Voters will consider the following articles:

Housekeeping articles:

Article 22: Land and easement transfers for proposed senior center site; housekeeping articles for the $4 million senior center project that Cohasset's Social Service League and Elder Affairs are working toward.

Articles 23-27: Zoning by-law amendments, concerns adding walls and fences to property, changing language in the bylaws to define "home occupation" and "permitted structure," redefines "special permit uses," and asks Town Meeting to approve the new FEMA map for the Flood Plain District.

Article 30: Treat's Pond scoping and feasibility study; Asks Town Meeting to approve $15,000 to study the feasibility of adding a pipe to mitigate flooding at Treats Pond. The funds would be raised and appropriated from the fiscal year 2013 tax levy and town revenues.

Article 31: Mass. General Laws Chapter 91 Liability; concerns the town's liability when the Mass. Dept. of Environmental Protection (DEP) performs work on improving Cohasset bodies of water.

Article 33: Water Enterprise Fund FY13 Budget; standard article asking for Town Meeting to approve the water commission's budget. Town Meeting approved the sewer commission's budget last week.

Article 34: General Bylaw Amendment – Annual Town Meeting; This authorizes the selectmen to set the date for Town Meeting on Dec. 31 of the preceding year, and allows them to pick any date between March and May (Town Meeting typically occurs in April); it could also occur on any day of the week, not just Saturdays.

Hot topics:

Article 28: Community Preservation Committee (CPC); this article is broken up into five different recommendations; one asks for $15,000 of Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds to restore the First Parish Meet House clock (the clock is town-owned), while another motion asks for $65,000 to restore the church's windows, which are owned by First Parish. The window issue has caused a stir in town about whether or not the matter violates the separation of church and state. Boards have been split on the issue, but the selectmen recently voted 3-1 to support the article.

Article 29: Smoking bylaw amendment; The Board of Health has proposed changing the town's smoking bylaw to ban cigarette sales at stores with pharmacies (namely Stop and Shop, Walgreens and CVS) and to ban the sale of e-cigarettes (battery-operated devices that contain nicotine vapors to simulate cigarettes). This article did not garner support from the Advisory Committee or selectmen, who feel that it unfairly targets a few businesses in town and will likely do little to curb smoking.

Article 32: Water Systems Operations Contract; This article, which has drawn plenty of attention and controversy in town, is contingent upon whether the water department receives a bid for a concession contract that's for over five years. The water plant's current contract with American Water ends on June 30. Bids were opened and reviewed on Thursday, May 17 after press time (check online at wickedlocal.com/cohasset for updates). If the water department ends up with a contract for under five years, the matter will not require a Town Meeting vote.

UPDATE

Did CPC trip Open Meeting Law?

Chairman turns in own board to AG's office

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The town's Community Preservation Committee has followed up on a question raised by the Mariner as to whether the committee recently tripped the state's Open Meeting Law.

Five out of nine CPC board members attended the April 26 Board of Selectmen's meeting to discuss their warrant article for Town Meeting (the CPC article will be voted on during the second Town Meeting date on Monday, May 21). Selectman Leland Jenkins is also a member of the CPC and was present at the meeting.

The CPC did not post a meeting for that night, but chair Russ Bonetti said after the fact that when members of the board told him they planned to attend the selectmen's meeting, he did not think they would necessarily have a quorum. Bonetti also didn't count Jenkins as a member since he was "wearing his selectman's hat" that evening and was not attending as a member of the CPC.

Last month, selectmen chair Ted Carr called out the Planning Board for having four members attend a selectmen's meeting to discuss the Planning Board Coordinator's employment contract, which the selectmen had rejected. Carr said at the time that having a majority of the board present at the selectmen's meeting constituted a quorum, and they should have posted a public meeting. No formal complaint was made against the Planning Board, but the issue did raise some questions.

After the Mariner called Bonetti on the matter, he submitted a letter to the Attorney General's office to determine whether or not his board had violated the Open Meeting Law (OML) for having a quorum. Under Mass. General Laws 30A, sections 18-25, when a majority of committee members are gathered to discuss committee issues, they must post a public meeting.

The discussion of the CPC's Town Meeting article was not posted as an agenda item for the April 26 selectmen's meeting; the matter came up during a general Town Meeting articles discussion. Carr invited the CPC members in the audience to come forward and speak about their article.

The CPC members at the meeting were there to discuss one section of their article in particular, which was a separate warrant article at the time, concerning the window repair project for the First Parish Meetinghouse. The CPC's article asks Town Meeting to approve $65,000 of Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds to restore the church's windows. This matter has been debated across boards, the main issues of concern being whether or not the matter violates the separation of church and state or is an inappropriate use of public funds for a private structure.

Each member of the CPC that spoke at the April 26 selectmen's meeting spoke in favor of the article and told the selectmen why they felt the project is an appropriate use of CPA funds. The selectmen ended up voting 3-1 to recommend their support of the article at Town Meeting; Jenkins voted against the article while selectman Diane Kennedy was absent that evening.

Bonetti's letter to the AG's office explains that four members of the CPC spoke to the selectmen on the article and that a fifth member was also in attendance as a selectman. He asked if his failure to count Jenkins as a member that night constituted a violation of the OML.

"The posting for the BOS [board of selectmen] noted that warrant articles were to be discussed, but did not specify what committees were to present the articles," Bonetti wrote. "This was entirely an oversight on my part; no other member of the committee posts meetings. There was no intent to hide our appearance. There were no deliberations made by the CPC at this meeting, but we did discuss our articles."

Bonetti received a response from the AG's office on May 4, the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Sclarsic. He said that an official complaint must be filed against the CPC within 30 days of the alleged violation.

"We applaud the Committee's effort to be transparent by bringing this matter to our attention," wrote Sclarsic, "however, outside of a complaint being filed with our office, we are unable to comment on whether the actions taken by the Committee constitute a violation of the Open Meeting Law."

Basically, explained Bonetti, the CPC members would have to turn themselves in, if they determine as a board that they did in fact breach the OML.

"We have to decide whether we were wrong or not, which is counterintuitive," said Bonetti. At their next meeting, the chairman continued, "we're going to talk about it, whether we should make an opinion that we're not [in violation] and have someone contest it, or say yes, we were, we had a quorum."

The CPC plans to meet Monday night at 6:30 p.m., just before Town Meeting at 7 p.m.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Revisiting Jacobs Meadow

Project ran over budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Over the past two weeks, the Capital Budget Committee has carefully reviewed the Jacobs Meadow tide gate project. Findings revealed that the project went over budget and appropriation.

An update on the project was given during last week's Town Meeting, when voters were asked to approve a reallocation of funds from the Jacobs' Meadow culvert repair project (located at the harbor, next to the American Legion Post) to the Bound Brook project on Beechwood Street — a sum of $250,000. Town Meeting voted to approve the appropriation.

The November 2008 Special Town Meeting appropriated $450,000 for the project, but recent findings indicate that the project was overspent by approximately $165,000 and was expected to cost over $20,000 more than the appropriated budget from the outset. The Capital Budget Committee wondered why the project managers did not ask for more money from Town Meeting at the time.

Last week, interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained what happened.

"Town Meeting approved $450,000 for this project. As it was being managed, the project had a bunch of change orders that were going to push the budget over... Those change orders were never communicated to Capital Budget or the Board of Selectmen; they were apparently all communicated internally with staff."

Engineering consultant Mark Brennan was project manager at the time when he worked out of the town's Greenbush office, along with fellow "Greenbush Guy" Tom Gruber. Brennan said at the May 2 Capital Budget meeting that there were a number of change orders and complications along the way that increased the project's costs and delayed its closing.

Milanoski recently laid off Brennan and Gruber as town employees. Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed without cause in March, had previously signed new contracts for the "Greenbush Guys," created an Operations Department and promoted Brennan to department head; these contractual changes were not in the town's budget, said Milanoski. However, Milanoski recently hired Brennan back as a consultant to review and close out the Jacobs Meadow project.

Capital Budget vice chair Jack Keniley told the selectmen last week that the overrun was not Brennan's fault. "It wasn't Mark going rogue; he was reporting to the town managers [there have been four in the past two years] and getting sign-offs. There was no process — that's the problem."

The Capital Budget Committee updated the Board of Selectmen on this development during the Tuesday, May 8 selectmen meeting. The CBC said they would update the selectmen further at the next meeting, since the discussion was continued during the Wed., May 9 CBC meeting.

Jacobs Meadow came up at last Tuesday's selectmen meeting during a discussion on Town Meeting warrant articles. During Saturday's Annual Town Meeting, the town manager asked voters to appropriate funds from the old project to the Bound Brook project on Beechwood Street (article seven in the warrant). Despite the overrun, there is money available from the Jacobs Meadow project that the town bonded that can now be used for similar projects. Town Meeting voted to appropriate the funds.

The staff working on the Jacobs' Meadow project was able to secure a state grant to pay for the $165,000 overrun, Milanoski explained. "Town Meeting went out and bonded $450,000. Even with the overruns, we believe there's $250,000 available. We want to transfer that money, which is already bonded into a 20-year project, into another 20-year project, Bound Brook on Beechwood."

This time around, said Milanoski, the project "will follow sound project management principals. If a cost overrun is identified, all parties will be notified... A decision will be made to continue the project or modify the project to keep it in budget. In essence what we're doing is putting in policies and procedures... to not allow issues like this to occur again."

Last week, selectmen said that this was a last-minute change to the warrant, but Milanoski explained that the language in the warrant was vaguely worded ("new projects or old projects requiring additional funding") while the motion was specific.

Capital Budget chair Steve Gaumer said at the time that he had not yet received his warrant and had not been made aware of the issue. The proper process, Gaumer and Keniley pointed out, requires the town manager to give Capital Budget time to review the projects and expenditures before going to Town Meeting. Capital Budget ended up voting at the Wed., May 10 meeting to support the article.

Mother's Day present

Cohasset sixth grade girls win on Mother's Day

The Cohasset sixth grade girls lacrosse team rolled to a 15-2 victory during a Sunday morning Mother's Day matinee in Marshfield, improving to 4-0 on the season with a 57-9 goal differential over their opponents.

Goalie Kate McCarthy stood tall in the face of a few shots fired at her from point-blank range, but for the most part Cohasset controlled their defensive zone and stayed on the attack throughout, building an 8-0 lead at the half.

Positioning and passing were keys to the win as the girls made their practice work pay off, spreading the field and frequently connecting on tic-tac-toe passing patterns. Cohasset won most of the scrums for loose balls, keeping the offensive pressures on Marshfield all morning. Leanne Hayden led the offense with a hat trick. Olivia Coveney and Lauren Cunning each found the back of the net twice.

Other goals and helpers came from Aidan Chamberlain, Kate Fitzpatrick, Elle Hansen, Margaret Michalowski and Lilly Patsos. There is no question the offense is humming right now, but most impressive to coaches has been the consistent contributions and dedication from first year players Emily Gowell and Emily Lengyel, who have anchored the defense after picking up a stick for the first time less than 2 months ago, reinforcing the fact that its never to late to pick up the game of Lacrosse.

Cohasset wins pair

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

In the win-loss column, this has been a tough year for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team.

While battling a number of injuries, Cohasset had trouble picking up victories, although they have consistently played hard and given outstanding effort.

The effort, and having a few key players return has had an effect this week with a pair of wins over winning teams.

Tuesday, Cohasset hit the road for Hanover and came home with a 14-9 win.

Cohasset controlled the game with an all-around effort.

"I couldn't be prouder of the troops," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said before heading off to attend to Alex Evans, who injured a shoulder during the game. "We got our teeth kicked in

Strong down the stretch

Girls lose to Norwell, rout Weymouth and N. Quincy

GateHouse News Service

On a rainy afternoon at Alumni field last Wednesday, the Cohasset HS girl's lacrosse team faced the daunting task of trying to dethrone six-time defending South Shore League champion Norwell. Norwell started fast with the first two goals and would take a commanding 5-1 lead at the midway mark of the first half on the way to what became a fiercely contested 15-11 win for Norwell.

Cohasset had more opportunities than Norwell early on but could not convert against the tough Clipper defense and goalie. The Skippers finally broke through and quickly fired home three goals to make the score 5-4. One of the highlights of the three goal run was a top shelf rip by Mackenzie Axelson, who converted a great pass from Kathryn Dunn. Hope Kissick scored twice on underhand crank shots and the teams traded goals in the closing minutes of the half as Cohasset made it clear Norwell would not walk away with this one as the score was 6-5 at the break.

The second half started out fast and furious as both teams tried to gain an advantage. Dunn started dominating the draws against Norwell's outstanding center, Mary O'Connell, and gave Cohasset the key possessions needed to try to take the lead. Whitney Jaffe got the crowd going by weaving her way through half the Norwell defense and blasting one past the keeper.

9 but were denied as Angela Cippolla ripped a hard shot off the crossbar. Norwell would go on a run to take a 5 goal lead but Cohasset refused to quit and kept the game close until the final minutes. Sage Stebbins and Anna Seraikas helped control the Norwell fast break and Molly and Megan Fitzgerald stuffed key scoring bids before Cohasset finally succumbed by a score of 15-11.

The hard fought loss puts Cohasset's record at 6-2-2 and clinches second place in the South Shore League.

The girls will play Weymouth on Friday night and complete the regular season with five games over a 10 day span before they play in the tournament.

In earlier wins against Mashpee and Pembroke, Angela Cipolla had four goals and Hope Kissick added three goals in a 16-5 victory.

Against Pembroke, Cipolla netted five, while Kissick chipped in four and Whitney Jaffe scored three.

Cohasset also won tha game 16-5.

More recently, Cohasset improved to 8-3-2 with a 20-9 win over Weymouth, followed by a 13-1 victory over North Quincy.

The two-game streak ended with an 18-6 loss to Notre Dame Academy on Wednesday.

NDA is 18-1 this season.

Cohasset played Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday. Results were unavailable at press time.

Senior Night for the girls is May 23 at 6:30 p.m. against Hanover.

against Bishop Guertin (a 16-3 loss to the 13-2 squad) but came right back today. Everyone played well. This was a team effort."

Nick Tangherlini and Charlie Neaves both played exceptionally well for Cohasset, Flanagan said.

A day later, the Skippers scored a 9-7 win at Westborough.

Westborough is also a solid team with a 9-7 record including the Cohasset loss.

The Skippers close the season on Senior Night against Scituate , May 24 at 7 p.m.

The two wins improved the Skippers to 5-10.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

WHICH KIND OF CAMP?

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Consider the possibilities that would suit the needs and interests of your child:

• Day Camps typically serve children ages 3-15. Session lengths typically vary from one to eight weeks. Some camps offer up to ten weeks of programming. Before camp and after camp programs are offered for an additional fee at some day camps.
• Overnight (also referred to as Resident or Sleepaway) Camps usually serve children ages 6-17. Campers sleep at camp for one to eight weeks, depending on the camp's session length.
• General Camps offer a broad range of activities. Many provide campers with the opportunity to focus on one or a few areas while encouraging them to try a variety of others. It is sometimes possible to explore an activity or interest in depth within the context of the whole program.
• Trip & Travel Camps involve outdoor exploration through active sports like biking, hiking, climbing and canoeing. Campers spend most of their time traveling and preparing to travel.
• Specialty Camps are based in day or resident settings. Popular options for specialization may include horseback riding, the arts, sports, computers, or travel. Programming revolves around intensive exposure to the specialty area.
• Camps for Special Populations serve specific clientele like children or adults with particular medical conditions, disabilities, or special needs. Some camps focus on campers who share very specific diagnoses, while others are geared to meet a broader array of needs at any one time.
• Religiously-Affiliated Camps offer religious education formally and informally. Review materials carefully for explanations of how religion influences a camp's culture to find one with the balance that best matches your family's own values and beliefs.
• Family Camp Sessions include family members of all ages from grandparents to infants. Accommodations vary, as do program options and session length. The focus is on being together as a family—to learn, to relax, and to enjoy new experiences and adventures.

Flibotte honored at Bowdoin

Head Coach Tom McCabe and three members of the Bowdoin College men's lacrosse team were honored in postseason awards handed out by the conference on Thursday.

Seniors Mark Flibotte (Cohasset, Mass.) and Matt Egan (Newton, Mass.) were named as First Team selections while junior goaltender Christopher Williamson took Second Team honors. For the first time in his 22-year career, McCabe was recognized by his peers as the conference's Coach of the Year.

Flibotte has enjoyed an excellent season out of the Bowdoin midfield and currently paces the squad with 29 goals and is second with 37 points. He has collected a point in 14 of Bowdoin's 16 games this season and has scored a hat trick on six occasions, including four-goal outbursts in consecutive days against Middlebury and Williams on April 30-May 1, netting him NESCAC Player of the Week honors.

In his 22nd and final season at the helm of the Polar Bears, head coach Tom McCabe earned his first NESCAC Coach of the Year honor. McCabe, who announced his intended retirement prior to the beginning of the campaign, has led Bowdoin to a 12-4 record, a third-place finish in the conference standings and a #12 ranking in the latest USILA Division III poll. The winningest coach in Bowdoin men's lacrosse history, McCabe ranks 15th all-time in Division III history with 227 wins entering play this weekend.

Football changes in the air?

New proposal would allow more teams into playoffs

By David Wolcott
dwolcott@wickedlocal.com

PLYLMOUTH – Several proposals floated over the years would have brought some drastic changes to the current high school football tournament system. There were always parts of ideas that people liked, but the overall vision was too much for some members of the MIAA to take.

Bits and pieces of those past proposals help make up the newest attempt to change the playoff system, and two recent votes at the state level show that some major changes may finally be in the air.

In two separate votes last week, the MIAA's Football Committee (15-2) as well as the Tournament Management Committee (10-4) voted in favor of a proposal that would allow more than just league champions into the playoffs, and would also cut the number of eventual state champions from the current 19 all the way down to six.

The proposal, which would go into effect in 2013 if approved, now goes to a June 7th vote of the MIAA Board of Directors. It can approve the changes, vote the proposal down or send it back to committee for further revisions.

Plymouth North Principal Kathleen McSweeney is chairman of the MIAA's Tournament Management Committee. She believes the time is right for a change to be made to the current football system.

"I think the biggest advantages to this proposal is that it honors the traditional Thanksgiving games as well as the league champions," McSweeney said. "I think this proposal solves a lot of issues we've had in the past. It is something that the MIAA really needs to consider. Also, since it is a two-year pilot program, we can go back to the former way if we want to after a couple of years."

The proposal would have teams play essentially a league schedule for the first seven weeks of the season. The next three weeks would have playoff-eligible teams start playing tournament games. Schools in the South section would be slotted by enrollment into one of six divisions. Eight teams from each of those divisions would qualify for the playoffs.

Leagues with five or more teams would automatically qualify two playoff teams. Leagues with fewer than five teams would get one automatic spot in the tournament. The rest of the bracket would be filled with the top wild card teams as determined by a power rating system. Playoff games, except for the state finals, would all be contested on the home field of the higher seed.

Teams not making the playoffs would spend the next three weekends, Weeks 8-10 of the regular season, playing in games set up by a scheduling committee leading up to the traditional Thanksgiving game in Week 11. A school would continue to play its regular Thanksgiving rivalry game on the holiday. All six state championship games would then all be played nine days later at Gillette Stadium.

A new proposal being looked at the the MIAA would cut down the number of State Champions from 19 to six, but would allow more teams to make the playoffs and allow traditional Thanksgiving Day rivalries like Cohasset vs. Hull to continue. FILE PHOTO/GARY HIGGINS

A new proposal being looked at by the MIAA would cut down the number of state champions from 19 to six but still allow for traditional rivals like Silver Lake and Pembroke to meet on Thanksgiving. PHOTO/JOANN FURTADO

Summer Arts Preview

GREATER BOSTON AND CAPE COD | JODY FEINBERG

HOT FUN IN THE SUMMERTIME

Sit back and enjoy arts entertainment from Boston to the Berkshires, Cape Cod to Gloucester

The George Gershwin lyric "summertime and the living is easy" evokes lazy lounging, but the rich variety of summer arts offerings speaks otherwise. There are so many esteemed theater, music and dance performances that energetic arts lovers could pack a year's worth into the weeks from Memorial to Labor Day.

It's an exciting time, when theaters and tents in the Berkshires and Cape Cod come to life, hosting classic and innovative works, as well as national and international stars. Warm breezes and an open sky add to the ambiance not just on the Tanglewood lawn and Jacob's Pillow outdoor stage, but on the Boston Common and Esplanade, at Fort Adams Sate Park and Boston Harbor Walk.

Inside:

- Tanglewood celebrates 75
- On stage in the Berkshires
- Museums, music and more

In some cases, arts organizations, such as Broadway in Boston and The Company Theatre in Norwell, stage shows year-round, without a summer break. But most summer arts are just that – they're offered only in the summer, which is why we so look forward to them. Dig in and feed your imagination and soul with the arts.

SUMMER

Theater

No one makes Shakespeare more accessible than Commonwealth Shakespeare Company, whose free outdoor performances on Boston Common draw thousands each summer. Its 17th season features the political drama "Coriolanus," about the rise and fall of a powerful Roman general. July 25 - Aug. 12, www.comshakes.org

Broadway tickets were hard to come by for the Elton John musical "Billy Elliot," but you can scoop them up when the touring production stops at The Opera House in the final offering of the 2011-2012 Broadway in Boston series. July 24 - Aug. 19, www.broadwayinboston.org

It makes perfect sense that Paragon Park, beloved by generations, is not forgotten. The story of the Nantasket Beach landmark is told in the new production "Paragon Park the Musical" at The Company Theatre in Norwell. July 27-Aug. 19, www.companytheatre.org

Known for its innovation, the American Repertory Theatre (A.R.T) teams up with the Institute for Contemporary Art and the Huntington Theatre for the Emerging America Festival. It presents "Pirates of Penzance" like you've never seen, "Hotel Nepenthe," Friends of Eddie Coyle" and "Steve Cuiffo as Lenny Bruce." June 21-24, www.emergingamericafestival.com

Gloucester is best known for whale watching, but its also home to the Gloucester Stage Company, which presents five shows for landlubbers. These include a rare revival of the musical "Carnival," the Pulitzer-prize winning "Crimes of the Heart" by Beth Henley and the modern classic "Master Harold and the Boys" by Athol Fugard. June 14 - Sept. 16, www.gloucesterstage.com

Wellesley Summer Theater will present "And A Nightingale Sang," C.P. Taylor's heartfelt drama of a British family trying to hold it together during World War II. A touching and funny look about a family discovering the power of love. May 24-June 24. ww.wellesleysummertheatre.com

Wherever you stay on the Cape, there's a theater nearby. The Cape Cod Theatre Project, Wellfleet Harbor Actors Theatre or Provincetown Repertory Theatre make their mark in world with American premiers, and the Cape Playhouse in Dennis is the place for musicals. June – August, www.allcapecod.com

Music

The tents of the South Shore Music Circus and the Cape Cod Melody Tent create an intimate atmosphere, which may be why they're so successful in attracting big name stars used to larger audiences. The impressive line-up this summer includes Diana Krall, Chris Botti, Martina McBride, Trace Adkins, Bonnie Riatt, k.d. Lang and others. June 30 - Sept. 2, www.themusiccircus.org and www.capecodmelodytent.org

You can debate whether the Bank of America Pavillion has the better line-up. Ringo Starr, Stevie Nicks, Norah Jones, Sara McLachlan, Passion Pit, the B-52s, Santana and other national artists perform in the harborside tent. June 1 - Sept. 8, bankofamericapavilliontickets.com.

Fortunately, the Institute of Contemporary Art and the Boston Harbor Hotel aren't so close that their Thursday night outdoor music series create a cacophony of sound. Harbor Walk Sounds features Berklee students, faculty and alumni on the ICA plaza, while Summer in the City presents Blues Barge on a floating dock. July 12 - August 30, www.ica.org and June 15 - Aug. 30, www.bbh.org

After the Boston Pops July 4 concert, The Hatch Shell doesn't remain quiet for long. It hosts free classical performances by the Boston Landmarks Orchestra and free pop concerts sponsored by 103.3 WODS. July 11 - Aug. 29, www.celebrateboston.com

Choose from amphitheater or lawn seats at Evenings under the Stars at South Shore Conservatory in Hingham, featuring jazz, blues, popular and operatic music. July 7-28, www.sscmusic.org. SSC's Duxbury Music Festival showcases classical music. July 15-27, www.duxburymusicfestival.org

The glass-walled Shalin Liu Performance Center is reason alone to attend the Rockport Chamber Music Festival, where the ocean is the backdrop for performances. June 7 through July 16, www.rcmf.org

The granddaddy of folk festivals is right in our back yard at Fort Adams State Park in Rhode Island. Patti Griffin, Jackson Browne, My Morning Jacket join more than a dozen others performers at the Newport Folk Festival, July 28 and 29. The Newport Jazz Festival follows, with Pat Methany Unity Band, Tedeschi Trucks Band and others. Aug. 4 and 5. www.newportfolkfest.net and www.newportjazzfest.net.

Dance

When Boston's major dance companies are off-season, Summer Stages Dance fills the void at its home at Concord Academy and at the Institute for Contemporary Art. In honor of John Cage's 100th birthday, a reconstruction of "How to Pass, Kick, Fall and Run," by Merce Cunningham will be performed with Cage's stories from Indeterminacy. July 9 - 28, summerstagesdance.org

Jody Feinberg may be reached at jfeinberg@ledger.com.

A.R.T. and Huntington Theatre team up for the Emerging America Festival June 21-24.

South Shore Music Circus welcomes Diana Krall June 30.

Wellesley Summer Theatre performs "And A Nightingale Sang" May 24-June 24.

Stevie Nicks, sans Fleetwood Mac, July 10 at Bank of America Pavilion.

Jackson Browne performs at the Newport Folk Festival July 29.

Elton John's musical "Billy Elliot" stops at The Opera House July 24-Aug. 19.

Harbor Walk Sounds features Berklee College of Music students, faculty and alumni outside on the ICA plaza.

THE BERKSHIRES AND BEYOND | JODY FEINBERG

The hills are alive

Head west for world-class music, theater and dance

The Tanglewood schedule stands out this summer, as the music festival celebrates its 75th season. But if a Tanglewood concert is the only Berkshires event you attend, you'll miss out.

Three major theater companies present nearly two dozen productions, featuring stars such as Olympia Dukakis and Kelli O'Hara and works by the great playwrights as well as contemporary prize-winners and promising new talent.

At Jacob's Pillow, a parade of dance companies from the United States and around the world perform a variety of dance styles and define what's new in the dance world.

So, begin your visit in Lenox, but explore the offerings in Lee, Pittsfield and Williamstown to experience what makes the Berkshires an arts destination.

Tanglewood is the Big Kahuna in the Berkshires, but explore further to experience arts in the Berkshires. CONTRIBUTED PHOTOS

MUSIC

Tanglewood's 75th anniversary bash on July 14 features conductors John Williams, Keith Lockhart, and Andris Nelsons; soloists Yo-Yo Ma, Emanuel Ax, Peter Serkin, James Taylor, and Anne-Sophie Mutter, and includes works by Tanglewood legends Aaron Copland and Leonard Bernstein. The season includes Brahms' complete works for piano, all-Mozart, all-Wagner and all-Bach programs, Yo-Yo Ma and the Silk Road Ensemble, John Williams' 80th birthday celebration and a contemporary music festival. June 23 - Aug. 31, www.bso.org

THEATER

Just down the road from Tanglewood, the 35th season of Shakespeare & Company features "King Lear" with Dennis Krausnick and "The Tempest" with Olivia Dukakis. Despite its name, the company produces more plays by other playwrights than the Bard. Annette Miller stars in "The Tale of the Allergist's Wife," and the plays "Satchmo at the Waldorf," "Endurance," and "Cassandra Speaks" are compelling explorations of the lives of musician Louis Armstrong, Antartic explorer Sir Ernest Shackleton and journalist Dorothy Thompson. June 12 - Sept. 16, www.shakespeare.org.

The Barrington Stage Company also plays with name confusion, since the esteemed theater is in Pittsfield. It's wide-ranging repertoire includes "Fiddler on the Roof," "All My Sons," "Lord of the Flies," and the premier of "Dr. Ruth, All the Way," about the famous sex therapist. May 23 -Aug. 26, www.barringtonstageco.org

Although located outside the main Berkshire attractions near the Massachusetts border, the Williamstown Theatre Festival is perhaps the most esteemed. The season features Broadway musical theater star Kelli O'Hara in "Far from Heaven," the world premier of the Lucy Boyle drama "The Blue Deep" with Blythe Danner, as well as plays by Oscar Wilde, Neil Simon, and Ivan Turgenev. June 26 - Aug. 19, www.WTFestival.org

A number of plays that went on to New York City or to win awards were first staged in the Berkshires. So you might want to catch the three premiers staged in Stockbridge by the Berkshire Theatre Group, "Homestead Crossing" (Aug. 7 – Sept. 1), "Brace Yourself" (Aug. 14-25) and "Edith" (July 31-Aug. 11). www.berkshiretheatregroup.org

DANCE

Bringing in dancers from around the world, the 80th Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival always surprises. Among the 20 productions are Circa, an Australian circus arts company, Mimulus, a Brazilian contemporary group, The Hong Kong Ballet, the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Company, contemporary dance artist Jonah Bokaer, the Trey McIntyre Project, and dancers performing Afro-Caribbean and Latino styles. There's also free preshow performances on the outdoor stage. June 16 – Aug. 26, www.jacobspillow.org Yo-Yo Ma is just one of the soloists scheduled to play at Tanglewood's 75th anniversary celebration July 14.

MUSEUMS AND MORE | CHRIS BERGERON

Plan your own 'staycation'

Even if a vacation isn't in the cards for you this summer, there's plenty to do right in our own area. Make sure you put some of the world-class local museums on your summer calendar.

In Boston, the Museum of Fine Arts will be offering an exciting mix of new exhibitions featuring American and European artists as well as summer-themed musical activities in its courtyard.

"Alex Katz Prints" (through July 29) offers more than 90 works by an iconic artist known for his bold colors. Smaller shows running through the summer include "Silver, Salt and Sunlight: Early Photography in Britain and France," "Manet in Black" and "Seeking Shambala" about a legendary Buddhist kingdom in the Himalayas.

Running Wednesday evenings July 11 through Aug. 29, the MFA's Courtyard Summer Series will bring an eclectic mix local musical favorites like Patty Larkin (Aug. 2) to bands with international roots such as Oliver Mtukudzi an the Black Spirits (July 25). Tickets are $24 for members, seniors and students and $30 for non-members. For information, visit www.mfa.org

For his first U.S. show, British sculptor Gary Webb will be exhibiting two works outside the entrance plaza of the deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum and a survey inside the Lincoln museum. Curator Nick Capasso predicted visitors would be excited by "the sheer joy and bizarre fun" of Webb's sculptures which are characterized by his use of numerous unusual materials.

At the New England Aquarium, see "To the Arctic" a spectacular new 3-D film, narrated by Oscar winner Meryl Streep, about the struggles of a mother bear and her two cubs to survive a changing environment. CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

For the third year, the deCordova will host outdoor yoga classes on its spacious grounds with sessions offered on the second Sundays of June, July, August and September. Starting at 10 a.m., half-hour classes will be offered for children from 3-to-12-years-old and classes for adults in Vinyasa Flow Yoga will start at 11 a.m. Classes cost $5 for children and $15 for adults.

The deCordova opens a new show, "Second Nature," that features abstract photographs by more than 30 20th century photographers. May 26 – April 2013. www.decordova.org

Where else but the New England Aquarium will visitors be greeted by African penguins or get the chance to feel the smooth wings of cownose rays and 2-foot-long Indonesian bonnet head sharks in the largest open touch tank in the East Coast. Or, come and see Sierra and Zoe, the Aquarium's mischievous new 2-year-old sea lions in the New Balance Foundation Marine Mammal Center.

Need to escape Boston's summer heat? Check out "To the Arctic," a spectacular new 3-D film, narrated by Oscar winner Meryl Streep, in the NEA's Simons IMAX Theater about the struggles of a mother bear and her two cubs to survive a changing environment. For information, visit www.neaq.org

The Museum of Russian Icons in Clinton reveals new exhibit that shows what happened when Soviet ideology tried to oppress venerated religious traditions. "Palekh Icons: The Enchantment of Russian Paintings" will feature small art objects, like lacquer and paper mache boxes, decorated by artisans from the Russian town of Palekh who had formerly been considered master painters of the religious icons that filled Russian Orthodox churches, monasteries and homes. June 14 - Sept. 1. www.museumofrussianicons.org

The second International Rachmaninoff Russian Music Festival comes to the area for a week of choral concerts, opera, chamber, organ music, modern and more. Titled "Russia's Musical Treasure Chest," the concerts celebrate the beauty and tradition of Russia at a variety of venues in Brighton, Boston, Cambridge, Somerville and Acton. May 20-27. www.russianmusicfest.com

AT FIRST PARISH

Vocal jazz trio E.S.P. set to dazzle

The Third Sunday Series welcomes E.S.P., Boston's newest vocal jazz trio. Featuring original songs and compelling new arrangements of familiar and lesser-known jazz tunes, E.S.P. has captivated audiences at the Regatta Bar and other venues in the Boston area with their sensuous blend and savvy musicality. They will be at First Parish Cohasset at 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 20. First Parish is located on the green at North Main St., Cohasset. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children. This is the last concert of the season for the Third Sunday Series at First Parish Cohasset.

E.S.P. will be presenting their trademark mix of jazz tunes new and old, familiar and obscure. Their stunning mix of songs will include "There Is No Greater Love," a 1930's standard covered by Billie Holiday and Dinah Washington; "Have a Little Faith in Me," previously covered by Etta James and Chaka Kahn, Stephen Sondheim's "Take Me to the World," George Gershwin's upbeat and triumphant "They All Laughed," and also "Help Me" by Joni Mitchell.

E.S.P. is Boston's newest vocal trio, featuring the diverse talents of Emily Browder, Sandi Hammond, and Patrice Williamson. In collaboration with pianist-arranger Mark Shilansky, E.S.P. delivers original songs and compelling new arrangements of familiar and lesser-known jazz tunes. The trio has captivated audiences at the Regatta Bar, Ryles, Johnny D's, the Acton Jazz Cafe, and other venues in the Boston area with their sensuous blend and savvy musicality. E.S.P.'s members have toured in cities including Singapore, Harare, Toronto, New York City, Washington, D.C., and Atlanta.

Patrice Williamson, is a favorite in Boston and beyond, where her fluent scat style and sensitive ballad work have earned her Boston Magazine's "Best of Boston" award and several Boston Music Award nominations. She's been heard at both the Tanglewood and Marblehead Jazz Festivals, as well as at the International Women's Forum in Singapore. Both of her independent recordings, "My Shining Hour" and "Free to Dream," have received high praise from jazz critics around the country. She is also actively passing on her knowledge and love of the jazz tradition through her teaching at The New School of Music in Cambridge, Wellesley College, and Milton Academy.

Sandi Hammond is a Boston-based indie singer-songwriter who writes in an alternative style all her own on both piano and guitar. With two solo records behind her "Rubbergirl" on Aspire Records and "This Summer Night" on Brave Records and a track on the internationally renowned Respond compilation (Columbia Records), she is currently working on an original two-act musical with gospel-style songs, in collaboration with songwriter-lyricist Mark Stepakoff. Sandi also runs her own commissioned songwriting business, Your Own Lullaby.

Emily Browder has received critical acclaim in the Boston area as a versatile singing actress. She has sung several roles with Opera Boston and has also appeared as a soloist with Boston Modern Orchestra Project (BMOP), Opera Unlimited, the Cantata Singers, the Boston Music Theater Project, Boston Vocal Artists, New England Voices, and various Walter Robinson productions. She can be heard in the role of The Boy on BMOP's acclaimed recording of Lukas Foss's Griffelkin (Chandos) and as Eve in Daniel Pinkham's GardenParty (Arsis). Upcoming releases include "The Humble Heart," produced by New England Voices.

For more information about the concert, contact Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

DTC movie night is tonight!

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's last scheduled spring movie night will feature "Hot Coffee" at 7 p.m., on Friday, May 18, in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The public is invited to view this documentary that examines the case of Liebeck v. McDonald's Restaurants, the so-called "hot coffee lawsuit," in which a woman sued the fast-food giant after she spilled her coffee and burned herself.

Looking past the negative publicity of the trial, the filmmaker, Susan Saladoff, examines the reasons why McDonalds's invested heaps of money to sway public opinion against the plaintiff. The cast includes John Grisham and Al Franken.

Everyone is welcome to the films, which are featured to inform and entertain viewers on issues of social, environmental, health and political interest. Refreshments (not including coffee) and the movie, are free.

HOLLY HILL

Plant sale over two weekends

The following events will take place at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Plant Sale – The Holly Hill Farm Plant Sale will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on May 19, 20, 26 and 27. Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 28, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might have to turn your Arian charm up a few degrees if you hope to persuade that persistent pessimist to see the possibilities in your project. Whatever you do, don't give up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A "tip" about a co-worker's "betrayal" might well raise the Bovine's rage levels. But before charging into a confrontation, let an unbiased colleague do some fact checking.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although a relationship still seems to be moving too slowly to suit your expectations, it's best not to push it. Let it develop at its own pace. You'll soon get news about a workplace change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A continually changing personal situation makes you feel as if you're riding an emotional roller coaster. But hold on tight; stability starts to set in early next week.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Believe it or not, someone might dare to say "No!" to the Regal One's suggestion. But instead of being miffed, use this rebuff to recheck the proposition and, perhaps, make some changes.

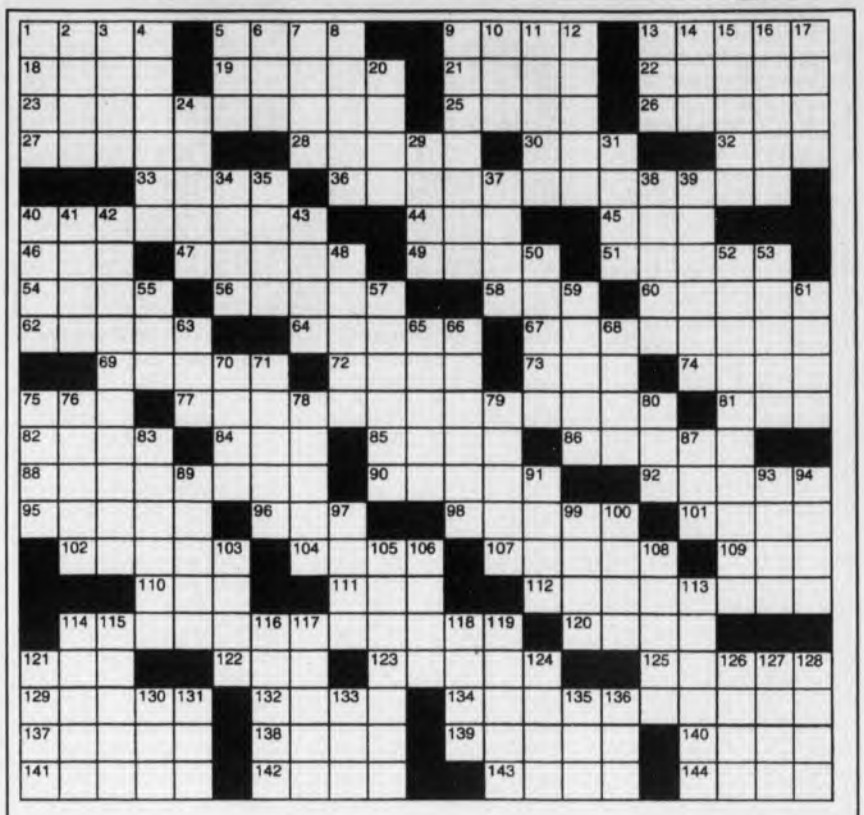
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might find it difficult to make a decision about a family matter. But delay can only lead to more problems. Seek out trusted counsel and then make that important decision.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Concentrate your focus on what needs to be done, and avoid frittering away your energies on less-important pursuits. There'll be time later for fun and games.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although the conflicts seem to be letting up, you still need to be wary of being drawn into workplace intrigues. Plan a special weekend event for family and/or friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your quick wit helps you work through an already difficult situation without creating more problems. Creative aspects begin to dominate by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be patient. You'll soon receive news about a project that means so much to you. Meanwhile, you might want to reconsider a suggestion you previously turned down.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There are still some aspects about that new job offer you need to resolve. In the meantime, another possibility seems promising. Be sure to check that out as well.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Opening up your emotional floodgates could leave you vulnerable to being hurt later on. Watch what you say, in order to avoid having your words come back to haunt you.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're usually the life of the party, which gets you on everyone's invitation list. You also have a flair for politics.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

AFTER 35 YEARS

Bowing out

Mr. Marks to say goodbye during his final Fine Arts Night

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Marks said that his final concert "will be bittersweet for sure... and I will likely be very sentimental. Lots of memories from 35 years."

What better way to say goodbye than with a song.

Cohasset High music teacher Bryan Marks will conduct the last concert of his long career during the annual Fine Arts Night on Tuesday, May 22. Marks has served the Cohasset district for 35 years.

"It's a nice evening celebrating the arts," said Marks. "And, yes, it will officially be my last concert as high school chorus director."

Back in January, "Mr. Marks" was feted by current students, their parents, fellow faculty members, and alumni during the Cohasset Cabaret at the Atlantica restaurant. The evening was supposed to be simply a performance, and the tribute took Marks by surprise.

"I wasn't expecting this," Mark said at the time in a brief moment between songs. "It's very touching."

The music teacher's time in Cohasset was celebrated that night with a slideshow set to music featuring photos of Marks throughout the years with his family and students. Marks was also presented with a bouquet by band director Jennifer Moriarty.

The Cabaret might have been the school's official send-off for the music teacher, but the Fine Arts night will provide another chance for folks who have been taught by Marks to stop by and wish him well.

Fine Arts night is a free event and will be an evening of arts displays and performances by the high school band, chorus and jazz ensemble.

Marks said that his final concert "will be bittersweet for sure... and I will likely be very sentimental. Lots of memories from 35 years."

The music teacher added that he would "especially enjoy seeing any alumni that can come."

GIMME SHELTER

Duke loves to be brushed

Duke is gentle and congenial and waiting patiently to be discovered. You're cordially invited to come and meet him.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Duke, is an adult, jet-black, medium hair male. Duke would make an ideal companion cat for a senior (seniors who adopt senior cats qualify for a 50 percent discount).

Duke loves to be brushed, and will turn from side to side to make sure that you don't miss a spot. He's a friendly chap and will do well in just about any animal friendly home. Duke is gentle and congenial and waiting patiently to be discovered. You're cordially invited to come and meet him.

HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

Gimmie Shelter - Fundraiser for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue – is from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 17.

Live Music, Dancing, Food, Silent Auctions, Raffles. HSAR is a non-profit, no-kill cat shelter, serving Hull and surrounding communities for 12 years! Help HSAR to continue its mission and join the party! Tickets $20 at the door or on line @ www.hsar.org

This event will take place at the C-Note and will feature two bands, Closer Than We Appear and Cat Basket.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: This Sunday is the Last Sunday of Easter

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (May 20), St. Stephen's concludes its seven week celebration of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ known as the season of Easter. But the celebration continues because every Sunday of the year is a celebration of the resurrection! This Sunday we will be "beating the bounds," an old tradition of processing around the grounds of the church saying prayers. This year, our prayers will be focused on the environment.

Sunday services of Holy Communion are at 8am and 10am. Godly Play (pre-k through elementary school) and CIA (middle school) meet at 10am. ROX (senior high) meets at 11:30am.

Vacation Bible School is coming June 25-29. You can sign up on our webpage at ststephenscohasset.org. Also, the second "Old Fashioned Community Supper" is Friday, May 18th. Everyone is welcome!

AA meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Second Community Supper is tonight!

This evening, Friday, May 18, the parish hall at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will once again play host for an "Old-Fashioned Community Supper," the brainchild of local clergy, who sought a way to bring their congregations and the community together for an evening of food and fellowship.\

Members of St. Stephen's, St. Anthony's, 2nd Congregational, and 1st Parish have teamed up to provide a main course, salad, bread, and dessert for hundreds people. Everybody in the community, whether or not they are members of a local church, are welcome and encouraged to attend. Dinner will be served beginning at 5:00pm and will continue until 8:00pm. Just come as you are and leave full of food and good company. There is no cost to attend the dinner.

Cohasset Elder Affairs has planned transportation for any who need it. If you have any questions, please contact St. Stephen's office at 781-383-1083. The dinner will be held at St. Stephen's, the stone church on the rock off of Cohasset Common, 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset.

DAY TWO: TOWN MEETING

Church window grant approved

Voters reject cigarette ban

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The second half of Annual Town Meeting on Monday, May 21 saw voters accept one controversial article while rejecting another.

Town Meeting was set to begin at 7 p.m. at the High School gymnasium; it took around 20 minutes to gather a quorum of 100 voters. The meeting picked up with Article 22, where the Sat., May 12 Town Meeting left off, and concluded with Article 34.

Citizens at Town Meeting voted to approve $65,000 in Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds to pay for window restoration at the First Parish Meeting House, despite town-wide debates over whether the matter violates the separation of church and state. Voters also supported four other recommendations by the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), including a $15,000 appropriation to repair the Meeting House clock (the building is owned by First Parish while the clock belongs to the town) and the purchase of two parcels of land off Forest Avenue (known as the Bread and Cheese swamp) using $50,000 from the CPA's Open Space Sub Account and another $50,000 in undesignated CPA funds.

Town Meeting voted against the Cohasset Board of Health's proposed cigarette ban in stores with pharmacies. The warrant article also sought to ban the sale of electronic cigarettes. Only three stores in town would have been affected: CVS, Walgreen's and Stop & Shop. Voters ultimately decided that cigarette smoking is a private health matter, while the health board argued for protecting the public against secondhand smoke.

It's a go for Gjesteby

Former selectman wins tight race against Carr

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Martha Gjesteby, 83, of Old Pasture Road has been attending town meetings for her entire 50-plus years of residency in Cohasset. But not since the mid-1990s when she lost a bid for a fourth term on the Board of Selectmen has she attended as an elected official.

Gjesteby won her fourth term, albeit a non-consecutive one, in an upset Saturday (May 19) at the annual Town Election. She unseated then Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr of South Main Street who was seeking a third term. She was at the continuation of the annual Town Meeting on Monday in her new role as a selectman.

Gjesteby has said that her reason for seeking office is that she would bring some history and new ideas to make government more efficient and open to the public.

Her status as an octogenarian was not a campaign issue. But Carr, 44, who narrowly lost by 47 votes, did raise the age issue in a mass email Saturday afternoon to potential voters that noted it was a tight race.

The email, which included a photograph of Carr's three young children dressed in their Sunday finest, stated "today's election is very important for the future of our children. I am one of two selectmen under the age of 60 and the only one with kids in grammar school. I am here to represent you. If you have voted — thank you. If not, please do — it is a tight race. Thank you for you support. Ted."

Gjesteby said she got hugs all around at her Community Garden Club meeting this week. She joked

EVENTS PREVIEW

Memorial Day weekend schedule

WHAT
Cohasset started its observances of Memorial Day last Saturday with the opening of the Healing Field. This weekend, the somber and reflective events will continue.

FRIDAY
9 a.m. to 8 p.m., the Healing Field is open to the public.
7 p.m. to 9 p.m., Veterans reception at the Pratt Building, hosted by the Cohasset Historical Society.
Saturday, 1 p.m., Healing Field dedication. Speaker is Robert Noble, World War II veteran, of Quincy.
Sunday, 8 p.m., American Legion Honor Guard Overnight Vigil begins at Veterans Park on the harbor.

MONDAY, MEMORIAL DAY
• Breakfast is served to all marchers, 7 a.m. at the American Legion Post.
• At 8 a.m., veterans will assemble at the Healing Field for a prayer; at 8:15 a.m. they will load buses and make several stops in Cohasset to honor our fallen veterans. Buses leave for North Cohasset Cemetery at 8:45 a.m. At 9:30 a.m., buses arrive at Woodside Cemetery, then on to Beechwood Cemetery for 10 a.m. and Sohier Street for 10:30 a.m.
• At 11:15 a.m., there will be a short ceremony at Central Cemetery at Joy Place and another at POW/MIA Square at Depot Court at 11:30a.m.
• At noon, the parade arrives at Veterans Memorial Park. The keynote speaker is Marine Colonel Ben Watson.

FLOWER GIRLS
Girls age four and up are needed to be the flower girls at the Memorial Day ceremony. Flowers girls meet across from the POW/MIA Square at the corners of North Main, Depot Court and Elm Street around 11a.m. and march to Veterans Park on the harbor. Flower girls are asked to bring flowers. If your daughters, granddaughters or nieces are interested, or if anyone has questions, please contact Deirdre Wigmore at 781-740-8049.

The Healing Field at the harbor, where visitors can pay their respects to America's servicemen and women and observe an array of 500 flags, will be open to the public until Mon., June 4.

The annual dedication of the Healing Field is Saturday at 1p.m. at Veterans Memorial Park at the Harbor. PHOTO/LAURA SINCLAIR

ASSESSORS NEWS ALERT

Extended deadline for important filing

The Cohasset Board of Assessors has mailed a second request for Income and Expense information from rental property owners and commercial and industrial property owners for fiscal 2013.

In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 59, Section 38D, failure to comply with the Assessors' request by April 1, 2012 could result in a $250 fine assessed to the fiscal 2013 tax bill. However, the Board of Assessors will accept Income and Expense information through June 2, 2012 from owners who wish to avoid the $250 fine.

The Board of Assessors intends to assess the fine for those who do not provide a completed form by the extended deadline. For further information, contact the Assessors' Office at (781) 383-4114.

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Once again, the Food Pantry is looking for gardeners to join the summer project, "Plant A Row For the Pantry." Community members are asked to plant one row of vegetables for the pantry in their home or neighborhood garden. Last year fresh vegetables were received all summer long. It was so successful, it is hoped that more gardeners will take part.

BRIEFLY

Poppy Drive in Cohasset

The annual Poppy Drive will take place this year on May 24, 25 and 26.

Each year the VFW's success in performing this drive can only be achieved with volunteers taking the time to man tables at Shaw's, Stop & Shop and Curtis Liquors.

This year the VFW is asking for volunteers to call Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079 to donate the times one can sit at locations.

Veterans agent contact number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F).

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level.

New treasurer collector hired

Lepardo comes to Cohasset from Scituate

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Lepardo noted that Cohasset officials have stated their goal is to raise the town's bond rating to triple A, the highest possible level: "I think I can help."

Cohasset's finance department has gained another financial expert from nearby Scituate. A few months ago, Scituate's longtime town accountant, Mary Gallagher, came to work as Cohasset's finance director; now, Gallagher's former co-worker from Scituate Town Hall, Jane Cunniff Lepardo, is leaving there to become Cohasset's new treasurer/collector.

"We found the ideal candidate next door," interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said of Lepardo, adding that the new treasurer/collector will be "an asset to our community."

Lepardo was appointed treasurer/collector during the Thurs., May 17 Board of Selectmen meeting. She has served as Scituate's treasurer/collector for the past six years. Lepardo joins Gallagher in the finance department, who up until January spent 20 years as town accountant in Scituate.

Gallagher said that she was "really happy" with Lepardo's hiring. "She's great to work with and gets things done," the finance director said of the treasurer/collector.

Lepardo said that while she will miss working with her staff in Scituate, things haven't been the same since Gallagher left this past winter.

"I was happy in Scituate until Mary left," Lepardo said, adding that while she is "torn about leaving the Scituate staff," she is "excited to come onboard" and meet new challenges in Cohasset.

Lepardo told the selectmen that she thoroughly researched Cohasset prior to her interview, contacting the town's bond counsel and reading the town's management letter.

"She interviewed us," said Milanoski. "She researched us as much as we researched her."

"There's nothing that scared me or that I thought I couldn't handle," Lepardo said of Cohasset's financial situation. She told the board that she is a "detail-oriented," "aggressive treasurer/collector, though not in a bad way," adding that she seeks to "change the frame of mind for staff and townspeople" when it comes to collections.

"I collect 100 percent of what's expected, and what we don't collect I make up for in fees," Lepardo said. "The town needs the money, and the goal is to bring in as much as possible by June 30."

Lepardo noted that Cohasset officials have stated their goal is to raise the town's bond rating to triple-A, the highest possible level: "I think I can help."

Prior to her work in Scituate, Lepardo spent six years as treasurer/collector in the town of Norfolk. Before bringing Lepardo on board, the town's finance department has relied on outside consultants like Dan Sullivan of the firm Sullivan and Rogers.

Lepardo was chosen by Gallagher and Milanoski. Under section four of Cohasset's Town Manager Act, the Board of Selectmen have 15 days to accept or reject appointments made by the town manager; during the selectmen meeting, Milanoski asked the board to waive their right of the 15 days and to simply accept Lepardo's appointment. The board voted unanimously to do so.

Lepardo said that she hopes to start work in Cohasset on July 2, one day into the new fiscal year.

POLICE BEAT

Scituate woman faces shoplifting charge

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 52-year-old Scituate woman has been issued a no-trespass order at Shaw's and is being summonsed to court for shoplifting, police said.

In an ongoing investigation by loss prevention at Shaw's, the supermarket had observed the woman allegedly punch in a different fruit or vegetable at the scale at the self-checkout that costs less than the produce that she was actually buying, police said. Shaw's had observed her allegedly doing this on four or five occasions since the beginning of May, police said.

She is being summonsed to court on the charge of shoplifting by recording false value, police said.

OUI arrest

Cohasset Fire notified police about what looked like a disabled vehicle on the side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Crocker Lane at 5:36 p.m. on Saturday (May 19). Police responded and found a 2006 Subaru Impreza on the lawn with a 29-yearold Hull man behind the wheel. The man, who was displaying the signs and symptoms of intoxication, was arrested for drunken driving after a series of field sobriety tests. He was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, marked lanes violation, and negligent operation. Police said he was headed north when he went off the road while trying to make the turn onto Crocker Lane.

Motorcycle

On Sunday (May 20) at about 1:40pm, police were called to the Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue for a report of a motorcyclist down in the roadway. When officers arrived, they found a 52-year-old man from Pembroke, who had been riding his 2011 Honda motorcycle, trying to get back on the bike. He reported to officers that he slid on sand in the roadway, lost his balance, and dumped the bike. He was uninjured and the bike sustained minor damage.

Checks out

Police investigated a report from a concerned caller last week about a suspicious person in the Beechwood Ball Park area in the morning. As it turned out, the man travels to Boston every morning but has a cup of coffee and listens to the radio to let the traffic clear before he goes to work, police said.

Youth group

A 33-year-old Avalon resident asked for extra patrols last week because he was concerned about a group of youths hanging around the general mailbox area on weekend nights.

Backed into

Police said a trash truck backed into a 2007 Nissan Altima in the driveway of a home in the 300 block of Jerusalem Road at around 9:54 a.m. on Tuesday (May 15). Police said the driver, a 19-year-old Plymouth man, was backing up the 1997 International truck when the mishap occurred. The car was pushed into the deck that was also damaged. The car had to be towed.

Minor damage

Police responded to a minor accident at 1:34 p.m. on Sunday (May 20) at West Corner (Jerusalem Road and Hull Street). Police said a 1997 Ford pickup, operated by a 29-year-old Hull man, was pulling out of Victoria's sub shop onto Hull Street when it cut off a 2004 Toyota van, operated by a 49-year-old Quincy man. Neither vehicle was towed; there were no injuries. Police said the only damage was a minor rubber scrape that could be wiped off with cleaning fluid.

Rear-end accident

At 7:49 a.m. on Wednesday (May 16), police investigated a rear-end collision on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 1999 Mercedes sedan, operated by a 17-year-old Scituate boy, rear-ended a 2011 Subaru Outback, operated by a 52-year-old Scituate woman, who had slowed for the light at the train station. Both vehicles were headed north. The teen told police that his floor mat interfered with the brake pedal. He was cited for following too closely. Neither vehicle had to be towed, police said.

Failed to yield

At 2:47 p.m. on Friday (May 18), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Starbucks. Police said a 2004 Buick LeSabre, operated by an 82-year-old Cohasset woman, who was headed north, attempted to turn left into a business and cut off a 1997 Toyota Corolla that was headed south. A 42-year-old Weymouth man operated the Toyota. Both vehicles had to be towed. There were no reported injuries. The Cohasset woman was issued a warning for failure to yield, police said.

Warrant

Cohasset Police assisted Boston Police with a warrant arrest for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon at 5:58 a.m. on Wednesday (May 16). The warrant was served on a 41-year-old Boston man who was staying at an apartment on Jerusalem Road. The man was arrested and booked by Cohasset Police and Boston Police took him back to Boston.

Train incident

Greenbush dispatch called Cohasset Police about a 23-year-old Falmouth woman who became irrational and out-of-control on the train between Scituate and Cohasset last week. Police met the train at the Cohasset station, subdued the woman, who was transported to the hospital. The incident occurred at 5:50 p.m. on Wednesday (May 16).

Walk-through

A concerned caller waited in her car until police arrived and conducted a walk-through of her house on Forest Avenue on Thursday (May 17) at around 4:11 p.m. When she arrived home, the garage door was open and she was not sure if she had closed it.

Police said she did the right thing by calling them and waiting in her car in light of recent break-ins in Cohasset.

Guinea pig

Police rescued a guinea pig that had been abandoned in a shoebox in the Stop & Shop parking lot on Friday (May 18) at around 9:41 a.m. Police brought the guinea pig to Crazy Paws.

No entry

Police believe an animal pushed in the screen in the kitchen of a home on Cedar Acres Lane on Friday (May 18). The caller was concerned, but also thought it may have been an animal. Police said there was food around but the creature did not gain entry.

Warrant

A 43-year-old Hingham woman reported to police that a man she knew was at Starbucks in Cohasset at about 7 p.m. on Friday (May 18) and had a warrant for his arrest. Police followed up and arrested the 36-year-old Hull man on the warrant out of Hingham District Court that was for larceny and forgery.

ELECTION

that some of her supporters have told her it should be nationwide news that "a granny beat someone old enough to be her son." But with all kidding aside, Gjesteby said age should not be a factor.

"Age has nothing whatever to do with it," she said, pointing out that Konrad Adenauer led Germany after World War II until he was 87.

Gjesteby, who sent automated phone calls around town Saturday morning, described her campaign as a "simple one." "I just told people to tell their friends," she said. She said the issue that gave her the edge was her opposition to closing the police station. She said that issue resonated with voters.

Both Carr and Gjesteby had supporters outside the polls Saturday.

Carr quickly congratulated Gjesteby with a handshake within minutes after Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre read the results at Town Hall just after 7 p.m. Selectman Paul Carlson, who was also on hand, also congratulated Gjesteby and told her that he was looking forward to working with her.

Carr said he wanted to thank everyone who came out to vote and especially those who supported him in his campaign.

"I want to congratulate Martha in her successful campaign and wish her much success on the board of selectmen," Carr wrote in an email Wednesday.

Carr said he leaves the board having felt that he represented everyone in town to the best of his ability.

"While we may not have always agreed; I have always had the best interest at heart for our community," he said, adding he plans to stay active in Cohasset affairs.

Carr said he was disappointed with the election turnout. He believes a majority of the parents of school-aged children — many of whom he served with in support of community, educational and sports related causes — did not vote.

"There is an age-old adage that says, 'In all true democracies we get the political leadership we deserve.' It is my sincere hope that we, as working parents of school-aged children, will learn from last Saturday's election that we have taken ourselves out of the decision-making process of the Town," he stated.

In other contests, Debra Krupczak defeated Thom Powers for an open seat on the Board of Assessors and Michael Dickey defeated Roger Lowe to fill a one-year, unexpired term as the Planning Board Associate member.

Krupczak thanked voters for supporting her at the polls. "I am excited to serve the residents of the Town of Cohasset on the Board of Assessors," she said.

The top-voter getter was Lynn DeGiacomo who was running unopposed for one of three seats on the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

St. Pierre said 1280 of the town's 5424 registered voters (about 24 percent) cast ballots on Saturday. Results were read about an hour after the polls closed at 6 p.m.

"My first town election as Town Clerk went smoothly," St. Pierre said. "Contested races brought voters to the polls on a beautiful Saturday. Ballots were tallied and recorded in a timely matter for accuracy."

FORMER CEDARMERE

Planners OK housing project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Toll Brothers home building company will develop the vacant Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street into 41 detached single-family homes.

Last week, the Planning Board closed their public hearing on the proposed Toll Brothers project at the former Cedarmere development site off Beechwood Street. The project, which has been discussed at several public hearings since February, was approved unanimously by the Planning Board.

The Toll Brothers home building company will develop the vacant Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street (formerly known as the "Cedarmere" development) into 41 detached single-family homes.

The project has drawn controversy from abutters who have attended the hearings and appeared before the selectmen stating that the project will create too much traffic at an already dangerous intersection: Beechwood and Route 3A.

"There is a history of three fatalities to date," abutter Nick Staszko told selectmen earlier this month. "It's ranked the most dangerous intersection in Cohasset."

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski provided the selectmen data from a traffic report by the Toll Brothers listing the crash rate calculation as 1.08. Over the past three years, he said, there have been 29 crashes; there was also a double fatality there 10 years ago.

The selectmen discussed sending a liaison to one of the Planning Board hearings to share their traffic concerns. Planning Board chair Stuart Ivimey has said that they are planning to do a corridor study of the Cohasset portion of 3A in the future.

Whether or not the new construction project will create new traffic issues, the Planning Board was obligated to approve the project, since it was legal.

"The Planning Board in this capacity acts as a quasi-judicial board," said Ivimey. "Zoning bylaws and Mass. general laws require us to hold this hearing to determine whether the application complies with the bylaws; that's fundamentally all we do. We have to make sure the applicant complies with the law; if it does, we are duty-bound to do it... To a large degree, we share the frustrations of the abutters, but our ability to influence a developer is limited by what statute lets us do."

AUCTION UPDATE

Town-owned house sold

The waterfront, two-family home at 821 Jerusalem Road received several bids at a town auction on Thurs., May 10. Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski reported last week that the highest bid was for $240,500.

The town originally acquired the house through a tax title foreclosure.

The Board of Selectmen voted during their May 17 meeting to accept the first and second-highest bids for the house.

UPDATE

Fore River Bridge design decided

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Thousands of South Shore commuters pass over the Fore River Bridge every day on their way to work.

While advance notice of bridge openings is often available, sometimes it's not, causing unexpected and frustrating delays during an already difficult commute. Based on 2009 traffic counts, the bridge carries approximately 30,000 vehicles each weekday.

Following a public process, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation has decided upon a vertical lift bridge to replace the current one. Work could begin as early as 2014.

The South Shore Coalition, a sub-region of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, has taken an active interest in plans to build a new bridge and preferred the bascule bridge option.

Coalition members include Hingham, Cohasset, Braintree, Hanover, Duxbury, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate, and Weymouth. Marco Boer is Hingham's representative.

"Given the number of stakeholders, it is not all that surprising that it has taken 10 years to agree upon a design," said Marco Boer, coalition member. "The downside of this democratic process is that this time translates into real cost."

He noted that the price tag for building a new bridge has about doubled since the initial 2002 projection. "The final figure is still not locked in (somewhere between $280 and $350 million are the numbers that are being tossed around)," Boer said.

The bridge will be in place for roughly 70 to 80 years. "While I have seen no indications toward this so far, the scale of the new bridge leaves the door open for [potential] further industrial development, including fuel storage and even a container loading/unloading terminal," Boer said. "If a smaller bascule bridge had been agreed upon, this would have limited development to residential since no large container ships or tankers beyond the current size would have been able to pass through."

Boer speculates that now that the design has been agreed upon, "heading toward 2020 I think we will also see clarity on the development of the Quirk shipyard property. This will set the tone for most of the immediate surroundings, including the Weymouth strip mall buildings on Rte. 3A," he said. "While public opinion in the meetings I have intended strongly favors a look/feel similar to Hingham's shipyard development, ultimately any decisions are based upon return-on-investment for the current owners of the surrounding properties."

For area residents, a new bridge with fewer promised openings will be a plus. "This should help reduce commuting time," Boer said. Furthermore, "Any investment in the region's infrastructure helps to pay dividends years into the future," he continued. "We are all hopeful that an architecturally interesting final design will be selected to help set the tone for future development in the area, a tone similar to the one set by the Hingham Shipyard development."

North Weymouth, Braintree, and Quincy residents have rallied against the proposed vertical design due to potential impacts to their communities. Concerns have been expressed throughout the process that making the channel wider and building a vertical bridge could open the door to other larger industrial activities in the area.

Even if that were not the case, potential aesthetic impacts of building such a large bridge remain a concern for many.

History of bridge

Fore River Bridge was built in 1936 and was a recognized local landmark.
In the late 1990s, it was found to be in a deteriorated state beyond restoration.
Traffic was redirected off the original bridge to the current temporary movable span bridge in 2002.
In 2004, after appropriate historical documentation under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, the 1936 span was demolished.

Fore River Bridge replacement

The South Shore Coalition, of which Hingham is a member, has taken an active interest in the Massachusetts Department of Transportation's plans to build a new bridge.

The goal is to replace the current temporary bridge with a new, movable span that will safely and efficiently meet the needs of roadway users, including motorists, bicyclists, pedestrians, and maritime users.

Following a lengthy public process, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation has committed to a vertical lift bridge. The final design work must be locked in by Jan. 1, 2016 in order to secure the expected 80 percent federal contribution.
(See related story.)

Commitment to vertical lift bridge: 270 feet high with a 250-foot horizontal navigation clearance (an increase over the current 175-foot width). It will be a design/build project.

Timeframe: Construction will likely begin sometime between 2014 and 2016, contingent on the granting of necessary permits from federal and state agencies.

Benefits (according to the Coast Guard): accommodations for next-generation tankers; larger clearance for ships and potentially fewer openings. According to MassDOT, a vertical bridge could help minimize summertime openings since the clearance would allow passage of most recreational sailboats without the need to open the bridge.

Drawbacks: (according to supporters of the bascule bridge alternative – similar to the original drawbridge design): potential negative impacts to the landscape, property values, and economic potential. (The proposed lift bridge would be about 27 stories high.) The Coalition's preferred alternative was the less-intrusive bascule bridge, which the Hingham Selectmen also supported.

Cost: An estimated $280 to $350 million for the vertical lift bridge. The temporary bridge now in place was built at a cost of $58 million.

Funding: Federal dollars under the Accelerated Bridge Program and 20 percent from the state.

Permitting: A long list of permitting agencies, including the Coast Guard, which has recommended widening the existing channel of the Fore River from the current 175-feet to 250 feet in anticipation of larger tankers.

Process: The design team is in the process of developing the 25 percent highway and draft sketch plans. Once completed and approved, these plans will be used in the selection of a best-value design/build team that will ultimately complete the final design and build the new bridge.

The plan calls for two travel lanes, a bicycle-accommodating shoulder, and a sidewalk for each direction of travel.

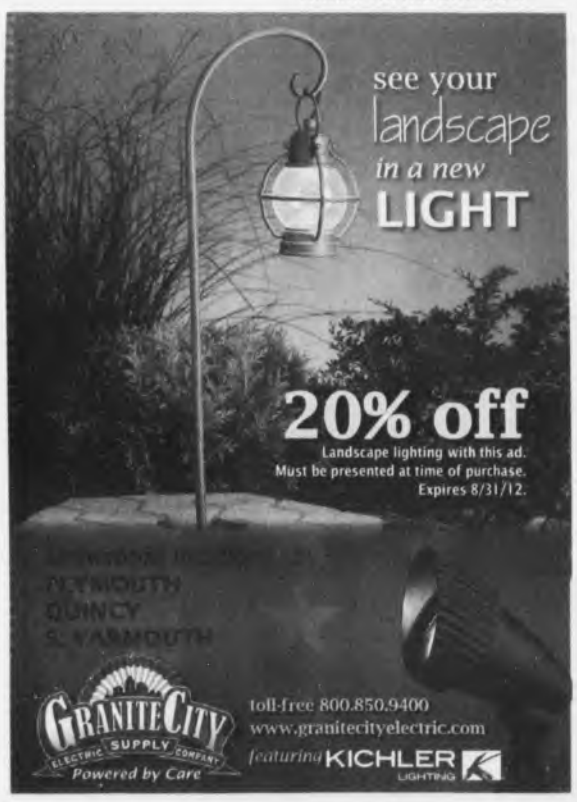
'Movie Queen'



The Friends of Elder Affairs is sponsoring a lunch and a viewing of the "Movie Queen" at the Cohasset Historical Society on Monday, June 5 at 11am. The "Movie Queen" was filmed here in the late 30s with a cast of local town's people. Enjoy the views of Cohasset as it was. You'd be surprised at what has changed and what has stayed the same! Transportation is available through Elder Affairs. Reservations for lunch are required. Call 781-383-9112 to reserve your spot.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. Cell phone photos are not usually the best as they have low resolution.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Happy as clams

Cohasset one of Coastal Living's top 15 'happiest seaside towns'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Congratulate yourselves, Cohasseters — you live in one of the happiest places in the U.S.A.

Coastal Living's June 2012 issue lists the nation's top 15 "happiest seaside towns." Cohasset is ranked number 13, behind Chatham, Mass. (number eight) and Marblehead (number 11) and just ahead of Duxbury (number 14).

The only other state with as many towns on the list is California. The publication's number one pick is Kiawah Island, S.C. (see sidebar for total list).

What makes Cohasset so special? Well, you must already know. Calling it a "secret-treasure town," Coastal Living names Cohasset as one of "the most picturesque (and hard to get to)" towns on the South Shore. Despite the remoteness, the article claims that Cohasseters "are all the luckier for their splendid isolation." The report recommends the Red Lion Inn as the local place to stay.

And how did the magazine writers and editors measure happiness in Cohasset and these other coastal towns? According to USA Today, Coastal Living used a "complicated formula involving editors' picks, the Gallup Healthways Well-Being Index, [the amount of] sunny days, beach quality, low crime, commute time, education of residents and other factors."

Or, perhaps there's just something in the water.

Our Facebook friends agree that Cohasset belongs on this list. The link to USA Today's article on the Coastal Living piece was shared on the Mariner's Facebook wall, and Cohasseters have been commenting on there and on the magazines' websites.

Coastal Living lists the following top 15 happiest seaside towns:

Kiawah Island, S.C.
Naples, Fla.
Sausalito, Calif.
Lake Bluff, Ill. (technically lakeside)
Tiburon, Calif.
Laguna Beach, Calif.
Half Moon Bay, Calif.
Chatham, Mass.
Jupiter, Fla.
Lahaina, Hawaii
Marblehead, Mass.
Stinson Beach, Calif.
Cohasset, Mass.
Duxbury, Mass.
Solomons Island, Md.

"While growing up in Cohasset, I took it for granted. It wasn't until I traveled around to different places that I realized that Cohasset was something special. I now am raising my kids here and tell them frequently how lucky they are to live in such a tremendous town."
– Michael Maher

A few top comments:

"I grew up in Cohasset and raised my kids here. There is no finer or more beautiful place to live. The schools are great and the people friendly." – Curt Smalzel

"'Cohasset' was named by the original settlers, Native Americans, who actually called it 'Quonahassit,' which translates to 'It Rocks' (this isn't true) so yeah, Cohasset is awesome." – Noel Collins

"I so agree...I thought the same thing after returning to Cohasset as an adult... totally different perspective from a parent's and adult perspective...wonderful town." – Caroyln Ray

"While growing up in Cohasset, I took it for granted. It wasn't until I traveled around to different places that I realized that Cohasset was something special. I now am raising my kids here and tell them frequently how lucky they are to live in such a tremendous town." – Michael Maher

"I have had the pleasure of living in two of the towns on this list, Chatham and Cohasset, where I raised my children, and visited Kiawah, Duxbury, and Marblehead. All excellent choices, must have been hard to pick the best, but of course, my vote would be Cohasset!" – Sandra Ford

The Coastal Living ranking is right on the heels of a recent U.S. News report that named Cohasset High the number 10 public high school in the state; nationally, it's number 210.

GIMMIE SHELTER

Donna still purrs like a kitten

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Donna, is a gorgeous adult female Calico. She was unfortunately displaced from her former home and though doing well at the shelter, misses having her own home and her own person. She still purrs like a kitten, when given attention and is playful.

Donna is very good-natured. She qualifies for our senior-to-senior program; should a senior citizen adopt her, they would receive a 50 percent discount. Donna is sure to bring anyone who is lucky enough to adopt her, years of feline companionship.Why not stop by during open hours to meet this friendly feline?

HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Home tips from eco-experts

ERIN DALE

"On the Green Beat" returns this week, following a brief hiatus this month. Once again, we've compiled a list of tips and tricks from a panel of local "eco-experts" who have their fingers on the pulse of the green living movement. If you decide to implement any of these ideas into your lifestyle, let us know! We want to hear from you and what you do to "go green." If you own an eco-conscious business, sell eco-friendly products, or incorporate sustainable practices into your work and/or home life, please contact reporter Erin Dale at edale@wickedlocal.com; you can join our "eco-expert" panel or be featured in a more in-depth interview. If you've got a green story, we want to hear it!

In the meantime, check out our latest round of home tips from this week's panel, consisting of business owners and eco-conscious professionals who work in and around Cohasset. Learn where/how to recycle paint, which types of candles are the most eco-friendly, the least toxic type of wood, and more:

Clean, green candles:

"Soy candles are a great eco-friendly alternative to paraffin candles. Soybeans are a sustainable source grown in the United States. By choosing soy wax, you support American farmers, and when you purchase these try to use local candle makers like Green Koala so you support your community. Soy candles burn 30-50 percent longer and do not contain the toxins that paraffin candles have. Although anytime you have a flame you do have soot, 100 percent pure soy wax candles produce 95 percent less soot if burned properly, so that means less black soot on your walls and ceilings." – Paul Keif, owner, Green Koala (Marshfield), www.greenkoala.net

Recycling paint:

"We recently found a fantastic resource for recycling paint called Earth 911 at Earth911.com. This site shows you where you can recycle paint on the South Shore and it is broken down by types of products and types of paints that can be processed at each location. You can also reference other types of recycling like household items and construction items. Earth 911 has great editorial articles that may be of interest as well." – James Wolfe, owner, Wolfe Painting Company (Cohasset), www.wolfepaintingco.com

Sustainably harvested wood:

"Select solid woods harvested from sustainably managed forests, when possible, for furniture or cabinetry, rather than pressed woods or composites that may contain formaldehyde or other chemicals that may be toxic and hazardous to your health. When purchasing, consider the 'off gassing' of materials used in the products purchased. These harmful gasses are often always not considered when bringing into the home or office." – Matt Weaver, Green Designee/National Association of Realtors, Jack Conway Realtor, www.jackconway.com

Go local:

"This week, I thought would share an interesting and easy way to 'think green' when purchasing new items. If you are choosing products to put in your home, try to stay local and buy products manufactured within 500 miles or less. If it has come from China, you are using a lot more energy getting it to your house than if you chose something made just down the road or 100 miles down the road." – Donna Morgan, owner, Donna Morgan Interior Design (Cohasset), dmorgandesign@hotmail.com

Something old, something new:

"We recently designed for a bride who wanted to use some milk vases that were a family heirloom. Her style and vision was contemporary, so the milk vases really did not fit with that. By wire-wrapping the vases and using simple blossoms like Spider Mums, we were able to achieve a modern look. A great way to recycle antiques or heirlooms and achieve a modern look is to blend them with contemporary elements that have clean lines and bold colors." – Kelly Dolloff, owner/designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio (Marshfield, Boston), www.artisticblossoms.com

MEMORIAL DAY

Joan Edmonds Lawrence, who grew up in Cohasset, has handcrafted this memorial quilt to honor veterans. COURTESY PHOTO

Quilt commemorates fallen veterans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Joan Edmonds Lawrence, a Cohasset native and wife of Vietnam Air Force veteran Paul, has handcrafted a memorial quilt to honor Paul and other veterans who died as a result of their military service.

In 1968, Paul and Joan Lawrence tied the knot in Cohasset. The two graduated from Cohasset High just a few years earlier, Paul in '63 and Joan in '64. The couple had settled in South Dakota when Paul, a member of the Air Force, was sent to serve in Vietnam.

Paul returned home after 13 months at Pleiku airbase; Joan's sister Sheila, an army nurse, was in Qui Nhon, Vietnam at the same time. While both of Joan's family members came back to her safe and sound, an unknown danger still loomed ahead.

Paul and Joan enjoyed 34 years together as husband and wife before he succumbed in 2002 to cancer caused by exposure to the herbicide, Agent Orange, while in Vietnam.

"These things aren't talked about anymore," said Joan in a phone call from her home in Colorado, the state where she and Paul settled after he returned from Vietnam. "Vietnam isn't talked about anymore." It's time, said Joan, "to acknowledge veterans who died after the fact."

This year, Cohasset's annual Memorial Day observance will pay special recognition to veterans who died from the after-effects of war, whether from injuries, illness or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) as a result of their service. The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee will unveil a bronze plaque; Sheila will lead the dedication.

Joan will join her sister at Monday's ceremony. Paul is buried in Cohasset, along with his parents and grandparents, she said, adding that she comes back to Cohasset a few times a year to visit and walk the beach.

Glenn Pratt, chairman of the Veterans' Service Committee, said that it was time to add to Cohasset's memorial at the harbor.

"There are a growing number of veterans that have died as a result of their service in a combat war zone," said Pratt. "These brave men and women are remembered on a Memorial near the Vietnam Wall in Washington D.C. A number of Cohasset Veterans have died as a result of their service, and we are going to remember their sacrifice at Veterans Park on the harbor."

Marine Colonel Ben Watson, the keynote speaker at Monday's Memorial Day ceremony, will address these veterans during his speech, Pratt said.

Joan's quilt, resplendent in red, white and blue stars and stripes, will be part of the new memorial. The widow donated her handiwork to the Veterans Memorial Committee for them to do with as they please, she said.

Pratt said that they might conduct a silent auction for the quilt in order to raise money for the committee and awareness for veterans. He is hoping that perhaps someone will make a donation but allow the quilt to be kept by the Cohasset Historical Society. For now, the quilt will be on display at the Historical Society until the committee decides whether or not to auction it.

Joan said that if the quilt stays in the Historical Society, she would be happy to craft and donate a second quilt for someone to bid on in order to raise funds for the committee.

"For one of my quilts to hang there would be an honor," Joan said of the Historical Society. "If they just want to keep it and hang it, I'm ok with that." An avid quilter, she added that she is ready to create a new one: "I like making them."

It's one way she keeps the memory of her husband alive, a decade after his passing. Joan said that she and Paul used to quilt together.

"I wasn't good with measurements," Joan shared. "When I would design a quilt, he would measure it. Paul was color-blind, and when he would tell me where the patterns should go, I would say, 'You can't see those colors!' It was an inside joke with us."

The couple that quilted together also cycled together, which is one reason Joan said they stayed in Colorado: to cycle, ski and enjoy an outdoorsy lifestyle. Joan said that after learning of Paul's cancer diagnosis, the pair maintained their active routine until he passed away.

"We still fished and cycled," said Joan. "We lived life."

Joan, an x-ray technician, continues to cycle and live her life, recently completing a three-week cycling trip to Vietnam this past December and January. She had the opportunity to see the country where her husband was stationed through a different lens than he did as a serviceman.

"When Paul came home," said Joan, "he never talked about Vietnam; neither did Sheila."

Joan decided to experience Vietnam for herself. Sheila gave her some pointers.

"When I was getting ready to go to Vietnam," said Joan, "she wrote to me, 'I hope you see the beauty of the country and the people. Prior to now they have suffered so much under foreign rule/invasion. Sad for all of us who played a role...'

"It was the most warming country I have ever experienced," Joan said, explaining that she and Paul had cycled several countries together, including England, Ireland and Portugal. "The people are wonderful. I traveled independently, and I was never afraid... I stayed with a family south of Saigon and experienced their day-to-day life.

"It was good for me to see the country where my husband was for 13 months," Joan continued. "It was a beautiful country; I would go back in a heartbeat."

Joan added that if Paul had been there with her, he too would have enjoyed experiencing post-war Vietnam.

"I think if Paul were still alive and we experienced this trip together, he would've also felt the love of the country and the people, and to give them all the respect they deserve for moving on and living their lives to the fullest," said Joan. "Paul did not focus on the chemical dioxin type of cancer he ended up with. He – we – and our boys lived our lives, enjoying the outdoors."

Pilgrim Bank transforms iconic building

Opens headquarters at 40 S. Main St.

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset's hometown bank is now in its new home and open for business. Yesterday marked the first day of welcoming customers to Pilgrim Bank's newly renovated building at 40 South Main Street, just one storefront down from their former location. Bank staff worked tirelessly between closing hours on Wednesday and opening hours Thursday to ensure a seamless transition.

"We are happy to be settled in to our new World Headquarters," says Frank Campbell, bank CEO. "We love being part of the community and look forward to another 96 years of doing business in this new space."

To celebrate its founding in Cohasset in 1916, Pilgrim Bank is giving out goody bags to represent each year they have served the South Shore community. The bags will contain Pilgrim "goodies" and "World Headquarters" T-shirts to be given to the first 96 customers who stop in.

Yesterday's "soft" opening will be a pre-cursor to the official celebrations, which will take place sometime in June.

Nearly two years ago Pilgrim Bank purchased the Cohasset Hardware building from the Watson Family who ran the business since the 1920's. The building itself dates back to 1857. The firm of Sheskey Architects in Quincy, Mass. did the design for the renovation of the property. Garry Gardner was the lead architect with Sheskey and also a Cohasset resident. Gardner was responsible for working with the bank's Building Committee to design a storefront and interior that took into account the overall look and feel of the village. Mike Holland of Holland Construction in Weymouth was the general contractor and Colin Dutton of PM-C Consulting in Hingham was the primary construction liaison who oversaw and coordinated the day to day renovation process.

The Building Committee, consisting of bank board members and Cohasset residents, Brian Noonan, Mary Granville and Melissa Browne, put great thought into every detail of the new space and kept with the theme of keeping it local. The artwork that adorns all floors of the building has local ties. Focus Gallery supplied photos from several area photographers. In addition, the walls are also filled with the original paintings of several Cohasset artists including Alix White, Tina Watson and JoAnne Chittick.

In keeping with the history of the building, Pilgrim went to great lengths to keep and incorporate as much of the building's history as they could while also making it a beautiful and useful space for the bank. Examples of the building's past can be found from floor to ceiling. The 3-foot wide expanse of wood floor that surrounds the front of the tellers' counter is made of original restored hardware store floorboards. The most recognizable pieces of history are the cleaned and refurbished signs in the main lobby from the filming of the movie, "Witches of Eastwick" and the original Cohasset Hardware Store sign, which has been completely repainted. These were restored by Hassan Signs of Cohasset.

There are also small "historical" details, like the red and green "ship's" lights that were restored by Flemings and hang at their former location at the front of the building. "Onion" lamps from the store were also used as lighting in various locations throughout the building. The original flagpole has been restored by Eagle Flag of Cohasset and will be re-installed at the front of the building.

"As I said when we purchased this property, this building is a town landmark and we wanted to treat it as such throughout all the phases of design," says Campbell. "We are the most prominent building that residents and visitors see when they enter the village and we felt a great responsibility to make it something that everyone can be proud of."

Campbell's hope for the new building is not simply that business will continue to thrive at 40 South Main, he is hopeful that the building will eventually find it's place within the vernacular of local residents and finally replace the "hardware store" when out of town visitors ask for driving directions. If you want to know how to get to the Harbor? Just take a left at Pilgrim Bank.

The old building is now available for lease. For information contact Frank Campbell at 781-383-0541.

Founded in 1916, Pilgrim Bank is committed to giving local residents the best banking value around. As a mutual institution, Pilgrim Bank is owned by its depositors, not by stockholders, which allows it to remain focused on providing a superior level of customer service. The commitment to quality is known as the "Pilgrim Difference." Pilgrim Bank has two branches in Cohasset, and one in Marion, Mass. For more information visit bankpilgrim.com

OUR VIEW

Missing them still

On Memorial Day, as always, I remember two young men: John Lazarovich and Joe Hunt. They were classmates of mine at Scituate High School and members of the SHS Class of 1966.

In our sophomore year, I recall our English teacher asking the class if anyone knew anyone serving in Vietnam. No one raised his or her hand. Soon, that all changed.

John (known affectionately as "Laz") was killed on Dec. 4, 1967. He was a lance corporal with the US Marines. He was just 19 years old. His name is on wall panel 31E, wall line 036 on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C.

A little more than a month later, on Jan. 27, 1968, Joe was killed. He was a corporal with the Marines. He was just 20 years old. His name is on wall panel 35E, line 047 on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Laz and Joe still live within the hearts and minds of the SHS Class of 1966. They had ready smiles and were full of fun. In our class yearbook and in our memories, they are still young. We miss them still.

All wars carry a heavy toll. Many of the members of the Scituate High School Class of 1966 had fathers that served in World War II and/or Korea. We knew about war, but we had not experienced it ourselves until Vietnam.

The nightly news brought the Vietnam War into our homes, but the loss of our classmates made it all too real.

During the Vietnam War, the Town of Cohasset lost eight men: including Peter J. Albiani Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone and Dennis J. Reardon. The worst eight months of Vietnam for Cohasset were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals.

As a mother, I had the experience of many sleepless nights while both my sons served in Iraq, one in 2003 just after the invasion and the other during the surge in 2007. My nephew served in the years in between. I will be eternally grateful that they all came home safely.

It is hard to believe so many years have passed since my high school graduation in 1966 until one realizes a first-class stamp was just 5 cents back then.

The families of the 58,000 whose names are on the Vietnam Memorial have had an empty chair at the dinner table on holidays and at family gatherings all these many years.

On Monday, many people like me will be thinking about their classmates, friends or relatives who were killed in wartime.

We need to always remember those we have lost; we need to honor them; and we need to miss them still.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Refresher course on democracy needed

After reading your cover story last week about the difficulties the Mariner has had in accessing the weekly correspondence packet that includes letters, minutes, state correspondence, correspondence from other town boards, department reports, and the Town Manager report, among others (all public records), I thought of a few quotes from Thomas Jefferson that I used to discuss with my students when I was teaching middle school civics. There are two quotes I thought were worth sharing, and I believe the second is of particular relevance to this town at this time. Perhaps the Town Manager and Selectmen need a refresher course on the tenets upon which this country was formed. I'm sure the middle and high school have some texts they could borrow.

"The basis of our governments being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right; and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

— Thomas Jefferson to Edward Carrington, 1787.

"No experiment can be more interesting than that we are now trying, and which we trust will end in establishing the fact, that man may be governed by reason and truth. Our first object should therefore be, to leave open to him all the avenues to truth. The most effectual hitherto found, is the freedom of the press. It is, therefore, the first shut up by those who fear the investigation of their actions."

— Thomas Jefferson to John Tyler, 1804

Appreciates support, looking ahead

I wish to thank the voters and citizens who supported my successful race for selectman. It was exciting. However, not enough voters came to the polls for all the candidates and that is sad for democracy.

Cohasset has many tough decisions in the next year: including hiring a new town manager, water and sewer issues, the senior center and reconsideration of the plan to close the police station.

Let's make sure that everyone comes to the next Town Meeting with a good knowledge of the articles presented and have the session bursting at the seams with excited voters.

In terms of the Town Election, whether you voted for winners or losers, at this time it is critical for all to come together with comity for a brighter and more informed community.

No better system for good governance

In reflecting on this over the last few days it is impressive how orderly and well the two town meetings and contested selectman and other races went — particularly in light of all the previous tension and sometimes chaos. In the end, as a community, we successfully made all the decisions that needed to be made and while probably no one got everything they wanted, the Town of Cohasset has successfully governed itself and we should now all move forward with a spirit of implementing the Town's legitimately expressed will.

I am actually rather optimistic about our continued great prospects as a community. Democracy is messy but there still is no better system for good governance and it works very well in Cohasset in my view.

CPC chairman reflects on Town Meeting

To the Town Meeting attendees,

On behalf of the Community Preservation Committee, I would like to say thank you for your support of the CPC articles that were on the Town Warrant. I would like also to thank those who didn't support our proposals, both sides made valid points, and voted what they thought was best for the Town. While Town Meeting can be frustrating at times, your involvement in making this simple, basic form of democracy work is very important. Your willingness to give up your time to go to Town Meeting is what makes Cohasset the town that it is.

The CPC is looking forward to working with the many groups in town who may be contemplating projects that could benefit from CPC involvement, and urge you to contact us to see where we may be able to assist in the form of funding. We may not be able to help in some cases, but we will make every effort that we can to help as many projects that fit within the CPC guidelines.

Thanks again for taking the time to help make Cohasset the vibrant community that we all love. To those who haven't attended a Town Meeting, I would urge you to do so. There are many committees in town that can use volunteers and I would urge you to avail yourself of that opportunity as well. The town is lucky to have the pool of talent that it has. See if your particular talent can be used to help. It may drive you crazy at times, but it is what makes this town the wonderful place it is.

'It is time to pass the torch'

This weekend as we celebrate the men and women who made our democracy possible, as both a man who had the opportunity to serve his country as an officer in the United States Army and his community as Town Manager, Bernadette and I would like to thank our many friends as well as my co-workers in Cohasset.

Since my removal as Town Manager on March 19, I pledged to continue to serve Cohasset as a private citizen speaking up on important issues whether it be on water, the need for a public works department, pending matters before the DEP, the importance of keeping the police station open, open and honest government and the priority of treating our employees as the dedicated professionals that they are. I pledged to stand up for what I believed was right so long as I was a resident.

On May 24, my wife and I moved from Cohasset, which in some quarters will spark rejoicing and while in others regret. In any event, it's time to pass the torch and say farewell.

I have been privileged to be in public service all of my life —serving my country as an Army Judge Advocate officer, my commonwealth as an Assistant District Attorney and my four communities as either Town Manager or Town Administrator. My mentor, the late Senator Ted Kennedy, once told me, "Mike, you don't only fight the fights you can win — you fight the fights that need fighting." This is how I have always approached my duties as a public servant.

I am proud of my tenure in Cohasset albeit brief and the many issues we fought for together. I have no regrets but only fond memories, which Bernadette and I will always cherish.

Good bye and may God bless Cohasset.

Mike and Bernadette Coughlin

Sunday Author Talks a hit!

On May 6, Cohasset Library's "Sunday AuthorTalks" finished its inaugural season on a high note with author Matthew Pearl, who gave a fascinating talk about the research for his latest book, The Technologists.

Library trustees and Director Jackie Rafferty would like to thank the many people from the community who made this season's "Sunday AuthorTalks" possible: Cohasset Rotary Club for their generous sponsorship; Bruce Sinclair, owner of A Taste of Wine and Spirits, for his thoughtful, ample wine contributions for each of the eight events; Derek and Butch at the town Facilities Department for their reliability on the first weekend of every month and their cheerful willingness to lend a hand for last minute venue changes; the Cohasset Historical Society for their printing and ticket help; the Program Committee for the vision that made this all possible and their commitment to make each event special; Mary Ford, who made certain that the news got out; Friends of the library; and everyone who attended the events and showed their enthusiasm and support for the program.

Mark your calendars for Oct. 6, 2012, the first of next season's "Sunday AuthorTalks," and watch for the announcement of author participants.

HEALTH NOTES

Share your ideas with us

STEVE BOBO

Gradual alterations of our society, our Town and the things we expect to change as a result of the last election have altered perception of the Health Notes column in terms of what we should expect from health care providers and how and where we can expect such service. As a result of changes in our daily lives, factors affecting our health have taken on a different character and are no longer strictly related to medical condition but on a vast number of effects other than clinical matters. We depend on you, the readers, to whom we're grateful for your kind suggested comments. We welcome our readers important suggestions. First off, lets accept that Health Notes is entering a new phase – with several changes to the nuts and bolts of the BoH – doubtless in keeping with organizational alterations with the medical profession at large.

We have always paid casual attention to the varied and mostly polite comments we've received, but hereafter, we intend to be particularly attentive and have prepared a listing of topics which we believe are important and need, at some time, to be covered including:

• Recent changes to the Medical System — We're learning frightening facts about why everything costs so much. Consider a friend who's 94; tells me she's in perfect health; sees her doctor regularly, has little need for help from anybody. Was sent to to spend two nights and days in a hospital bed complaining to the staff there was nothing wrong with her. Every doctor agreed when each examined her. When is it necessary to have a checkup?

• Media coverage, especially of the recent H1N1virus, is now about the best example of the premise that the present condition of a situation has little to do with its impact on an individual. Don't use hearsay. Get expert timely information, but qualify it with a question or two about sources and relevance to your specific concerns. Modern illnesses now have more complications, it's necessary to conclude that the treatment is accompanied by more complications than a benign examination and then neglect.

• A problem when it occurs, deserves questions about how serious is your own experience as compared to others you know with the same complaint. The new paradigm is that some ailments are sometimes treatable but sometimes their solution is not always your best choice.

• Interval between occurrences. Frequently a decision to act depends on how often the problem arises. What's done about it frequently awaits the optimistic view that it may go away by itself. Often the optimistic assessment merely postpones a decision to a pathway for a more serious outcome.

• Solutions Change: Old solutions can become new problems. Take for example Acetomenophens like Tylenol. It used to be that the doctor would say take two aspirins and call me in the morning. Now, Aspirin is outré. Doctors may have stopped saying 'take two etc. etc.'Damage to the liver caused, in some part by broad use of acetomenophens, particularly among children and lower income people has burgeoned for years.

• Weight gain or loss. Lets face it, fat goes on in places no one wants it, like arteries and in front, or other unattractive places and several industries are kept busy trying to redistribute it. We all know the problem and its solution, and we attack it in different ways with varying frequency and success.

• Location Location: Cohasset has health concerns that may be different from those elsewhere. For example, asthma is prevalent in urban areas and sun damage is more likely where occupations are practiced outside. Would that we could always be assured of a climate adapted to our health needs. Take real care about ailments that accompany a trip, as –to Florida. Most snow birds are familiar with infirmities accompanying caused by the infirmities accompanying climate change and know how to cope.

When dealing with any practitioner, their response to you may center on the solution to your problem, but they also have the same real life issues most of us have, those of preserving their livelyhood, investing wisely, keeping current on the latest developments in their field and balancing their interests against those of their patients and others with whom they may be associated. Tell us of matters you'd like discussed.

FOR THE RECORD

A new generation of journalists

It reminded me of the experience that got me interested in newspapers, which came in seventh grade. I had two buddies who were also interested and a teacher willing to work with us.

GREGORY MATHIS

The questions came fast and furious from this curious group of fourth-grade students.

How long have you been working in the newspaper business?

How many newspapers do you do?

How long does it take to put a newspaper together?

How many hours a day do you work?

What was your favorite story?

When did you know you wanted to be in newspapers?

I had just as many questions for them. After all, I was visiting to find out about their class project, which was putting together a school newspaper.

The students proved to be very knowledgeable about current events and the types of stories they were working on for the newspaper. The class has been divided into departments and has obviously spent a lot of time discussing what makes a story newsworthy. Their ideas are timely, relevant for their age group and beyond, and very well thought out.

One of the students is working on a story about a Titanic 2 project being funded by an Australian billionaire. According to an announcement made at the end of April, a company in China is set to begin construction on a near replica Titanic in 2013, with the maiden voyage set for 2016. The student explained the story is timely because of the recent 100-year remembrance of the sinking of the original Titanic.

Other relevant stories include a review of "The Hunger Games" trilogy, as well as looking at the health effects of playing too many video games. There will also be a review of some of the hot, new video games hitting the stores.

A writer for the local news department is working on a story about a Peace Garden being built at the school by one of the dads.

Sports reporters are writing about the Junior Seau tragedy, the effect Tim Tebow will have on the Jets next season, and a soccer fan is writing about his favorite team, Chelsea, winning the European Cup in the Champions League across the pond. The discussion about his story led to an interesting brainstorming about headlines as we tried to work with alliteration using Chelsea, Champions and Cup as the main words.

Some students are producing comics for the newspaper and gave me a copy to keep.

It was a thrill to see fourth-graders excited about writing and newspapers.

It reminded me of the experience that got me interested in newspapers, which came in seventh grade. I had two buddies who were also interested and a teacher willing to work with us. The Apollo Messenger, which was named for our "house" at school, mostly covered stories about classmates, teachers and our tremendous intramural success, especially intramural floor hockey. The paper was put together long before computers, so there was no fancy design or creative use of fonts, just prose typed onto a sheet of paper that could be used with a mimeograph machine. How times have changed, but that experience of writing and producing a newspaper for classmates and teachers certainly put the wheels in motion for me to find a career that I've thoroughly enjoyed.

I'm hoping the same bug bites some of the fourth-graders I visited last week and their positive experience at such a young age paves the way for a new generation of journalists.

Summer reading campaign launched

Looking for a reason to encourage kids to hit the books this summer? How about the chance to win a new bike or a gift card for summer fun? Dependable Cleaners has kicked off its 14th annual Read to Ride program designed to encourage students to keep up the momentum of school while fostering the love of reading and staying healthy during summer vacation. Students ages 6 through 15 have the chance to win a bike or another prize for every book they read. Since the program's inception in 1999, more than 59,000 books have been read.

Read to Ride will continue through Aug. 13. Participation in Read to Ride is easy. For every book a child reads, they fill out an entry form and submit it at any Dependable Cleaners location.

One grand prizewinner will be drawn each Monday from June 4 through Aug. 13, except for July 2. The grand prizewinners will receive a new bike and helmet. Two additional winners will receive a gift card to a local sporting goods store or activity in Greater Boston. A full list of Read to Ride partners, terms and conditions and a printable entry form will be accessible online at www.DependableCleaners.com/read-ride.

CALLING ALL VETERANS

Cohasset vet was glider pilot

RONALD WHEATLEY

John Coe, a long time resident of Cohasset, was born in Medford in 1921. His family moved to New Jersey where he spent his early years. Later he returned to Massachusetts where he attended the Lenox School, in Lenox.

When Coe graduated from high school in 1942, the world was at war. He worked for a period after graduation as a proofreader in New Jersey. While working there he enlisted in the Army on Jan 28, 1943.

"I wanted to be a paratrooper but after basic training the processing officer looked at me and said, "You are too skinny." According to Army records, Coe was 6'2" and 155 pounds at that time.

"But they are looking now for glider pilots."

Coe qualified for training at the First Allied Airborne School – Advanced Glider School at Dalhart, Texas.

"We started out training as pilots in small single engine airplanes and then we moved on to flying twin engine aircraft." According to Coe the training in powered aircraft was specifically for the purpose of transitioning to glider pilot. "And that is how I became a glider pilot." Coe was commissioned as a Flight Officer upon graduation from Advanced Glider School.

Coe's stateside training lasted a total of 6 months and 15 days. He would spend the next 2 years, 5 months and 3 days serving in Africa and Europe until war's end.

On May 13, 1943, Coe and his group shipped out for North Africa. In his book "On Wings of Troop Carriers in World War II," author Robert E. Callahan includes "Flt O. John W. Coe" in his list of the 50th Troop Carrier Squadron Personnel on board the U.S.S. West Point to Africa.

The first use of gliders by the U. S. Army in combat operations was the invasion of Sicily in July 1943. A combination, of navigational errors, inexperience, friendly fire from ships and high winds played havoc on the initial part of the operation. Less than half of the 137 gliders involved got to their landing zones. Many landed in the sea with a total loss of 605 personnel. The disaster was one of the worst of the war leading the Supreme Allied Commander, General Eisenhower, ready to scrap using airborne troops altogether. However, other generals persuaded him to change his mind allowing the invasion to continue. Coe would be part of that as a lone pilot of a cargo glider.

"From North Africa we were towed by a C-47 across the Mediterranean to Sicily landing near Salerno. The gliders were designed to come in a day or two after the paratroopers. We would bring in Jeeps, Howitzers and supplies. And in one invasion we brought in troops."

Glider Pilot John Coe in England circa 1944.
COURTESY PHOTO

The airborne component of the D-Day invasion was called "Operation Neptune." Coe was selected to fly his glider across the Channel to France on the fourth day of the invasion in support of elements of the 82nd and 101st airborne troops that preceded them. During these operations the gliders, according to an eyewitness, "did not actually land but crashed more or less successfully."

After D-Day the gliders continued to support the troops as they moved through France. By Aug. 15, 1944, Coe was in support of the airborne units in southern France in "Operation Dragoon." He recalls a very hard landing there while carrying 13 troops.

"The wind was bad and I crashed into a tree. I was a mess. Blood all over the place. I was the only one hurt. I was stumbling around and one of the troops was surprised. When he saw me, he said, 'We thought you were dead.' The troops were OK and they got me to a first aid station, but it was full of injured paratroopers so I was evacuated to Gibraltar. I ended up in the hospital in England and after convalescing I went back to flying the glider."

Readers familiar with the book or movie version entitled "A Bridge too Far," know that the story is based on the allied "Operation Market Garden." The ill-fated invasion of German occupied Holland took place in September 1944, and the allies suffered disastrous losses. Coe participated in that campaign flying a glider being towed from England.

"I was shot at over the Channel, but I was lucky I made a good landing there (Holland), near Eindhoven. A published document "Riviera Ramblings" picks up what happened next: "John W. Coe and I had planned to get in on the fighting, so when I learned of the coming attack I picked up Coe at the aid station. As we neared the town we started climbing a hill that had a walled cemetery on its crest. Someone from behind yelled 'down' and we hit the dirt – we were caught in a cross fire from machine guns. A lot of calls for medics here. Cross fire very effective – we were pinned down – bullets were buzzing around like a swarm of bees. "Having survived the landing and German attack they met people of the occupied country.

"The Dutch were so glad to see us." Not long after that Coe was evacuated from Holland and returned to England.

But Coe's war was not over. He participated in Operation Varsity, which was the crossing of the Rhine in March 1945.

Coe received many citations and awards for his service. He was discharged as a 1st Lieutenant. Of his service he said: "I enjoyed every minute flying the glider."

Following the war, Coe went to Layette College in eastern Pennsylvania on the GI Bill graduating in 1949 with a degree in English. He worked as a salesman for Remington Rand and later he had his own business as a manufacturers' representative.

He and his wife Marcia live in Cohasset. They have a son, Charles Jr., a Lt. Colonel optometrist in the Army serving in Korea, and a daughter, Mary Connolly, who lives in California with her husband, Joe, their three children and one grandchild. Marcia, a new great grandmother, plays tennis at the Scituate Racket & Fitness Club.

"I had two lucky things in my life," Coe said, "I made it through the war and I met and married Marcia."

Ronald Wheatley is at the author of the award winning novel "A Song of Africa."

DAY TWO

Town Meeting approved:

- Land and easement transfers for the proposed $4 million senior center project;
- Five zoning bylaw amendments that changed definitions for walls/fences and home occupations;
- A $15,000 appropriation to pay for a feasibility study to mitigate flooding at Treat's Pond;
- Approving the Water Enterprise Fund Fiscal 2013 budget of $4,263,830;
- A town bylaw amendment for Annual Town Meeting that allows the Board of Selectmen to set the Town Meeting date by Dec. 31 of the preceding year rather than Dec. 1, and to schedule the meeting on any day of the week between March and May.

An article concerning a new water plant operations contract was indefinitely postponed. As the Water Commission plans to choose an operator and ink a two-year contract with a possible three-year extension, Town Meeting was not needed to approve a new contract; the water department would only need Town Meeting approval if a contract is for five years or longer, interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained to voters. The water commission received several bids for operations and began reviewing these on Friday; they will choose a firm later this week (see related story).

Newly elected selectman Martha Gjesteby, who previously served three terms on the board of selectmen in the '90s, made her debut on the current board of selectmen at Monday's Town Meeting. In a surprise upset last Saturday, Gjesteby beat incumbent Ted Carr, who previously served two three-year terms on the board and spent this past year as chair. Gjesteby was not introduced at the meeting as a new member of the board, but introduced herself during the vote on the CPC's open space article. Gjesteby announced that since she was not on the board when the selectmen voted whether to recommend the article for Town Meeting, the selectmen's vote changed from 3-2 against to 3-2 in favor of purchasing the open space.

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed without cause in March, attended both days of Town Meeting. Coughlin has continued to live in town but announced that he is moving from the area later this week. Following the postponement of the water contract article, Coughlin asked for a few moments to address Town Meeting as a citizen and thanked the community for his time in Cohasset. Town Moderator Dan Evans told the former town manager that he could have "a few seconds." Coughlin agreed and gave a short statement, addressing both his "friends and foes."

"I'm leaving Cohasset with no regrets and fond memories," said Coughlin, adding that he is leaving town "in the same way I entered... concerned with water issues." During Coughlin's six months as Town Manager, he became embattled with the water commissioners over the future of the Cohasset water system. He told Town Meeting that Cohasset citizens should get to vote on the water contract, whether it's a short-term agreement or not.

"Officials need information," said Coughlin. "Every person in this room is an official."

Selectmen Fred Koed and Diane Kennedy listen carefully during the meeting.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia talks with Rep. Stephen Lynch before the first session of Town Meeting on May 12.

Former Selectman Ronnie McMorris poses questions.

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin voices his vote at Town Meeting.

Former Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts asks questions.

Noteworthy quotes from Town Meeting, day two

On the senior center land swap:

"The Board of Selectmen unanimously approved this article. We feel the land transfers are critical to piecing together a conforming property for the proposed senior center."
— Selectman Diane Kennedy

"The Advisory Committee is not against the senior center; we voted against the process. We may be heading down a path where we put the cart before the horse. We have not yet been given a chance as a town to vote whether the town wishes to fund a senior center. We have not seen the results and costs of the feasibility study [Special Town Meeting approved in Dec.]. Why is the transfer necessary today? I believe the town should vote the concept of the senior center in its entirety, not on a piecemeal basis."
— Brian Scholl, Advisory Committee

"I strongly suggest passing this article. We don't have a plot we can physically build anything on. We hope to start an aggressive fundraising campaign... we're not asking the town for a cent, thanks to the Social Service League for ponying up over $1 million. The community should also have the opportunity to pony up, if you will... There is a Memorandum of Understanding that if al things don't go well, everything is as it was. All you're doing tonight is authorizing the Board of Selectmen, who has unanimously supported this article, to make some transactions of this land so we have a lot to build on. We did a feasibility study before; I feel like we know what we need in Cohasset. Every town that's active with seniors is doing something for its seniors; don't let Cohasset be the only South Shore town that does nothing."
— John Campbell, chairman of Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs

On the CPC church-state debate:

"Recently, the [First Parish] Unitarian Church asked us to consider granting a $65,000 funding grant to basically restore the windows in the Meeting House in the middle of the common... I'm grateful they asked the CPC for help. There was some hesitation at the beginning, on the basis of the separation of church and state. After much talk, we concluded that it does not violate the constitution... The federal government uses federal money to maintain national parks property... important to the history of America through its architecture. I believe the Meeting House is one of those. The Declaration of Independence was read in that building. It's hard to argue that it's not the most historic building in Cohasset. It is the kingpin of Cohasset common; it is Cohasset common. And it's there for all of us. There are so few artifacts of New England left like that."
— Susan Hoadley, CPC member and architect

"The Advisory Committee voted 3-2 against passage of this article. It wasn't about the value of the building or the separation of church and state... it's setting a precedent to use tax dollars to repair a private building. There's deferred maintenance on buildings the town owns. If we start on this path, it will open the gate for other private projects."
— Chris Blackburn, Advisory Committee

"It's a beautiful building, I agree; historically, it's a great project... but the town should not be writing the check. The government should not be involved in church issues... If you want to claim you're exempt from Mass. law, you have to show the exemption. The church website celebrates the separation of church and state. This would break 180 years of that and would be the first time in Cohasset... The church has other funds — grants, the congregation, 100 percent of the revenue of the cell tower... the church already put a fiberglass spike on the roof to house a cell tower... They should do it the old-fashioned way, before the CPC was here. If they take that route, I will be the first to contribute my own check."
— Howie Altholtz, attorney

"This [First Parish] is the first meeting place of this body, Cohasset Town Meeting. It's our heritage, it's where we are. In saving this building, we're not talking about who's in the building or what they're using it for— we're saving our heritage; that's what's important here."
— Richard Silvia

On acquiring new open space:

"The CPC funds will provide a conservation restriction to this property, and it will remain undeveloped indefinitely. This just continues the cooperative arrangement between the Cohasset Conservation Trust and the town, protecting our wetlands and open space."
— Jeff Wall, director of the Cohasset Conservation Trust

"Although preservation is a good thing and I agree with the general concept, this in no danger of development... There's no reason for town funds to be expended on land that cannot be built upon."
— Andrew Willard, Advisory Committee

"We've had lots of open land that couldn't be developed that was developed. We have a history of having deep pockets and short arms. The town's getting smaller and smaller in the rural way of life; it's long gone... I really urge you to vote to pick up that piece of land before it's gone."
— Francis Collins

On selling cigarettes in Cohasset:

"Tobacco kills... Secondhand smoke is a major issue in terms of public health... Society has a responsibility to limit exposure and protect public health... This [proposed ban in pharmacies] is not new; 32 communities in Mass. – four of the largest cities, Boston, Springfield, Worcester and Lowell – all have this in place. Three hundred pharmacies are affected... with no averse effects to the economic impact."
— Robin Lawrence, Cohasset Board of Health

"It's unfair to these stores; it should be for all stores in Cohasset, not just a selected few."
— Selectman Leland Jenkins

"We viewed this as spot-zoning, a selected enforcement focused on a target area; it should be broader."
– Tom Reardon, Advisory Committee

"Cigarettes cause cancer, but the person picking it up takes that risk... This is about your choice."
— Steve Gaumer, Capital Budget Committee chair

"I appreciate that the board of health brought this before Town Meeting... it's not banning the sale of cigarettes; they'll still be available in gas stations and convenience stores. They're pointing out this product is causing a number of people to get sick and die... I'm delighted the board of health is concerned about this issue. They're not telling anybody they can't buy tobacco in Cohasset. I'd like to have people in Cohasset be healthy, live happily and live long here."
— Chartis Tebbetts

"It's simple... cigarettes kill. Smokers can prevent it, but [someone breathing it] second hand doesn't have that option."
— Dr. Paul Schubert, School Committee member and cardiologist

"I agree that secondhand smoke is a serious threat, but I can't remember the last time I stood in line at a pharmacy next to someone smoking a cigarette."
— Peter Whittemore

Cohasset water: No concession contract

Water Dept. to choose new operator

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski talks about the future of Cohasset.

Finance Director Mary Gallagher answers questions on the budget.

Advisory Committee Chair Peter Pescatore addresses Cohasset citizens.

Cohasset ratepayers have been waiting to learn the future of the town waterworks, as the water department's current contract with American Water expires this June.

The water department considered a 10- to 20-year concession contract and discussed the possibility during many public meetings. In the end, after going out to bid for contract proposals, the Water Commission received several proposals for operation, management and maintenance of the plant; they did not receive any concession contract proposals.

The water commission received the last of the bids last Thursday, May 17 and held a meeting to review them on Friday, along with members of the selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget committees.

On Monday, May 21, a warrant article gave voters the opportunity to vote to authorize the water commission to enter into a new contract during the continuation of Annual Town Meeting. However, the article was indefinitely postponed, as the water department plans to sign a two-year agreement with a possible one-year extension. Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski explained that Town Meeting must only approve a new water contract if it's for five years or longer.

The water commission, said Milanoski, "has the ability to approve a three-year commitment." As of press time, the commission planned to hold a meeting on Friday, May 25 to choose a new operator and will release the information to the public that day.

One thing that is known: the new operation contract will be similar to the agreement the department has had with American Water for the past 14 years, said water commission chair Peter DeCaprio.

"We got a number of proposals, which we're happy about," DeCaprio told selectmen during their Thursday, May 17 meeting. "We'll have a contract that's very similar to what we have now... The only significant difference is that costs are going to be significantly lower than they are now."

DeCaprio reported that the water commission received contract proposals for two-year and five-year agreements to run the plant. He added that all of the proposers interested in two-year contracts are qualified to also run the sewer plant and have expressed interest in doing so. The water department was hoping to time their new contract with the sewer commission to give them flexibility if they eventually decide to combine operations, DeCaprio explained.

While the water commission has discussed seeking a concession agreement, they did not receive any proposals for concession contracts. DeCaprio attributed this to Cohasset's small water system (concession proposals, he said, would typically work better for multi-million dollar operations), and also because of the political climate in town. The water commissioner read an email to the selectmen from one contractor who had read a story in the Patriot Ledger indicating that former Town Manager Michael Coughlin planned to block a potential concession contract. But DeCaprio said that the commissioners "scrapped the concession altogether," suspecting they would have trouble attracting a concessionaire.

"We used it as a stalking horse," DeCaprio said of the concession contract. "The concession scared everybody [proposers] and got everybody into motion, which is what we wanted it to do... Competition works wonders."

In the end, the water commissioner said that they are pleased with the bidding results. He provided a copy of the water department's proposed fiscal 2013 budget, which shows a major decrease in the contracted services line item: costs have dropped from $1,202,000 to $890,000, and that is if the water department decides to accept an extension with American Water. The company originally offered to drop their costs to $1 million in an extension proposal they made last month. The line item number will change depending on which operations and management contract the water department chooses.

"At the end of the day," said DeCaprio, "I'm thrilled with the result. Customers are going to see a dramatic decrease in costs of water."

Water enterprise budget

The water enterprise fund budget for fiscal 2013 was approved by Town Meeting on Monday at $4,263,830. The water commission managed to realize savings of $357,746, Milanoski reported.

"I'm very excited about what the water commission was able to do," Milanoski said in a phone call Wednesday, adding that the savings will amount to almost $1 million over the next three years. "When a committee can go through the process they did and come up with net savings for the community...I think that's pretty phenomenal. The committee had the fortitude to stand by what they thought was best for the community, and the numbers speak for themselves."

Lobster roll sale at First Parish

First Parish in Cohasset has for many years been charming the community with their Lobster Roll Sale during Fathers Day weekend, June 15 through 17, accompanying the South Shore Art Center's show and artists' sale on Cohasset Common. The sale has grown to reach many surrounding towns and businesses; some plan Employee Appreciation Days and families have Fathers Day Luncheons around the sale. The Second Congregational Church's equally famous Strawberry Shortcake sale on the same weekend has helped to develop a tradition for many to enjoy the lobster rolls followed by dessert.

SWIMMING

Cohasset Swim Center

The Cohasset Swim Center is getting ready to splash into the Summer of 2012.

C.S.C will be opening weekends in June.

Register for your membership online today by visiting www.cohassetswimcenter.com

Swim lesson registration for both members and non-members is also available online until June 15.

Swim lessons will be offered in four two-week sessions: Session I: June 25 – July 6, Session II: July 9 – July 20, Session III: July 23 – August 3, Session IV: August 6 – August 17.

For those who miss the June 15 swim lesson online registration deadline, walk-in registration for swim lessons will be available at the front desk on weekends.

Once the CSC opens full-time for the season, members and non-members can sign-up anytime at the front desk for any one of the four, two-week sessions on a first come, first service.

BASEBALL

Taking care of business

Skippers beat Mashpee

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The final score was 8-2 in favor of the home team on a beautiful Wednesday afternoon in Cohasset, but when the game was done, there was no sense of self satisfaction or jubilation over a victory against a playoff team like Mashpee.

The feeling in the dugout was more cautionary.

"It's about avoiding mistakes," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said after the dugout had cleared and players were left to ponder how to fix the mistakes quickly due to the fact that Thursday meant a meeting with South Shore League leading East Bridgewater. "We had four base running mistakes that cost us opportunities. In the tournament you can't do that and expect to win."

Afanasiw knows what he's talking about, considering the fact that he has coached the Skippers to Div. 4 State Championships for the past two years.

Still, before the tournament, Cohasset still had to deal with East Bridgewater yesterday (results unavailable at press time) and at Mashpee on Sunday.

A win against East Bridgewater would give Cohasset the South Shore League title.

Afanasiw said Cohasset could face Mashpee again in the tournament.

"This should have been one-sided," he said. "Those four mistakes cost us."

With the negatives out of the way, there were plenty more positives for Cohasset as they prepare for the Tournament.

For one thing, this team has won more regular season games than any previous Cohasset team, including the two State Title winners.

Cohasset was 16-2 before the East Bridgewater game.

There have also been way more big performances throughout the season than poor ones.

Everything starts with Jamie Faber.

The star pitcher is 6-1 with a save and a 1.13 ERA and is hitting .400 with four triples and three home runs and 15 RBI.

Only Conor Goetz (21) and Jamie Timothy (19) have more RBI.

Afanasiw said Faber's presence is a stabilizing factor for the team.

"When Jamie is on the mound, everybody breathes easier," Afanasiw said. "They know they will be in the game

GIRLS BASKETBALL

A great situation

New coach Lewis begins with an advantage

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Not long after leading his team to it's most successful season, a season that included a trip to the Boston Garden for an MIAA Div. 2 State Semifinal that followed a Div. 2 South Sectional championship, Scituate girls head basketball coach Brian Buckley decided it was time to move on.

There were several factors that helped make his decision, including the fact that he was also retiring from his full-time job and wasn't sure he'd still be in the area when basketball season starts in late fall.

Buckley made his announcement quickly, leaving plenty of time for Scituate to find a replacement for their long-time coach.

When the time came to hire a new coach, Scituate Athletic Director Rick Cash didn't have to look far.

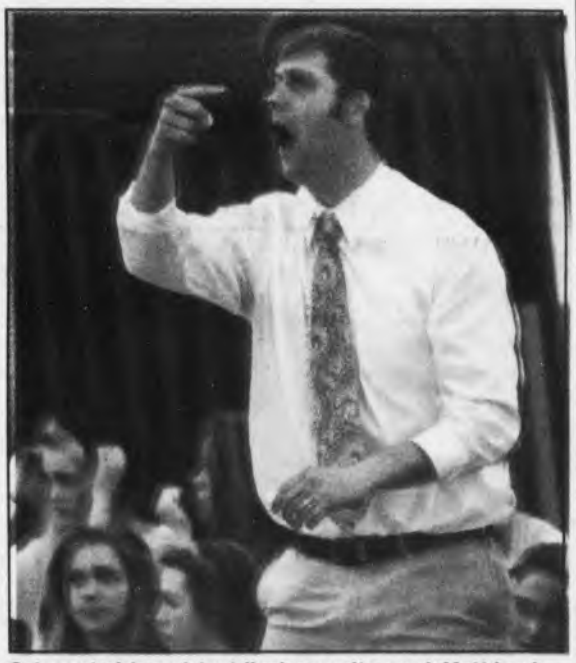
Their guy turned out to be right down the street.

The Sailors tabbed Cohasset assistant coach/junior varsity girls basketball coach Matt Lewis for the honor.

Lewis looks like a perfect fit.

He grew up in nearby Norwell, where he played four years of basketball under hoop icon John Willis.

Lewis played on the varsity in his freshman year, was a three-time South Shore League All-Star and a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic.



After high school, Lewis spent a post-graduate year at Cushing Academy before spending the next four years at Guilford College in North Carolina playing for coach Butch Estes, who is a North Carolina alumni.

"Coach Estes was a player and assistant at North Carolina under Dean Smith," Lewis said. "It was a great experience."

After college, Lewis, now an athletic trainer and physical therapy aid at South Shore Sports Therapy in Weymouth, came back to the area and started coaching at the youth level.

He had majored in exercise sports/sports medicine and

Two nominees inducted for 2012 class

The Cohasset High School Athletic Hall of Fame Committee is excited to announce that two team nominees have been voted into the CHS Athletic Hall of Fame Class of 2012 to be inducted on November 22 and 23, 2012. The individual members of the Second CHS Hall of Fame Class will be voted on June 19. Individual nominees may consist of athletes, coaches, school administrators, and boosters. For nominees who do not fall under the aforementioned categories, a "special nominee" category is available.

The 2012 CHS Athletic Hall of Fame Team inductees are:

1986-1988 Boys Soccer Team

Over a four year period, the Cohasset High School boys Soccer Team amassed a record of 71-12-8. They won four consecutive South Shore League Championships, four consecutive South Sectional

Davis wins Tennis Sectionals

Girls lacrosse routs Hanover

Cohasset tennis star, freshmen Emma Davis, captured the 2012 MIAA South Sectional Individual Tournament Championship by defeating the 2011 South Sectional Champion, Alana Prinos of Foxboro, in straight sets 6-0, 6-0 over the weekend at the Old Rochester Regional High School. Davis will advance to the State Semifinals on Saturday, June 16 at St. John's of Shrewsbury, where she will take on the Central Sectional Champion.

As a team, Cohasset easily made the tournament and carried a 12-2 record into the beginning of the week.

On the lacrosse field, the girls jumped to a quick lead against Hanover on Senior Night and ran away with a 20-7 victory.

Cohasset led 13-4 at the half.

Hope Kissick had a huge game controlling the offense and scoring a bunch.

The girls finished the regular season 10-4-2.

The boys lacrosse team made the playoffs by virtue of a second-place finish in the South Shore League.

The team heads into the postseason a little healthier than they had been most of the season.

Revolution Academy clinic

Revolution Academy hosting free soccer clinic at JunglePlex

Warm winter temperatures have filled soccer players with anticipation of an early start to the soccer season. Leagues, coaches and players are focused on building endurance and improving individual skills.

When facing an extended season it is important that athletes know the signs of common sports injuries and understand the importance of proper stretching to avoid overtraining injuries. To get players ready, the experts at Spaulding Rehab are partnering with the New England Revolution Academy to host a free soccer clinic at the JunglePlex Sports and Entertainment Complex June 5th from 6-8 pm for all soccer players ages 7 to 14. At this free clinic, player, coaches, and parents will learn proper stretching techniques, injury prevention and treatment.

Participants will be led by New England Revolution Academy coaches through various skills stations that will challenge a players' agility, ball control, shooting, and play-making decisions. Therapists from Spaulding will expose players to the same drills and workouts used to prepare the New England Revolution for their season. Players, coaches and parents will also hear the latest on how to avoid common sports injuries and how to recognize signs of an overuse injury.

The New England Revolution Academy and Spaulding Rehab will host a free soccer clinic for soccer players ages 7 to 14, June 5 from 6-8 p.m. COURTESY PHOTO

"Spaulding and the Revolution Academy are proud to offer this clinic free to area youth soccer players. Our goal is to make sure local soccer players are properly training throughout the season to help avoid injuries," said Tim Needham, Physical Therapist, Spaulding Rehabilitation Network. "We want parents and coaches to be aware of the symptoms of overuse injuries so their athletes understand the importance of recovery and how it can directly affect game performance."

Players will also have the opportunity to have pictures with, and autographs from, the New England Revolution's mascot, Slyde.

The clinic is free but space is limited.

Participants must R.S.V.P to sropevents@partners.org. The JunglePlex is located at 8 Natalie Way, Plymouth, MA. For more information visit www.spauldingnetwork.org.

Burns in World Series

Former Scituate baseball player Casey Burns, who also played for Cohasset American Legion Post 118 during the summer, is headed to the Div. II College World Series with his Southern New Hampshire University team this week. Burns, a freshman has made two appearances this season and has not allowed an earned run. SNHU opened their season with an amazing 25-2 record and finished the regular season 38-12, earning SNHU their first NCAA Div. II Tournament berth in school history a No. 20 national ranking and a No. 1 seed in the East Regional.

In the NCAA East Regional, SNHU finished 4-1, including a 4-3 win over Le Moyne in the championship game that qualified the Penmen to play in the Div. II College World Series at Cary, N.C.

SNHU opens World Series play on Saturday at 5 p.m. against Minnesota State Mankato.

Hanover's David Gibson, who was a Patriot League opponent in high school, also pitches for SNHU.

GOLF BENEFIT

Benefit for Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism

Join Doug Flutie and New England sports legends and celebrity guests for a round of golf at the 13th Annual Doug Flutie, Jr. Tournament of Legends to benefit the Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism. The golf tournament begins with a festive pre-tournament party sponsored by Sports Illustrated on Monday, June 18 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Westin Copley Place. The party will feature exciting raffle and silent auction items, as well as a special performance by the Flutie Brother's Band. Tickets for the pre-tournament party are $75 each and include appetizers, meal stations and select beverages.

On Tuesday, June 19, the Tournament of Legends, sponsored by Sun Life Financial, tees-off at Plymouth's Pinehills Golf Club as New England's beloved athletes and celebrities play 18-holes of golf for a great cause. Individuals can purchase a ticket for $600 dollars or compete as a foursome with friends. Foursomes start at $2,000 and include: golf round for four people with a celebrity team member (for a total of five golfers); gift bags for team members; complementary tickets to the pre-tournament party; company recognition in program book as foursome sponsor; day of tournament lunch, cocktails and buffet dinner.

"My family and I are excited to kick-off summer with the annual Tournament of Legends and invite you to join us for the fun pre-party event and golf tournament," said Doug Flutie, co-founder of the Flutie Foundation. "Each year, our friends, families and supporters come together to help individuals living with autism and their families, and we hope you'll join us for another great year." In the past thirteen years, the Tournament of Legends has raised over $2 million to help the Doug Flutie Jr. Foundation for Autism provide support to thousands of families where other autism organizations have fallen short: providing direct assistance to individuals with autism and their families with services they need.

For more information about the Doug Flutie, Jr. Tournament of Legends tickets, pre-tournament party, sponsorships and foursomes, please contact the Foundation at nicole@flutiefoundation.org, or visit www.flutiefoundation.org. About The Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism: The Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism, Inc. was established in 1998 by Doug Flutie and his wife, Laurie, in honor of their 20 year old son, Doug, Jr. who was diagnosed with autism at the age of three. Autism is a neurological disorder that impacts the normal development of the brain in the areas of social interaction and communication skills.

Autism now affects one in 88 children in the United States, and the numbers diagnosed continue to dramatically climb. Our mission is to support families affected by Autism Spectrum Disorder. We are committed to increasing awareness of the challenges of living with autism and helping families find resources to help address those challenges. We provide individuals with autism and their families an opportunity to improve their quality of life by funding educational, therapeutic, recreational and advocacy programs. For more information on The Doug Flutie, Jr. Foundation for Autism, please contact Maria Baez at the Ebben Zall Group at (781) 449-3244, or visit www.flutiefoundation.org.

athletic training at Guilford.

Soon, he was an assistant coach for the girls team at Cohasset and the JV coach.

While there, Cohasset won two State Championships, giving him an insight into what he might see at Scituate.

During his tenure at Cohasset, star players were developed regularly, and he was also able to learn from veteran coach John LeVangie.

Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford said he's for the move.

"I've been pushing him in that direction for a long time," Ford said. "I've know him a long time. I used to coach him a little bit in the off season. Scituate is getting a good young head coach who will bring a lot of excitement. He's an intense coach. He will be well suited for that environment."

Ford said he enjoys watching assistants move on when the time is right.

"Clearly Matt was ready," Ford said. "It will be a good relationship. He'll do a great job."

When the opportunity came around at Scituate, it didn't take much thought to decide to take a chance.

"When a coach like Coach Buckley resigns, you hear about it quickly through the grapevine," Lewis said. "He's done a phenomenal job here. Scituate is a solid community and a great basketball town. Any coach who has basketball knowledge has to apply."

When he starts, Lewis will have a team with a slightly different look that Buckley had last season, as they lose All-Stars Megan Otto and Shannon Brady.

Still, Kelly Martin will be back along with Sarah Hoffman, Annie Miller and several more top players.

Lewis said he'll have to learn more about his team.

"Honestly, I didn't have a lot of chances to see them," he said. "I was with my team. I know they're very talented, but that's about as far as I know."

Lewis has a plan that is similar to Cohasset.

"We will strive for excellence," he said. "We will have a clean program. I know we have good kids who are model citizens and athletes."

When he speaks of excellence, Lewis means all around.

"Having so many good kids is a dream," Lewis said. "They're coachable. That helps. I think it is a group that will strive for excellence. I'm lucky to be part of this program."

Lewis credited his former bosses at Cohasset.

"My six years at Cohasset was a great learning experience," Lewis said. "I have to give a lot of credit to John LeVangie and Ron Ford for giving me a chance and teaching me so much. John didn't just teach about coaching, but he taught life lessons. He's all about the kids. He loves basketball. It shows. You don't find many guys working, working and working at the stage of the game he's at. I believe in what he's doing."

As for an organizational philosophy, Lewis would love to see his style of play trickle down to the youth level, but won't force things, with the exception of the basic fundamentals, which need to be taught and practiced properly from the beginning.

"Every good coach knows how to teach fundamentals," he said. "Game plans are different. Game plans vary. The one thing that doesn't is fundamentals. If a youngster coming up can't pass or catch the ball or dribble, you're behind the eight-ball."

For the upcoming season, Lewis will bring in no preconceptions.

"Last year is last year," he said. "This is a whole new season. You can't look back at last year and live on it. We'll take some time to be comfortable with our returning seniors and look at leadership. Hopefully they'll stand up and do the job.

"I know Sarah Hoffman. She's a good player, a physical player. I am also impressed with Kelly Martin. To inherit some of these seniors and players, I feel pretty lucky."

and have a good chance to win. He will keep them in the game. He has had a huge senior year. It's great to see him excel. He lives and breathes baseball. To see him having the year he's having is great."

Afanasiw said Faber will join former teammate Anders Goetz at Union College, where he plans to play baseball and football.

Behind Faber, Conor Goetz has also been huge.

Goetz is also hitting .400 and leads the team in RBI.

On the mound he's 3-1 with a 2.15 ERA.

John Collins is having a big season, as is Jamie Timothy.

"John is having a monster season," Afanasiw said. "He's hitting near .400 and has been a stalwart in the outfield. He makes the routine plays and the phenomenal ones. He's also done a geat job as a leadoff hitter.

"When Jamie Timothy hits like he's capable of, it takes pressure off everyone else. He and Jamie Faber in the 2-and3 spots really help."

Terence Doonan has also had a breakout season.

"Terence is a .300 plus hitter," Afanasiw said. "And he's sound mechanically. Really, a lot of people have stepped up."

In the Mashpee win, Cohasset got a boost as Shane Haggerty returned from an injury that has had him sidelined for a long time, to toss four strong innings.

As for the post-game chat from Afanasiw, he wanted to be sure his team is ready for the higher competition at the next level.

"A lot of the guys in the dugout today weren't here last year," he said. "They don't know what it's like at that level."

No matter what happens next, Afanasiw has enjoyed the season.

"It has been a lot of fun," he said. "The kids have exceeded expectations."

Go forth with a song

Cohasset High School celebrated the arts with musical performances and creative exhibits during its annual Arts Night. Students, alumni, parents and faculty also bid goodbye to music teacher Bryan Marks, whose 35 years of teaching in Cohasset is coming to an end. Marks conducted his last-ever concert as chorus director and was feted and serenaded by students past and present. The music teacher said that saying goodbye to Cohasset High is "bittersweet... Lots of memories from 35 years."

LIFE AT CHS

It's a wrap! Thanks for the memories

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

I've had an amazing time writing for the Mariner this year, and have loved hearing all of your support and feedback.

Hey Cohasset! I hope everyone had a good week and that you are all enjoying the nice, warm weather. For seniors, it is summertime. I still cannot believe how quickly this year, and frankly all of high school flew by. It's so weird to be leaving CHS, but also wicked exciting!

As of last week, AP tests and MCAS are officially over! Now only finals are left for some underclassmen. Seniors got out of school for the summer yesterday after a senior cookout and assembly.

The Senior Salute edition of the Spinnaker came out Thursday. This year's final edition included an update on spring sports, news, and farewell ads for seniors, along with a list of every senior's plans for next year.

Last Tuesday, candidates for next year's student council made speeches to their grade. Elections took place last Thursday. I'm sure whoever wins will do a great job!

At advisory last Thursday, NHS Seniors spoke to Juniors about the college process. The 10th grade parent coffee also took place that morning.

The chorus and band spent last weekend in New York City. They performed in a music festival at the College of Staten Island. Along with the festival, they went to see a Broadway show, went to Medieval Times and the Natural History Museum, toured Radio City Music Hall, visited Rockefeller Center, and hung out in the City that Never Sleeps! They won awards for their performances — congrats guys! Also, Tuesday was May Arts Nights in the High School cafeteria. Senior artists had all of their art on display and underclassmen's work from this year was shown. The band, chorus, and jazz band performed as well. After 35 years at CHS, Mr. Marks conducted his last concert. His final chorus songs like "Lean on Me" and "You're Still the One" were touching and emotional. You will be missed in the upcoming years, Mr. Marks!

Today is the Senior Prom! Come down to the common at 5:30 to see the Class of 2012 and their dates walk down the Red Carpet. It's guaranteed to be a good time!

Memorial day is May 28th so there is no school. Senior class night is May 31st. Seniors will receive awards and scholarships and honor their accomplishments over the past four years at CHS. Family and friends are welcome to attend. Graduation will be Saturday, June 2nd at the Music Circus. I hope to see many of you there!

Well, that's it for this week CHS. Since I am officially in summer now, this is my last column. I've had an amazing time writing for the Mariner this year, and have loved hearing all of your support and feedback. I hope I entertained and informed you on what Life at CHS is really all about, and I'll really miss this next year! Fortunately, I will be pursuing English in college, and thanks to the experience granted to me through this column, I may even study journalism. I hope everybody has a great end to the school year and summer! It's really been a pleasure. Bye Cohasset!!

Olivia Franklin will be studying English and maybe even journalism at George Washington University in the fall.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SUMMER CAMP: THE GREATEST GIFT TO GIVE A CHILD
By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

One of the common misconceptions about summer camp is that it's a place – that you send your child to summer camp. Summer camp is a community, built by professional educators together with the children they supervise. Within that community, children learn to make decisions and take healthy risks in a safe environment. Summer camp is not about where a child is; it's what happens when they're there.

Kids learn best through experience, and summer camp is one of the best (and only) remaining hands-on learning opportunities available to them: developing social skills, playing both formal and informal games, living in a natural setting, and learning more about themselves physically and emotionally. At camp, there's no teaching to a test. Every minute doesn't have to be scheduled. There's time for teachable moments and exploration.

That time, however fleeting, has a lasting impact on campers. Many people find that the most critical people in their lives were those they befriended at summer camp.

Summer camp has never been more necessary. Academic and after school commitments add so much pressure to a child's life, and often take choices out of their hands. Time spent at summer camp allows kids to decompress and be themselves.

There's a common misconception that children are sent away by their rejoicing parents to summer camp, where someone else will do the work of supervising them. That's simply not the case. Many parents choose to let their children experience summer camp because they know of the value it gives and the genuine joy it can inspire. Day and overnight camp experiences contribute mightily to the development of a child's independence, responsibility and skills. It supplements a child's education – and, for many kids who find school difficult, it can offer them a new venue where they might thrive and embrace learning. It allows them to try new things and enjoy favorite activities, all while creating lasting memories and lifetime friendships.

What better gift could you give your children than an experience that offers all that?

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 4, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A heads-up alert to all free-spirited Ewes and Rams: Be wary of a deal that could result in compromising your independence. Check every detail before making a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) New facts emerge that help put an irksome workplace situation in perspective. Meanwhile, pay more attention to a family member who needs your wisdom and strength.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A slight setback in plans is nothing to worry about. Use this delay to deal with a number of matters you might have ignored for too long. Expect news from someone in your past.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're entering a period of stability. Use it to straighten out any outstanding problems related to a very personal situation. Also, pay closer attention to financial matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you love being a social Lion, you might well benefit from staying out of the spotlight for a while. You need time to reflect on some upcoming decisions.

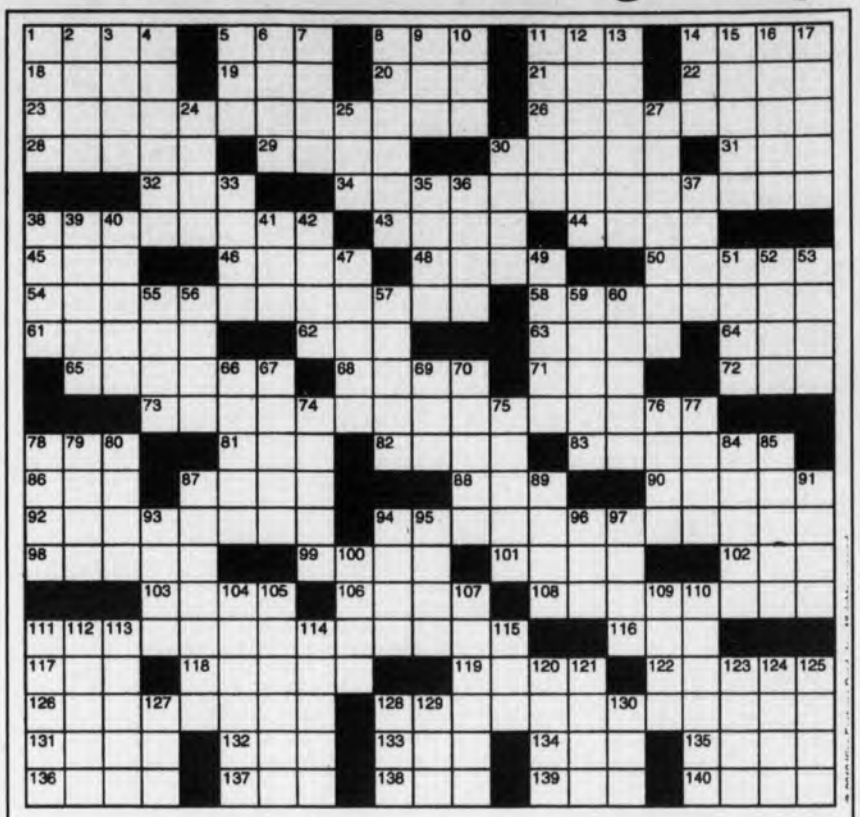
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A difficult family situation improves, thanks to your timely intervention. You can now start to focus more of your attention on preparing for a possible career change.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An on-the-job change works to your benefit by offering new opportunities. It's up to you to check them out. Meanwhile, a stalled romantic situation starts up again.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That flare-up of Scorpian temperament cools down, leaving you more receptive to suggestions about changes that might need to be made in your personal life.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unusual period of indecisiveness is a mite frustrating. But things soon clear up, allowing the sage Sagittarian to make those wise pronouncements again.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might feel that you know best, but it's not a good idea at this time to try to force your opinions on others. Best advice: Inspire change by example, not by intimidation.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some setbacks could affect your plans to fortify your financial situation. But things start moving again by early next week. Meanwhile, enjoy your resurgent social life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show that often-hidden steely spine of yours as you once again stand up to an emotional bully. You've got the strength to do it, especially as friends rally to your side.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

159TH COMMENCEMENT

NDA grads to make their mark

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Watch out world! Here comes the Notre Dame Academy Class of 2012.

The reserved young women parading onto the athletic field in front of the Catholic girls' high school in their traditional long white gowns last Friday evening – may have belied the determination and goals ready to burst forth in each soon-to-be graduate.

Student speaker Emily Walton of Marshfield let there be no doubt that these young women are going to take advantage of all the opportunity their individual futures could hold.

Walton, who turned the clock ahead some 23 years to 2035, – when the graduates would be embarking on their 40s – gave a glimpse of "what our unwritten stories have become."

"Each of us in the graduating Class of 2012 is about 40 years old now with families, children, and careers to call our own. We are leaders in every line of work including top medical professionals in Boston, powerful women in the financial sector in New York City, politicians and FBI agents in Washington DC, engineers and entrepreneurs in Silicon Valley, and CEOs of companies globally," Walton said.

Friday was the Hingham-based school's 159th commencement. The seats set up on the playing field were filled with enthusiastic family members as was the grassy hill sloping down to it.

When the weather is inclement the event is held inside the auditorium and each graduate is limited to the number of tickets for family and friends due to space constraints, but outside the floodgates open for all who want to come.

The 134 graduates looking lovely in their traditional full-length, flowing white gowns and gold medallion necklaces, which symbolized the bond between each girl and all Notre Dame Academy alumnae, paraded onto the field at precisely 5 p.m. Thanks to recent rainy days, the field was a rich green providing the perfect backdrop for the column of graduates, each of whom was presented with a single yellow rose after receiving her diploma.

"My prayer, my hope today is that each of us, in our own individual way, will make a long lasting impact in the world."
Emily Walton, student speake

Walton's address received boisterous applause — surpassed only a few minutes later by family members yelling out cheers for their particular graduate as her name was announced signaling for her to walk to the podium and receive her diploma.

Walton finished her speech with a call for all NDA graduates to go out into the world and have the courage to mold it and change it in order to make a difference in society.

"Finish writing our stories, and make them great ones that we can all be proud of," Walton said. "Continue striving for excellence. Live each day to the fullest — sing, dance, love, laugh, invent, imagine, lead, pray, hope, govern, direct, nurture, try, and succeed more than you fail. My prayer, my hope today is that each of us, in our own individual way, will make a long lasting impact in the world."

In keeping with tradition, the keynote speaker at graduation was an NDA alumna.

Grace Cotter Regan, NDA Class of 1978, who was recently named head of school at St. Mary's High School in Lynn, told the audience that an NDA education was a gift.

"Your gratitude might not be obvious today, but trust me it will be." Regan urged the Class of 2012 to be women of "faith, character and integrity."

Cohasset residents were among the NDA graduates: Marie Gilman, Christina Healy, Danielle Healy, Alexandra Lelio and Elizabeth Leong.

Emily LaFond, Tori Kenyon, Chloe Freidman, Maggie Norton, and Megan Garrow are all smiles on Friday.

HAPPENINGS

View the tall ships

Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person, which includes the narrated tour, stationery and passed hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. This is a rain or shine event, but the yachts panoramic windows provide excellent viewing from inside its casually elegant cabin. The Historical Society extends an open invitation for this marine adventure. This seagoing afternoon would make a lovely family outing or special gift.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Holly Hill plant sale

The Holly Hill Farm Plant Sale will continue this weekend, May 26 and 27, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days. Thousands of tomatoes and other vegetables, herbs and flowers are still available for home gardens. Organic fertilizers and soil amendments will be for sale.

On Sunday, there will be kids' activities at noon. Brown Boar Farm from East Wells, Vt., will be selling naturally raised, heritage breed pork from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Sunday, and grilled Italian sausages will be for sale. The farm stand will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days with freshly harvested vegetables for sale, as well as eggs and local maple syrup.

Beginning Saturday, June 2, the farm stand will open for regular summer hours, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday and Sundays. Consider opening an account at the farm stand, no need to carry cash or checks when shopping,

Countdown to Relay For Life

The 16th annual Relay For Life of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate will take place 3 p.m., Friday, June 22, to 10 a.m., Saturday, June 23, at Cohasset High School. Schedule: 3 p.m. – Relay starts; 3 to 5:30 p.m. – Children's activities; 5 p.m. – Survivor registration; 5:30 p.m. – Children's lap; 5:30 p.m. – Taste of the Relay opens; 6 p.m. – Opening ceremonies; 6:30 p.m. – Survivor and caregiver lap; 6:45 p.m. – Rusty Skippers Band plays; 9 p.m. – Luminary lap; 10 a.m., Saturday – Relay closes.

More than 20 teams will walk this year. Last year's Relay raised $69,000 for the American Cancer Society and in 15 years it has raise more than $1,500,000.

Come play at Center gym

Join the fun with Ruthann and staff in the South Shore Community Center Gym with tot-sized equipment. On Tuesday, June 5, and Wednesday, June 13, from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., children who are crawling to age 3+ are invited to participate with parents/caregiver. Cost will be $10 at the door, and $3 for each additional sibling.

Family Fun Run June 10

The Cohassset Education Foundation and the Cohasset Recreation Department will be sponsoring a First Annual Family Fun Run on Sunday, June 10. There will be a 5K road race at 1 p.m., a 1 mile walk/run around the Common at 2:15 p.m., a Tot Trot (for children 5 & under) at 2:45 p.m., and a Family Fun Fair from 1 to 4 p.m.

All proceeds from the event will benefit the Cohasset public schools and the recreation department. The event promises to be lots of fun for all ages with Mr. Dykas leading a race warm-up and Dance Party on the Common. In addition, there will be lots of children's activities including a petting zoo from Penniman Hill Farm and face painting. Come join the fun with live music and concessions from b.good burgers, Del's lemonade, and Nona's ice cream.

Register now at www.cohasseteducation.org. The tax-deductible entry fee for the 5k race is $20, $15 for 1 mile walk/run, and the Tot Trot is free. Free T-shirts will be awarded to the first 200 people to register.

Police chief under fire

DeLuca supporters show up at selectmen's meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It wasn't a public hearing, but the matter of Police Chief Mark DeLuca's recent suspension came up during the Tuesday, May 29 Board of Selectmen's meeting.

DeLuca was placed on paid leave last Friday by interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski following union allegations (see related story and letter from union). During Tuesday's meeting, Milanoski discussed the timeline of events that led up to the chief's suspension and read aloud from the letter he issued to DeLuca, saying that the public deserved "full disclosure of what transpired."

Several citizens turned up at the selectmen's meeting at the Our World children's museum to speak up about the police chief's suspension and to question the timeliness of the allegations. The selectmen did not comment on the matter, except for chairman Paul Carlson, who read a prepared statement.

But after Carlson read a letter into the record that was issued to the selectmen by DeLuca last Friday, implicating that the town manager had interfered with a police disciplinary matter, DeLuca supporters said that Milanoski should not be allowed

House divided

Our World, library have different plans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Housed under one roof, Cohasset's children's museum and library seem to be worlds apart.

The Our World Children's Discovery Museum utilizes the rear of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 100 Sohier Street, a wing in the former location of the Joseph Osgood elementary school, and has done so for the past 10 years. The 10-year lease with the town for $1 per year expires this September. Library trustees have made it no secret that, due to growth in programs and library usage over the years, they would like to see the library expand — and that would include the back portion of the building.

While the library trustees said that they have hired an architect and approached the Board of Selectmen back in January to discuss the library's budget and future plans for expansion, nothing has been set in stone. Our World's board of directors and employees, meanwhile, are making the case to keep the museum going, continuing to utilize the 7,000 square foot, two-story space that they have for the past 10 years.

Our World invited the selectmen to hold one of their meetings there, take a tour of the facility, and discuss the vision for the museum's future; the selectmen met there on Tues., May 29. Library staff members and trustees also attended the meeting, and explained why and how they would like the library to use the Our World space.

Mary Larson, the museum's co-founder and president of its board of directors, told the selectmen that when the plans for Our World started 12 years ago, it was during "a time of great conflict" in town, and "we seem to be having that again."

CHS GRADATION SATURDAY

Class of 2012 ready to launch

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Another important fixture of Cohasset High is "graduating" this year, too — principal Dr. Michael "Mike" Gill.

It's the moment they've all been waiting for.

Cohasset High School graduation is this Saturday, June 2 at 1:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Music Circus, rain or shine. There are 96 seniors who will walk across the stage and collect diplomas this year.

Last Friday, May 25 marked the last day of school for Cohasset seniors; prom was also that night. Thursday, May 31 was the class awards night. It's a week filled with celebration for goals accomplished, commemoration of the years passed in Cohasset schools, and anticipation for what lies ahead.

PUBLIC SAFETY REMINDER

Bike helmets – a no-brainer

What
With a warmer than normal spring, there are more and more bicyclists on the roads and trails throughout the Massachusetts. The Brain Injury Association of Massachusetts and the Cohasset Police Department urge riders of all ages to wear a bike helmet.

Why
More than 50,000 bike-related head injuries and 630 deaths occur in the United States each year. Properly fitted helmets can decrease the risk of head and brain injury by as much as 88 percent. Massachusetts' law requires anyone age 16 or younger to wear a helmet while riding a bike, scooter, skate board or while in-line skating.

How
Establish the helmet habit early when your children get their first bikes. If they learn to wear helmets they ride it will become a habit for a lifetime. If possible, start them off with helmets while they are still on tricycles to establish the link between wheeled vehicles, pavement and helmets. It's never too late, however, to get your children into helmets. Wear one yourself. Provide a role model for your kids; they learn best by observing you.

Remember
Crashes causing head injuries can occur on sidewalks, driveways, bike paths, and parks as well as streets. You and your children cannot predict when a situation will occur that will end in a fall. It is important to wear a helmet whenever riding even if it's just down the street or on a bike trail.
Just like seat belts, adults can set an example by wearing helmets themselves. Deputy Chief William Quigley points out.

A properly fitted helmet should:
- Helmet straps should meet in a V under each ear;
- Chin strap should be snug under chin;
- Helmet should be worn low on forehead; and
- Helmet should not move side to side or back and forth.

Name: Julia Lisinski.

Occupation: Chef/Owner The Fresh Feast.

Best day of your life: I know its cliché, but my wedding day. Not only did I snag a great guy but all my family and friends came from around the country to celebrate with us! Not to mention I was pampered and felt like a princess for a day.

Best vacation: Jamaica. I went for a friend's wedding but instead of going to an all inclusive we stayed in an amazing hotel that was composed of villas along the cliffs of Negril. My favorite part of the trip was when an islander we met took us on an adventure; we stopped at a street market where the locals made TONS of delicious meals for us like freshly caught escoviche fish, pepper shrimp, and bami (bread made from cassava and coconut milk). After that we drove to a beach, got on a rowboat with two locals and they paddled us out to a sandbar where there was a make shift bar (The Pelican Bar) that looked like something out of Robinson Caruso! Bare bones, but we had red stripe, jerk chicken, and endless ocean - incredible! I loved the trip so much I went back with friends a few years later and met up with a different group of locals who took us fishing. We caught yellow fin tuna off the back of the boat and pulled the boat up to a restaurant on the water near where we were staying, the chef in the kitchen let me share his kitchen to filet and prepare the tuna while he prepared the sides; my group and his staff all sat together and enjoyed an amazing meal with even better stories!

Favorite season: Fall. Warm days and cool nights, plus it's harvest time and local produce is bountiful.

Favorite holiday: Dia de los Muerto. I know, it's strange. While I am not Mexican, I've always been drawn to the idea of remembering loved ones with a celebratory meal in their honor. Dia de los Muerto (Day of the Dead) is a Mexican holiday and the story goes that the dead rise on this day to party and enjoy all the things they loved when they were alive. To honor them, their favorite foods are prepared and enjoyed among family and friends, with a small dish being set aside in their honor. I usually make a Mexican feast of enchiladas, posole soup, candied pumpkin, and flan for my family and friends and we toast to our loved ones who have passed - remembering all the joy the brought to our lives.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Jelly Bellies. No matter how many are in front of me I always manage to eat them all!

Best book: I want to say something grown up, but my favorite book was Harry Potter and The Half Blood Prince - I'm a sucker for novels geared toward teens LOL!

Best movie or actor: JAWS! I watch that movie every year around the 4th of July and I never tire of it.

Best TV show: Modern Family, I love the mix of characters and the different perspectives of funny.

Best music, group or artist: I love Pink. Her voice is amazing and her songs are edgy and fun. Also love Green Day, Black Eyed Peas, and Zeppelin.

Pet peeve: Knife skills. Blade up and at the top of your cutting board! Cut away from you! Curl your fingers back! Keep your knife sharp! Ahhhh....I'm so afraid of seeing someone cut themselves.

Fun fact: I'm terrible at spelling and I was an English Major before I went to culinary school.

Person you would most like to meet: Met him a few weeks ago on Cohasset Common - Gordon Ramsey!

Goal: My goal is to work with local farmers and purveyors to make foods from scratch with recipes I have written and adapted over the years so that I can share high quality food with the community.

Biggest worry: That I will fail and people won't like my food.

Best part of Cohasset: Jerusalem Road. There are so many beautiful parts of Cohasset but the drive along Jerusalem Road is my favorite.

Health Inspector leaving Cohasset

Tradd found new job; BOH to advertise position

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Tara Tradd, the Cohasset Board of Health's health inspector, is leaving at the end of this week to start a new position in Avon, Mass. Tradd has worked in Cohasset for 14 years.

"She was a great employee and it will be difficult to replace her," said interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who announced Tradd's resignation during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

Milanoski said that Tradd has a 45-minute commute to Cohasset and has taken a job closer to her home.

Tradd issued a statement Wednesday saying that she has enjoyed her time in Cohasset.

"I have had such a pleasure and honor to work for the residents and business community of Cohasset," said Tradd. "It has been a wonderful education for me. I will miss all the ladies of the Town Hall as well as the many restaurant owners and staff with whom I have had the pleasure to work with, in addition to the many other wonderful duties I was charged with. Cohasset is such a beautiful community.

"I have been blessed over the years and I am now looking forward to the next part of my new life as the Health Agent for the Town of Avon, another wonderful small community also located in Norfolk County."

The Board of Health will advertise the health inspector position this week and hope to hire someone within the next six weeks, Milanoski said.

Tradd "has been a terrific town employee all these years, and we're going to miss her," said selectmen chair Paul Carlson.

Board of Health chair Margaret Chapman said that Tradd will "be sorely missed... She has always been a gracious, dedicated and wonderful colleague to work with. It's a loss for our town. We happily supported her to learn and get certified in health agent duties, and that's allowed her to take this position she's taking, which is very close to home for her, so it's a step up for her. I just hope we have luck replacing her with somebody with her quality."

BRIEFLY

Selectmen reorganize, Carlson named chair

In a unanimous vote during their Tuesday night meeting at the Our World Children's Museum, the Board of Selectmen appointed Paul Carlson as their new chairman.

Carlson's second term will be up next spring. He replaces former Chairman Ted Carr who lost his bid for a third term to Martha Gjesteby in the May 19 Town Election.

Traditionally a selectman in the third year of his or her term serves as chairman.

Carlson was elected to the board in 2007 and was previously chair from the spring of 2009 to the spring of 2010. Carlson has also served as vice chair, during his most recent term and during his first term on the board.

"It's a honor to serve on the board of selectmen," said Carlson, "and particularly as chairman, I appreciate the support and confidence of my colleagues. I look forward to the year and hope to continuing making progress in this great town of ours."

Diane Kennedy, who was elected to the board last year, was unanimously voted vice chair.

POLICE BEAT

Bridge jumpers are back again

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The bridge jumpers are back. Police responded twice to the Border Street bridge last week to disperse groups of young people jumping off the bridge into the water below. Police said they will continue to manage the problem and disperse the jumpers. "At the end of the day it is a safety issue," Deputy Chief William Quigley said. He also said the jumpers create a problem with traffic over the bridge.

Power outage

At 10:09 a.m. on Monday (May 21) a tree company working on Nichols Road cut a branch that hit a power line and short-circuited a fuse. Parts of Nichols Road and area streets lost power as a result. National Grid was notified to reset the fuse, police said.

Summonsed

A 62-year-old man went to the police station at 7:37 a.m. on Tuesday (May 22) to speak to an officer about an alleged assault at his place of work in Cohasset. The man said a 46-year-old coworker "chest-bumped" him and threatened him. Police are summonsing the 46-year-old to Quincy District Court to let the clerk magistrate sort out the details. The man is facing charges of assault and battery of a person over 60.

License plate

A 46-year-old Cohasset man reported last week that the license plate to his utility trailer had been stolen. The trailer had been put away since last October. But when the man took it out to do some cleanup work, the plate was gone. It is not clear if it was stolen or somehow fell off the trailer and is lost. The plate was entered into NCIC (National Crime Information Center) that will alert law enforcement should it turn up. The resident will be issued a new plate by the registry, police said.

Deer accident

At 10:04 p.m. on Friday (May 25) a 59-year-old Cohasset man in a 2006 Mercury Mountaineer reported hitting a deer on Route 3A near Cohasset Imports. There was minor damage to the vehicle and no sign of the deer, police said.

Last day

In keeping with tradition, police made their presence known outside the high school last Thursday (May 24) around dismissal time for the seniors. It was the last day for seniors and an increased police presence discourages them from celebrating by racing through area neighborhoods, police said.

Took off

A resident who lives on Jerusalem Road near West Corner reported seeing a young man in his yard early last Friday morning and reported the incident to police. The man approached the visitor who then took off. Police were unable to locate the visitor but continue to encourage residents to report any suspicious activity, as there have been several recent breakins in that area.

Suspicious activity

A 911 caller alerted police to a man who had stopped to rest along her driveway last Friday (May 25) off Forest Avenue. The man was wearing a sweatshirt and carrying trash bags with his belongings. Police spoke to the individual, who appeared to be homeless, and was making his way toward Hull.

U-turn

At 8:43 p.m. on Saturday (May 26), police responded to a two-car crash on Route 3A near the Golden Living Center. Police said a 17-year-old Norwell girl in a 2002 Buick Regal was headed south when she pulled over to make a U-turn and head back toward Hingham. Police said she attempted to make the turn without looking for traffic and went into the path of a 2011 BMW 335, operated by a 50-year-old Cohasset man, who was headed south. The Buick had to be towed. The 17-year-old was cited for making an illegal U-turn on a state highway. There were no reported injuries, police said.

Suspicious activity

A Hull officer on patrol reported seeing a woman near the antique store at West Corner at about 3 a.m. on Saturday (May 26). As it turned out the owner of a nearby business was dropping something off, police said.

Lost call

Police went to the address of a 911 cell call that was lost in the transfer from the State Police on Sunday (May 27) at around 1:15 a.m. Tapes were checked and the address had been captured. But further investigation revealed no emergency and the call went down as unfounded.

Passing zone

Police talked to a 64-year-old Quincy woman after she pulled into the parking lot at Constantine's around 10 a.m. on Sunday (May 27). An anonymous caller had reported she had been driving erratically. She explained she had passed another car in the passing zone on Route 3A. Police said the woman was not impaired in any way.

Boat motor

A 69-year-old Beach Street man reported on Sunday afternoon (May 27) that his 5-year-old, 9-horsepower Honda boat motor that had been in his shed since October was missing. The motor is valued at $2200, police said. Police said there was no sign of forced entry.

Raffle money

A cheerleader reported to police on Sunday (May 27) that she had been selling raffle tickets and had lost the envelope with $30 in cash and a $5 check. About 90 minutes later, a person, who apparently found the envelope, turned it in with the cash and check to police at the station. The police were able to return it to the girl.

Domestic

An older couple that lives at Avalon was back in the news on Sunday after neighbors reported they were verbally fighting again. Police said the woman, 65, claims her husband is verbally abusive and the husband, who is 71, says his wife is nagging him constantly. Police said the altercation was verbal but they told neighbors to notify management about the disturbance.

OUI arrest

A 59-year-old Cohasset man is facing drunken driving charges following a hit and run accident on Border Street at around 11 p.m. on Sunday (May 27). Police said the 2001 Toyota 4Runner the man was driving hit a parked car near Parker Avenue and lost the front right tire in the accident, causing a shower of sparks as the vehicle continued down Border Street. Police said the man then nearly hit a woman who was crossing the road near the Legion Hall and she had to jump out of the way. Several witnesses followed the man home where police found his vehicle smashed up in the driveway. In speaking with the driver, he displayed the signs and symptoms of intoxication, police said. He was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, negligent operation of a motor vehicle, leaving the scene after causing property damage and failure to drive in marked lanes.

Unwanted guest

Police responded to a report of a disturbance at a home on Jerusalem Road at 11 p.m. on Sunday (May 27). Cohasset units were tied up with an alleged drunken driving accident, so Hingham units responded. There was a verbal dispute between a girlfriend and boyfriend, police said. But neither person wanted to pursue charges. However about an hour later, the girlfriend called police and wanted her boyfriend removed from the house.

DeLuca's lawyer defends chief

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Mariner received word Thursday morning that suspended Police Chief Mark DeLuca is being represented by attorney Jack Collins of the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association.

Collins said in a phone call that he had just spoken with chief for the first time that morning, and had not yet had contact with interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski or Town Counsel. His understanding was that the chief had been placed on paid administrative leave, which Collins said was "normal" while an investigation is underway.

Collins did not touch on the union allegations at first but rather said the "reason" he got involved was because DeLuca believes his removal "stemmed from the chief's comment at town meeting that he's opposed to having the police station go dark. He thinks, and other people are telling me, he thinks this is retaliation," said Collins.

Last week, Cohasset's police union president Patrick Reardon said that the union allegations are "separate, unrelated matters that have nothing to do with the station going dark."

"My thought is, there's more to this story on both sides," said Collins.

DeLuca's attorney said that his client has worked under four town managers in two years and has dealt with political instability.

"It seems people have other agendas," said Collins. "Some people who want the chief gone.

"Those I've spoken with in the law enforcement profession talk about him being a dedicated individual," he added. "At the moment, the impression I'm getting is that he's a hardworking, committed, dedicated, smart guy. Maybe in this case politically he said the wrong thing at town meeting, and they want him to pay for that."

"They [the town] don't want a chief, they want a robot; that's not the kind of guy DeLuca is. He's not afraid to tell the truth, although I think it's come back to bite him."
Jack Collins, attorney

Collins acknowledged that Town Meting "has the right" to vote to approve the budget that ultimately results in the station going dark at times. However, "the chief would have been remiss if he didn't stand up at town meeting. It's a democracy, but I don't know if he should pay for that. They [the town] don't want a chief, they want a robot; that's not the kind of guy DeLuca is. He's not afraid to tell the truth, although I think it's come back to bite him."

DeLuca's attorney said, by way of summary, that his client thinks his suspension never would have happened if not for town meeting and his "not going with the party line."

When asked about the union allegations that were reported to the town manager, ranging from "forging important documents" to "physical abuse," Collins responded that there are "a lot of secret meetings between the town manager and union people."

"The union doesn't want to play by the rules or work as hard as the chief wants them to work," said Collins. "They want to put their own people in there and have the inmates running the asylum."

Despite the attorney's feelings toward the union, he said that he hopes the matter is resolved quickly. Once the town knows Collins is involved, he anticipates that he'll soon hear from Town Counsel or the town manager.

"From my end, we've got a first amendment case," said the attorney, adding that he doesn't want to see litigation dragged out over the course of several years. "But at the end of the day, he's going to be the chief and they're going to have to live with him. I think he's learned his lesson; he has to be a little more politically correct to get along with people in the town.

Collins added that as an attorney for the state police chiefs association, he often comes across chiefs "who basically think just doing the right job is all that's required. Sometimes they ruffle feathers. Our training with chiefs [is to tell them that] part of your job is political, getting along with politicians... When I talked to him, I made it real clear... he only has six years left till he retires; if he wants to keep on fighting, that's fine... or he can swallow things he finds repulsive...

"He thinks it's a matter of principle and I respect him for that," Collins said of DeLuca, "but he's in for a long haul of fighting politicians who have a different agenda than he does."

Letter backs Milanoski's actions

An open letter to the residents of Cohasset,

The members of the Cohasset Police Union, NEPBA Local 66 and the Cohasset Superior Officers Union, NEPBA Local 84,would like to thank Town Manager Michael Milanoski for his decisive actions regarding the allegations made by the New England Police Benevolent Association (NEPBA) against Chief Mark DeLuca on their behalf

It is now, and will continue to be the sole mission of the men and women of the Police Department to provide the very best police services to the residents of Cohasset. This is not a union matter. This is a matter of ethics, dignity and respect. The decision to seek assistance from the Town Manager was not taken lightly.

The men and women of the department respect the community and wish only to provide professional police services without a hostile work environment. The men and women of the department believe that upon completion of an investigation, the community will realize that this action was not only warranted, but vital, in order to maintain an atmosphere of professionalism within the Cohasset Police Department.

Sean R. McArdle, State Director, New England Police Benevolent Association.

Cohasset Police Chief placed on paid leave

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The acting town manager said in an email statement that DeLuca is under investigation following multiple allegations against him from the town's police union.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski placed Police Chief Mark DeLuca on paid administrative leave last Friday (May 25), effective immediately. DeLuca is not allowed to enter the police station or be in communication with other officers.

Deputy Police Chief William Quigley is managing the day-today operations at the station while Fire Chief Robert Silvia is overseeing the town's public safety operations, Milanoski said.

The acting town manager said in an email statement that DeLuca is under investigation following multiple allegations against him from the town's police union.

"These allegations require investigation in order for the Town to determine whether they have any merit," Milanoski wrote. "Pending investigation the Town cannot provide any further details and has reached no conclusions about the allegations."

On Friday, Milanoski said he was unable to comment further on the matter at that time.

"It's a personnel matter under investigation and is not for public discussion," said Milanoski.

In a phone interview, police union president Patrick Reardon said this has nothing to do with the darkening of the station.

"These are separate, unrelated matters that have nothing to do with the station going dark," he said.

DeLuca's employment contract is up in about six months. The chief could not be reached for comment.

DeLuca has been in law enforcement for 30 years, starting his career in the Metro Dade Police Department in Florida before becoming a Boston cop in 1987. He became the Duxbury Police Chief in 1999 and was at that post for 10 years before his contract was not renewed in 2009.

Cohasset was selected for the Cohasset post from a pool of 80 applicants for the post. DeLuca replaced former Police Chief James Hussey.

Deluca was hired at a salary of $111,000. In fiscal 2013, he was expected to earn an annual salary of $122,758.42, plus $1,100 for additional longevity and $12,385.84 for additional educational pay, a total of $136,224.26.

POLICE CHIEF

to be part of the investigation into the union allegations.

The selectmen's discussion of DeLuca's suspension came up during the "personnel update" portion on the agenda. Milanoski read his timeline of events (see sidebar) that transpired last week and also read aloud the letter he issued to DeLuca. In it, the town manager stated that "numerous serious allegations of misconduct" were brought to Milanoski's attention by the union.

"These allegations include, but are not limited to, using your position as police chief to secure benefits for which you and others were not entitled to, forging important documents, physical abuse and abusing your authority during an internal affairs investigation," Milanoski wrote.

"Obviously, these and other allegations are serious and require an immediate investigation in order to determine if they have merit."

The letter states that DeLuca was placed on paid leave, effective immediately, and that he was to turn in his badge, firearm, computer, department vehicle and any other department-issued property. He was also banned from reporting to the police station and was told "not to interfere in any way with the department's investigation."

This was a hard pill for DeLuca supporters who attended the meeting to swallow; during the meeting's public comment portion, they said they felt the chief was wrongfully suspended and should be allowed to continue working while the investigation is underway.

"It's very disturbing to us in the public," said former selectman Karen Quigley. "He's not just any town employee, he's the person charged with the safety of this town."

Quigley asked the selectmen if they had received any correspondence from the police chief. Carlson answered that

"Obviously, these and other allegations are serious and require an immediate investigation in order to determine if they have merit."
Michael Milanoski, Acting Town Manager

yes, they had; Quigley then asked Carlson to read it into the public record.

Carlson proceeded to read a letter from DeLuca to the selectmen, dated Fri., May 25. In it, DeLuca said that he had a meeting scheduled with selectman and public safety liaison Fred Koed in the selectmen's office for 8 a.m. Fri., during which DeLuca planned to give Koed a letter he wrote to Milanoski to "inform him of actions that town manager Milanoski took, which I believe could possibly lead to ethical, civil, or criminal sanctions." DeLuca said that Koed canceled the meeting.

According to the letter, the chief went to Town Hall anyway at 7:51 a.m. to deliver the letter to Milanoski, but Town Hall was locked. DeLuca called Milanoski and asked to be let in, and was told to come back at 10:30 a.m., as the town manager said he was in a meeting.

DeLuca wrote that when he went back to Town Hall later that morning, he went to the town manager's office and found Lieutenant Gregory Lennon and Deputy Chief William Quigley there. "Mr. Milanoski immediately informed me that as of this moment I was on paid administrative leave, to turn in my town issued equipment and vacate."

The chief asked the selectmen to allow his town-owned computer to be preserved as he left it, and to be provided with documentation "as to the foundation for the basis of this leave, since none was given to me this [Friday] morning."

After Carlson read the letter, Karen Quigley asked if that was the complete correspondence between the chief and selectmen; Carlson said yes.

"You're sure of that?" she asked.

Koed said that something was emailed to them, but he didn't have a copy present. Milanoski got up from his seat and whispered something to Carlson, who then said he wondered if the documents in question should be issued to the public and that he wanted to seek Town Counsel's opinion.

Jack Creighton, a member of the community's police liaison committee, urged those conducting the investigation to be very careful of which documents get released publicly.

"The problem is, if you release some documents, you have to release them all, and I'm not sure Chief DeLuca, who is still our chief, would be well-served by having" that made public, Creighton said.

Meeting attendees grew further agitated when they were informed that Milanoski would be part of the investigation, which Carlson said is the town manager's duty under the Town Manager Act.

"If he's involved, should he be investigating?" Tanna Kasperowicz asked.

Scott Coyne of Braintree said that whoever conducts the investigation should have "experience investigating police matters."

Bob Hayden of Hingham, a retired police chief of Lawrence and "lifelong friend of Chief DeLuca," urged the town manger to handle the investigation "as quickly as possible" and get "all the facts on the table, so the person who's suffering has the chance to redeem himself.

"A man's reputation is the only thing he has at the end of the day," said Hayden.

Hayden added that Milanoski's apparent "involvement" and "vested interest" in the matter should "clear him of being the person" who could lead the investigation.

Milanoski interjected several times throughout the discussion to say that he would not be leading the investigation, but rather Town Counsel would, and they have the right to hire outside help. The town manager will review the outcome of the investigation, however.

Merle Brown, another member of the police liaison committee, also asked for outside investigators, saying that this situation "could be blown way out of proportion."

Melissa Browne, also a member of the liaison board, asked "how long the grievances [against DeLuca] stand on the books," asking if they go "way back" and why they're coming up now. "What's the shelf life?"

Milanoski responded, "I'm not aware of any grievances... we're reviewing quantifiable allegations brought to us by the state director of the police union."

Browne was about to ask another question, but Carlson cut her off, explaining that the selectmen do not take questions during the public comment period.

Those who attended the meeting left with unanswered questions. Milanoski said in a phone call Wednesday that he hoped to expedite the investigation and have the matter resolved in a week or two.

Creighton perhaps summed up the mood of the meeting best in his statement to selectmen during the public comment period.

"This town has been fractionalized," said Creighton. "I hear more nasty things said about people behind the scenes. This has to stop; it's a lovely place to live. This is no place for the politics of personal destruction."

Town manager's timeline

According to Interim Town Manager Milanoski, these are the events that led to Police Chief Mark DeLuca's suspension last week:

Tues. May 22:
"Following a three hour SSRECC [South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center] meeting with the police/fire chiefs and their deputies... I sent an email off to [Town Counsel] Paul DeRensis stating that I'm looking to extend both chiefs' positions for another three years and asked that they draw up a new contract."

Thurs., May 24:
- Union President (Officer Patrick Reardon) and another member from union stopped by the town manager's office;
- Milanoski spoke with State Director of the NEPBA [New England Police Benevolent Association] Union; received letter laying out quantifiable allegations to be investigated
- He spoke with attorney from Deutsch Williams on issues; discussed and laid out next steps and spoke with members of the Board of Selectmen; provided overview and next steps
- Milanoski spent with three hours with Detective Lieutenant on list of allegations the union state director ask be investigated and two hours with the Deputy Chief on list of allegations union state director ask to be investigated.

Fri., May 25:
- Milanoski said he received multiple pieces of evidence to back up in part NEPBA's allegations against the Chief of Police
- He met with members of the Board of Selectmen (Milanoski said he spoke with two selectmen on Thurs.; a few were out of town. By Friday, he said he had spoken to all five members)
- Deutsch Williams drew up document for paid administration leave document
- Milanoski met with Chief of Police at 10:30 a.m. "I stated that this has come as a surprise to him as he knew I was supporting him. On Tuesday I had sent a request for a three-year contract extension [Milanoski said he has emails to Town Counsel to prove this], I supported him on multiple issues (K-9 and overtime) that he has thanked me for. However, at this point, I am forced to suspend him with pay while an investigation takes place and provided him with the paid administrative leave letter." Later that day, the following press release was issued (the Mariner received the release after calling Milanoski at Town Hall):

Cohasset— Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has placed the Chief of Police on paid administrative leave this afternoon pending an investigation by the Town. This action has been taken after the Town received multiple allegations against the Chief of Police from the Town's police union according the Union President Patrick Reardon. These allegations require investigation in order for the Town to determine whether they have any merit. Pending investigation the Town cannot provide any further details and has reached no conclusions about the allegations. The Town Manager announced that pending the investigation and its results Fire Chief Bob Silvia will be overseeing Public Safety Operations for the Town on a temporary basis. In addition, Deputy Police Chief Bill Quigley will be managing the day to day operations and personnel of the Police Department.

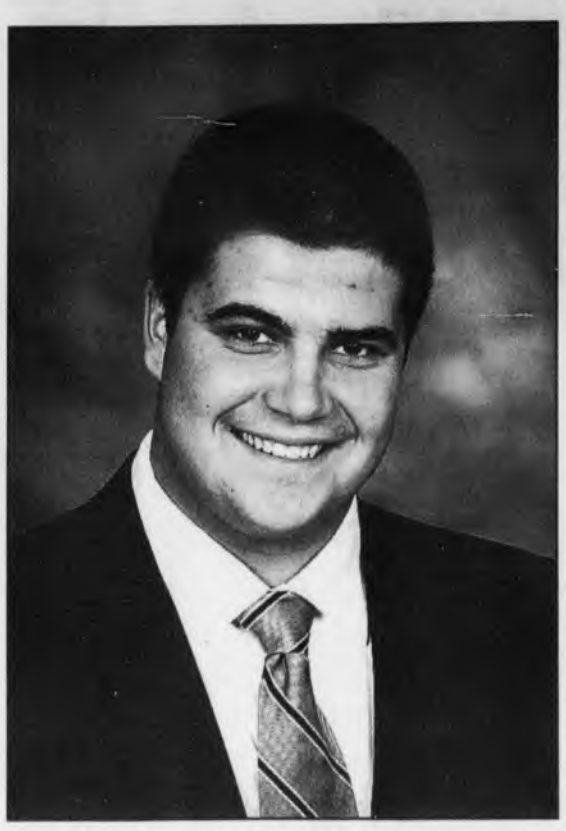
Keep that graduation news coming !

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Bittersweet time

Hello Cohasset, I hope that everyone is doing well this week and starting to clear out a bit from all this pollen! Tomorrow, June 2 is the CHS Graduation for the Class of 2012 at the South Shore Music Circus and I am a proud Mom as Callie will be one of the graduates (Congratulations from us all Callie Coconuts) but I am also dealing with so many emotions at the same time. When the kids are young and you hear the phrase, "enjoy them while they are young, it goes by so fast," you don't stop and think what that really means, or at least I didn't. Now, I feel like I am reliving every moment I can remember from the time Callie was a baby, looking at photos, starting at Osgood in Kindergarten with so many of the same amazing friends she will share the tent and stage with tomorrow as they all receive that diploma that releases them from CHS days. Where did the time go???



Congratulations to each and every one of the students, friends and families on CHS Graduation Day, June 2, 2012. You have been a wonderful class filled with fun, ups and very few downs and memories that will last a lifetime not only for Callie and all of you, but for all of us as the families too. Ok, another box of Kleenex, GONE!

Xaverian

Brother Daniel Skala, C.F.X., the Headmaster of Xaverian Brothers High School is pleased to announce that the Patrick Lewis has graduated with the Class of 2012. Patrick, son of Kevin and Peggy Lewis, plans to attend University of Rhode Island. Congratulations, Patrick!

Daly, bachelor of science in animal sciences; Colin P. Dignam, bachelor of science in electrical engineering; Christopher C. Mills, bachelor of arts in business administration; and Peter G. Oswald, bachelor of science in community entrepreneurship.

Congratulations all!

Young director

Cohasset resident Kate Griffin of Notre Dame Academy, will direct the NDA Players' production of "Anne of Green Gables." This stage adaptation of a literary classic shares the story of Anne, an orphan, who finds herself on Prince Edward Island in the home of a loving family.

Performances will take place in Cushing Auditorium at Notre Dame Academy, 1073 Main St., Hingham, at 7 p.m., on Friday, June 1, and 2 p.m., on Sunday, June 3. The show is suitable for the whole family

Tickets are $10 for students and seniors and $12 for the general public. For more information or to reserve tickets, call the box office at 339-200-3606. Proceeds from the Sunday show will benefit the all-girls' school, the Zabuli Education Center, in Afghanistan.

Silver screen

The Friends of Elder Affairs is sponsoring a lunch and viewing of the "Movie Queen" at the Cohasset Historical Society on Tuesday, June 5 at 11 am. The Movie Queen was filmed here in the late 30s with a cast of local town's people. Enjoy the views of Cohasset as it was. You would be surprised at what has changed and what has stayed the same! Transportation is available through through Elder Affairs. Reservations for lunch required. Call 781-383-9112 to reserve your spot for this great event.

June is a month that will be filled with graduation news, photos, celebrations and information about local programs, classes and summertime events and so many people look to this column to read and see all about what is happening in and "Around Town." Please make sure to fuel the column with all the exciting and fun bits of news that you have to share and tell us about so that we can include it each week, along with those wonderful photos to keep us oohing and aaahing as well. Send in all of your news, celebrations information,(make sure to label names of people) and event info no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm for the upcoming week's column.

ANNIVERSARY

Smiths celebrate 51 years

Kent and Virginia Smith of Cohasset celebrated their 51st wedding anniversary on May 27, 2012. A small family celebration arranged by the Smith's four children, SFC James Smith of East Bridgewater, Stephen and Meredith Smith of West Hartford, Conn., Lauren and Frank Giglio of Chilmark, and Jeanne and Patrick Murray of Maui, Hawaii, took place at the Scarlet Oak Tavern in Hingham on June 2, 2012.

A veteran of the U.S. Air Force and self proclaimed Sudoko extremist, presently Kent aka "Smitty" is a self-employed tax consultant in Cohasset. Virginia is a retired finance administrator who worked at Seavey Engineering in Cohasset for many years. She enjoys cooking healthy meals, travel and is a "Jeopardy" hopeful.

Kent and Virginia were married at St. Gregory's Church in Dorchester on May 27, 1960, and celebrated their reception at the Surf Ballroom in Nantasket on that day 51 years ago. They have resided in Cohasset for the past 30 years and have enjoyed making their home and raising their four children here.

Kent and Virginia enjoy spending time with their four grandchildren, Benjamin Smith, twins Emelia and Samantha Smith, and Cali Grace Giglio.

BOYS & GIRLS CLUBS

Frank and Judy Neer with Cynthia Rogers and Bill Earon, all of Cohasset, at Boys & Girls Clubs of Boston's 7th annual House Party. The event, hosted by Red Sox Owner John Henry and his wife, Linda Pizzuti Henry, raised more than $2.3 million for the organization. Also at the party were Patriots owner Robert Kraft and wide receiver, Wes Welker, among other VIPs. COURTESY/RANDY H. GOODMAN PHOTOGRAPHY

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's Church

The 88th annual Summer Recital Series will begin at 6 p.m., on Sunday June 24, and continue each Sunday until Aug. 12.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Alicia and John Seavey of Cohasset, and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Garden to feature seven gardens

The garden tour presented by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset on Thursday, June 14, will highlight seven Cohasset gardens. The day will begin at Lightkeepers at 9:30 a.m. with a lecture. Participants generally arrive between 9 and 9:30 a.m. to enjoy a hot drink and to socialize

Tickets are $40, if purchased prior to June 14. On the day the price is $45. Tickets may be purchased in Cohasset at the Windsor Tea Room, Darilynn's and Buttonwood Books and Toys. In Scituate tickets may be purchased from Kennedy's Country Gardens. For more information or to purchase tickets, call Lee at 781-383-0361 or Judy at 781-383-7058

Row with Cohasset Maritime this summer

Registration is now open for summer youth rowing at CMI. Open to youth entering eighth grade and higher, all levels, from total beginners to experienced, are welcome. The eight-week season will take place June 25 through Aug. 16, with rowers coming twice a week for 90 minutes in the afternoon, either Mondays and Wednesdays or Tuesdays and Thursdays, depending on experience levels. The fee for the season is $250. CMI will supply all the necessary equipment.

For those who want to try rowing for a shorter time, perhaps with the idea of rowing as a fall sport, CMI will offer three one-week Learn to Row "try it" weeks. These will be offered the weeks of June 25 through 29, July 9 through 13 and Aug. 6 through 10, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Fee for each week is $80. If there is interest, those who have taken a one-week course may continue with other equally experienced rowers and do a second or third week during the summer.

Rowing is the fastest growing collegiate sport in America and several CMI rowers have gone on to row in college programs. CMI rows in four-oared shells, like those rowed in college and high school programs, but more seaworthy, and perfectly designed for the waters off Cohasset.

As with all CMI programs, enrollment is limited by the number of seats in the boats. So check the CMI website (rowcmi.com) for more information. For more information, email row.cmi@comcast.net.

Little League All-Star Game

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association is having its fifth annual all-star game under the lights and family cookout on June 8 and 9 (June 10 is the rain date). The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to approve the association's use of Barnes field on those dates.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said, "This is a great event; it's the world series of the Little League season and one of the big thrills for the kids. For many, it's the first time they've played baseball at night. It's a very exciting thing for the children – there's a cookout and music there – it's a very wonderful event and I encourage people, even if they don't have kids in the program, to come down and take a look."

The game will begin around 7:30 p.m. and is expected to end around 9:30 p.m.; the lights will remain on until 10 p.m. while the facility is being cleaned.

'FUN'RAISER

5K Fun Run is for the whole family

CEF and Cohasset Rec join forces

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

On your mark, get set, sign up NOW for the first ever 5K & 1 mile Run/Walk on Sunday, June 10, 1 p.m. rain or shine. This "race" and Family Fun Fair is presented by the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) and the Cohasset Recreation Department. Organizers are more than halfway towards the field cap of 300 participants. Races include 5K, 1 mile run and a tot trot. So if you want the cool shirt (which you know you do) with the cool logo — generously donated by title sponsor, PUMA — then register immediately at cohasseteducation.org. Race registration fees increase after June 4.

"The CEF has had a lot of success with events geared toward the parents, but given that our mission is all about the kids we thought it would be great to put together a family event," says Anna Smith, CEF Board Member and Coordinator of the CEF Family Fun Run. "It's going to be a fun way to wrap up the school year and kick off summer with lots of fun outdoor events for all ages that also show off our beautiful town."

The 5K and 1 mile Run start and finish, as well as the Family Fun Fair, will take place on the Town Common. Kevin Dykas, Physical Education teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, will kick off our runners with a warm-up session. Runners will also be treated to the National Anthem performed by Cohasset's Rusty Skippers. Post-race massages for those tired muscles are courtesy of Mariposa Massage. A portion of the day's festivities is funded by a generous donation from community partner, Pilgrim Bank.

The post race Family Fair will feature the music of Jim Armstrong and the New City Cowboys as well as food from some South Shore favorites and food sponsors such as b.good burgers, Del's Lemonade and Nona's Ice Cream.

All registration fees are a tax deductible donation to the CEF. T-shirts, provided by PUMA, will be given out to the first 250 race participants to register. The CEF is grateful for the friendship and support of local resident and Puma employee, Filip Trulsson, who arranged for PUMA's title sponsorship and tremendous donation to this event.

The 5K race begins at 1 p.m., the 1 mile Walk/Run begins at 2:15 p.m, and the Fun Fair will go from 1-4 p.m. The Fair will include a petting zoo generously donated by Penniman Hill Farm, face painting, children's games and much more.

This event does specifically support the CEF and the Cohasset Recreation. Department, yet it is through community effort that it's taking place. It's a chance for the town to come together and have some fun and celebrate the beginning of summer. Event volunteers include several community groups including the Boy and Girl Scouts, Cohasset High School Cheerleaders, members of the High School Volunteer Club, High School Art students, Police Explorers and others.

Several local companies have also made donations including Race Course Marker Sponsors: Harbor Medical, Meadowcroft Camp, Mike Handrahan Builders, Rockland Trust, Rosano Davis and S. Shore Athletic Club. Race Bag Sponsors include: Cohasset Collision, Cohasset Sports Complex, Dean Harrold Painting, Health Express, Kluza Construction, Larsen Mortgage, Mathnasium, P.O.S.T. Therapy, and Steve Pinkus Electric. The CEF is also grateful for the help and generosity of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

Raffle donations and in-kind prizes provided by Rudolph Adamo Salon, Atlantic Bagel, The Body Studio, Dependable Cleaners, Outside In, Goodwin Graphics, Haaj Automotive, Ivivva Athletica, Jodi James Salon, Marathon Sports, Ports and Strong Kids. There were also several Cohasset residents who personally donated to the event including the Allen, Alves, Campbell, Corry, Doherty, Dugan, McHugh, Smith, Wimberly and Witkos families.

Come out and celebrate the Cohasset community at this first Annual 5K Run/Walk. For a full schedule of events and registration forms and fees, visit cohasseteducation.org

The mission of the Cohasset Education Foundation is to work in partnership with our schools and the community at large to promote excellence in Cohasset's public education. The CEF will continue to provide the incremental resources for programs and materials that are not covered by the Cohasset School District's operating budget in order to promote academic excellence in today's competitive environment.

GRADUATION

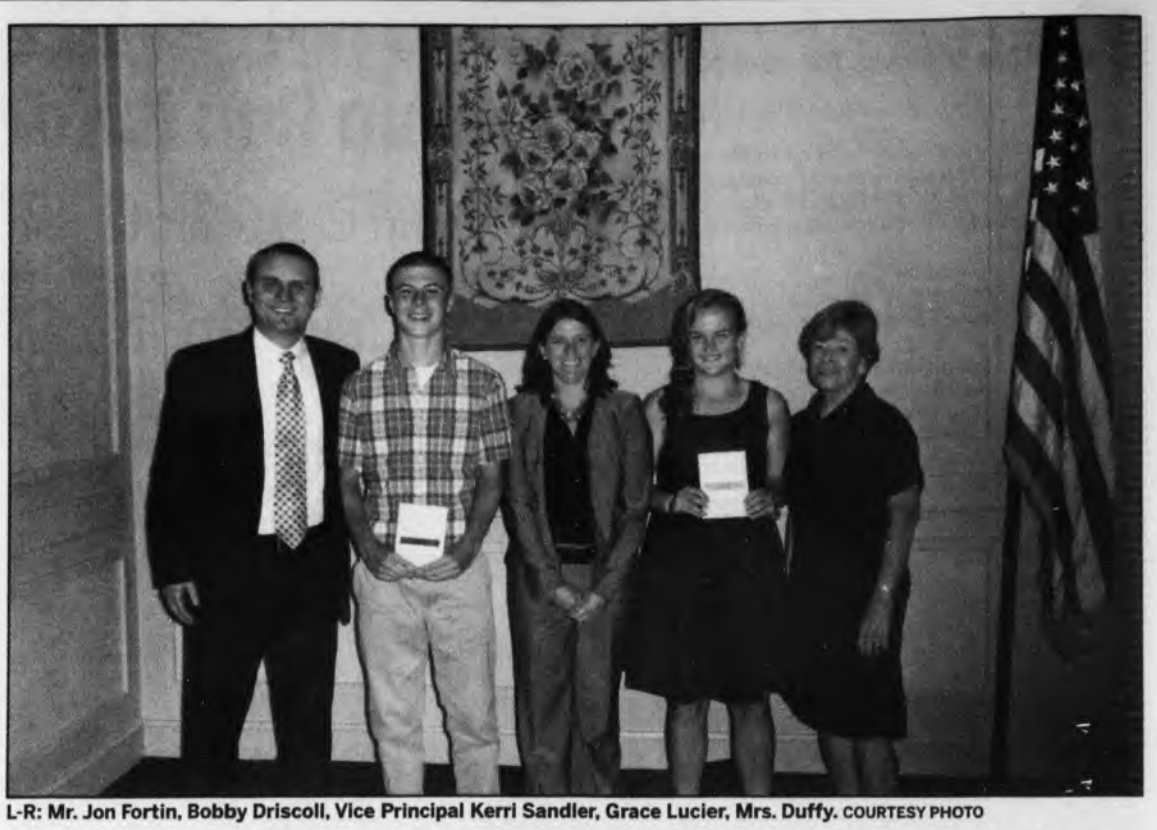
It's a time for excitement and saying goodbye. Another important fixture of Cohasset High is "graduating" this year, too — principal Dr. Michael "Mike" Gill, who is moving on from Cohasset after 32 years of working in the district. Gill starts his new position as principal of Sacred Heart High School in Kingston in July.

Will graduation day, then, be bittersweet? "Definitely," said Gill. "At prom the other night, I was standing out on the deck and thought, 'It's my last time at a Cohasset High School prom."

Though this year is Gill's last as CHS principal, saying goodbye is tough every year, the principal reflected.

"It's always sad to see the kids go," said Gill. "But usually, come this time, they're ready to launch, and we're ready to launch them… They're asking to go, they've been ready to go, and have been ready for a while. It should be good, but we'll miss them."



CHS by the numbers
1,699 volunteer hours completed by National Honor Society;
34 percent of seniors in honor society;
51 percent of CHS students on the honor roll;
94 percent of the senior class is going on to higher education.

The principal added that year's graduating class is a good mix of students.

"It's a very energetic group," said Gill. "I don't know if they're any more athletic or more inclined to drama and fine arts [than past senior classes]. They're pretty balanced, pretty diverse."

The senior class president is Kyrel Jaundoo. Vice president is Ellie Tedeschi, Olivia Franklin is secretary, and Aniko Haber is treasurer. Madeline O'Grady and Isabel Robinson are covaledictorians; Kaye Slamp is salutatorian.

School 'tech guy' says goodbye

Cisneros retiring after 42 years

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

From clunky old personal computers and dial-up internet to iPads and wireless, Cohasset schools' technology director Ken Cisneros has seen it all.

Cisneros is retiring after 42 years of serving in the Cohasset school district, both as a teacher and as tech director. Over four decades, he went from math and science teacher to resident tech expert and "Mr. Fix It" for the district's many devices.

Cisneros got his start in education right after graduating from Providence College in 1970, he said. He started out teaching math and science for grades seven, eight and nine. Altogether, Cisneros taught for 30 years and has served the schools in the technology capacity for the past 12 years.

"I was always interested in technology," said Cisneros. "I was one of the first people who had AOL [America Online]... It's interesting how much [technology] comes in and how much it changes. Each year that goes on, we need more and more."

The tech director recalled when the high school had only five computers in the administration office, and that was the total number of computers in the entire district. These computers used the old MS-DOS (Microsoft disk operating system), Cisneros explained. Technology and the devices used by schools have come a long way since then.

Over the past few decades, the district went from having those first five computers to over 800, said Cisneros. There are two iPad carts in the middle school and Deer Hill School containing 25 iPads each; there are over 30 NetBooks and several MacBooks.

Technology gradually became more widespread throughout the district, Cisneros said. The Osgood elementary school began getting PCs; the high school English classes received a few Macs. This was made possible through state technology reform grants during the schools' renovations, he explained.

Cisneros got the idea that it would be good to learn how to repair the Macs, and decided to take a computer technician course from Apple. He then "got into" computers, and there was no looking back.

"I asked my department chair if I could get a computer in my room" back in '97, Cisneros recalled. "We used it every day."

Cisneros hooked a rather primitive USB port up to the computer – "it was basically a bent stick with a camera on it – in order to connect the computer with a TV. He managed to put a lens on a microscope so students could see the microscope contents on television. Cisneros recalled one student with cerebral palsy who benefited from this technology. "It was the first time she was able to see in a microscope."

This is just one of the many memories Cisneros carries from his years in Cohasset schools. He also explained how his old classroom was eventually converted to the computer lab after he had been asked to go around to other schools and get quotes on their labs. Cisneros was asked to teach the computer lab, and said that since he liked teaching science, he would do it.

He had students testing the room for air quality, carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide and airflow. The state's EPA even donated radon kits, said Cisneros. He was eventually asked to present in Washington, D.C. at the Eisenhower National Clearinghouse, along with the EPA, who sent up a booth next to Cisneros'.

"All of that really got me into technology and how we could use it," said Cisneros. So much so that the superintendent at the time took notice, and asked Cisneros to forego teaching and become the technology coordinator for the entire district, a role he held until 2009 when he was asked to work as the district's director of technology. Cisneros explained that the roles were similar, but one required more responsibility to adhere to state requirements.

In his most recent role, Cisneros was responsible for "all the repairs for the machines and setting up the software." Cisneros has worked alongside Karen Gibbs, the technical data specialist; Deer Hill technology teacher Cassandra O'Brien; and Osgood aide Lauren Barry, who oversees the elementary school's computer lab.

Cisneros reflected on how the influx of technology has impacted students and their educations, explaining that while it's been interesting to see the changes, they have not been without challenges.

"There's always a dilemma in schools," he explained. "The kids know a lot more [about technology] than many of the teachers; few teachers have the same level of expertise. The 21st century trend is that we have to teach the students so they'll be ready for what they'll be doing later on. They're [already] using iPhones, iPads and iPods in school... The new technology helps them communicate in a new way."

The tech director explained why he thinks teachers should get on board with the trends. "Nobody likes change if they're not part of the change. As long as everyone's involved, it should work out fine."

Cisneros said that his chief concerns for schools implementing all of the new technology is keeping the students safe, whether through security and privacy settings or protecting the children's identities. The school internet has firewalls that prevent students from logging onto certain sites, including YouTube, without permissions.

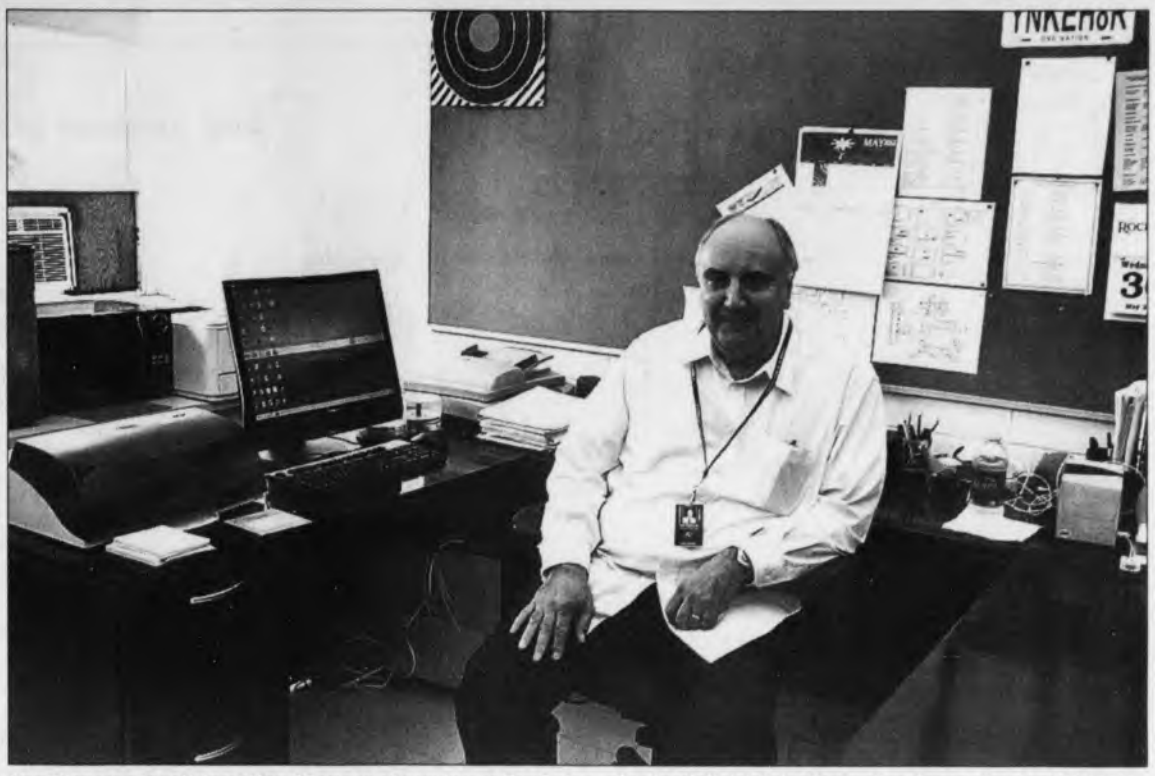
"I stray on the safety side as opposed to letting them do whatever they want," he said.

But showing that he has a soft spot for the kids, the tech director said that it's crucial to let the students be part of the decision-making when it comes to setting school usage policies and standards.

"If the teachers, staff and administration make the rules, and the students have an impact on whatever the rules are, they're more apt to abide by them because they're part of the process," Cisneros said.

All in all, the retiring tech director said that he'll miss his time working in Cohasset.

"I've enjoyed every minute I've been here," said Cisneros. "I loved teaching and hated to give that up... this is a totally different thing that I'm doing now, but I love it."



Cisneros added that in his resignation letter to the School Committee, he quoted Confucius: "Choose a job that you love and you will never have to work a day in your life."

While he loves his work, Cisneros said that he'll enjoy his newfound time off, being at home with his wife, a fellow retired teacher — he joked that her "honey-do list" for him could fit in a book. He also said he'll enjoy hobbies like golfing and buying, repairing and selling watches.

The schools will replace the director of technology position with a Chief Technology Officer, a job that will be split with the town. Cisneros said he met the new hire and feels he is qualified for the job.

But the Cohasset resident, who's lived in town since 1973, said that it's finally time for him to "graduate" from Cohasset schools.

"My mother... was valedictorian at her high school in Texas; my dad was appointed to the Coast Guard Academy... my wife had a double promotion when she was in high school, and my son was valedictorian here in Cohasset," Cisneros said. "Now, it's taken me 42 years to get out of school."

Ken Cisneros is retiring after 42 years of serving in the Cohasset school district, both as a teacher and as tech director.

OUR VIEW

Our teachers

We all remember them: Our teachers.

The Cohasset High School Class of 2012 will be no different. Members of the class will recall much about their years in the Cohasset Public Schools including their teachers.

And so they should because:

A teacher is so much more than what a test can gauge.

A teacher is a counselor, a nurse, a healer of broken hearts.

A teacher is a police officer watching out for our children's safety.

A teacher is a locksmith unlocking a wonderful world of knowledge.

A teacher is a guide in the adventure of learning.

A teacher is a straight man, a comedian, an actor, a storyteller, a puppeteer.

A teacher is a carpenter with a bulletin board, a bookbinder with Scotch tape, a sanitation worker with the wastebasket.

A teacher is a banker keeping track of lunch money, ice cream money and milk money.

A teacher is a salesman. The product is knowledge.

A teacher is a hairstylist when a ponytail falls down, a fix-it man when the pencil sharpener falls apart.

A teacher is wait staff at snack time, a referee at recess time, a doorkeeper at dismissal time.

A teacher is a press agent, a proofreader, a peacemaker, a playmate.

A teacher is a detective searching for clues, a lawyer settling disputes, a judge making decisions.

A teacher is a coach, a caretaker, a cheerleader.

A teacher is a psychiatrist fostering self-esteem, an optometrist helping children see clearly, a neurologist soothing frayed nervous systems.

A teacher is a wizard squeezing small shoes into smaller boots.

A teacher is an X-ray technician reading minds, a publisher at the copier, a partner with parents in the adventure of education.

A teacher is a miracle worker taking straight and curved lines and making them into letters, taking letters and making them into words, and taking words and making them into ideas.

A teacher must be a guide through cyberspace making sure that students are not lost in the Internet's web.

A teacher is the first one to take the tiny hand of the frightened kindergartner and the last one to shake the proud hand of the high school graduate.

Hats off to all our teachers.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Upset over condition of Woodside

Memorial Day is a very special day in Cohasset and it always has been. It is a longstanding point of pride that Cohasset has so consistently and honorably paid tribute to their veterans. It is a day when members of generations of Cohasset families, along with people who have moved to this lovely town over the years, gather to pay their respects to the service men and women of our shared community.

I was disgusted at the conditions of the grounds at Woodside Cemetery where several generations of my family, many of them decorated Veteran's, lie in rest. The gravestones were coated up to two feet high with spewed, wet grass from mowing; footstones were obliterated by that same thoughtless attention; Flowers lovingly planted by family members were crushed. On a day when one should be able to pay their respects, families were left with a crass cleaning job.

In all, this total disrespect and disregard for the fallen and for all those who are interred at Woodside should be an embarrassment to the people charged with maintaining these graves, these memorials to our families. Who is responsible for this? I grew up in this town, have family here still and frequently return to see them and friends. In all my years, I have never seen such a deplorable state of conditions. Selectmen and women, Public Works Director, Cemetery Trustees – do your duty. This is a simple task. Good Lord, if you can't do this, what do you do?

Nate Murray, Kingston

Post Prom thanks

We would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to all of the families and businesses that supported Cohasset's pre and post-prom events. It truly takes a village to plan and host a fun and safe post-prom celebration for our teens, and this year's event was a huge success thanks to our community's support. Special thanks to the Cohasset PSO and D.A. Michael Morrissey's office, and to the following local businesses who helped make this 15th annual event especially memorable:

All the Best Natural Foods, Atlantic Bagel, Atlantic Brokerage, Balance Studio, Coastal Nissan, Cohasset Collision Center, Cohasset Jewelers, Cohasset Pizza House, Del's Lemonade, Dependable Cleaners, Dr. Barry Tufts, Dr. Kevin Thomas, EK Designs, Fetco, Fiori Gulf, Fusion Studio, French Memories, Good Sport, Hajjars Men's Clothing, Higgins Building & Remodeling, Harborview Kitchens, Hingham Institute of Savings, JJ's & JJ's Junction, Mariposa, Mr. Dooley's, Mathnasium, The Music Circus, Pat's Barber Shop, Pilgrim Bank, The Naughton Company, Raymond Kasperowicz, CPA, Richard Losado Electric, Robbins Garage, Shaw's, Shoe Market Kids, Sullivan Garrity and Donnelly Insurance, Starbucks, Stop & Shop, Tiryaki Architectural Design, Victoria's Pizza, Village Deli and The Village Greenery.

PMC South Shore Kids Ride is June 10

This summer, the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge South Shore Kids Ride will be one of 35 PMC Kids Rides held in neighborhoods throughout New England and beyond. The PMC Kids Rides program attracts more than 6,000 cyclists who will ride between one and 26-miles in mini-bike-a-thons to raise money for cancer care and research.

The PMC Kids Rides are spokes in the PMC wheel, joining the more than 5,500 adult PMC cyclists in their mission to fund adult and pediatric cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund. The PMC is the two-day, 190-mile bike-a-thon that takes place each August. Since 1980, the PMC has raised $338 million for the Jimmy Fund. PMC Kids Rides offer a way for children to become part of the PMC mission, involving young people in volunteerism and fundraising in a safe and athletic way. The PMC Kids Rides program has raised more than $4 million since it was founded in 1998.

To give the young cyclists an additional push, the PMC recognizes cyclists in the Kids Rides program who raise $250 or more. Riders who meet this goal are honored as Heavy Hitters and receive a backpack and a certificate from the PMC acknowledging their fundraising achievements.

The PMC South Shore Kids Ride expects more than 450 children, ages 3 to 15 to choose one of five cycling routes at the DCR Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. The routes are designed for varying levels of riding experience. Cyclists can choose to ride up to 6 miles and take on the paved and unpaved mountain bike routes. In 2006, the PMC South Shore Kids Ride was started by Melissa Robin and Kristin Perini-Driscoll to honor their siblings who had cancer at a young age. The PMC South Shore Kids Ride will host a party after the ride, which will include refreshments, an inflatable slide, a magic show, raffle prizes and more. The ride hopes to raise $50,000 for the PMC.

The PMC South Shore Kids Ride will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, Sunday, June 10, at DCR Womaptuck State Park, 204 Union St., Hingham. There is a $15 registration fee before due before June 3. There is also a $50 fundraising minimum. PMC Kids Rides are sponsored by Stop & Shop. Contributions can be made payable to the Pan-Mass Challenge. To register, visit http://kids.pmc.org/hingham. For more information, email pmchingham@comcast.net or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

HEALTH NOTES

Staying cool when things heat up

STEVE BOBO

It's time to begin to avoid the effects of summer heat. Over the last 40 years, excessive heat exposure has caused roughly 4,015 deaths in the United States. More people in this country died from extreme heat than from hurricanes, lightning, tornadoes, floods, and earthquakes combined. Even young and healthy individuals can succumb to heat, so we should reduce our participation in strenuous physical activities during hot weather. Air-conditioning is one protective factor against heat-related illness and death. If a home is not air-conditioned, one can reduce the risk for heat-related illness by spending time in air-conditioned facilities. One can also help prevent heat-related illness by frequently drinking water or nonalcoholic fluids; wearing lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing or exercising during cooler parts of the day.

A new mantra for those feeling the effects of the summer season: Use more water. Cohasset's water is fine, but the fiction that it tastes bad may still have some weight, since frequently the taste of water in other places is different, but seldom is unhealthy owing to good oversight and control. And by all means stop for that coffee cooler; just skip the doughnut on the way to lunch.

Warning signs of heat stroke vary but may include the following:

- An extremely high body temperature (above 103 F)
- Hot and dry skin (no sweating, sometimes accompanied by skin lesions)
- Rapid, strong pulse
- Throbbing headache
- Dizziness, Nausea; Confusion, Unconsciousness

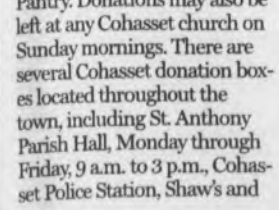
If you see any of these signs, you may be dealing with a life-threatening emergency. Have someone call for immediate medical assistance while beginning cooling the victim. Do the following:

Get the victim to a shady area and cool him rapidly using whatever methods you can. For example, immerse the victim in a tub of cool water; place the person in a cool shower; spray the victim with cool water from a garden hose; sponge the person with cool water; or if the humidity is low, wrap the victim in a cool, wet sheet and fan him or her vigorously.

Monitor body temperature, and continue cooling efforts until it drops to 101-102 F.

If medical personnel are delayed, call a hospital emergency room for instructions.

Do not give the victim alcohol to drink, and get medical assistance as soon as possible.



Sometimes a victim's muscles will begin to twitch uncontrollably as a result of heat stroke. If this happens, keep the victim from injuring himself, but do not place any object in the mouth and do not give fluids. Keep his air passages clear.

Other heat related illnesses such as heat exhaustion, heat rash, and sunburn are less life threatening. Dress sensibly; you can always put on more clothes, but there's a limit to how much you can take off. And wear a hat!

FOR THE RECORD

Open meetings, close loopholes

GREGORY MATHIS

Attorney General Martha Coakley's office was handed oversight of the Open Meeting Law on July 1, 2010.

Since that date, Coakley's office says it has responded to thousands of requests and inquiries about the Open Meeting Law and "conducted or participated in more than 63 trainings across the state and issued dozens of determinations."

It seemed progress was being made for this very important public law that ensures town government is handled in an open and transparent way when Coakley's office announced it would amend the definition of an intentional violation.

On the surface it appeared the AG's office was going to hold town officials even more accountable for ... well, intentional violations of the Open Meeting Law.

As journalists covering meeting after meeting, it's apparent to us that town officials oftentimes knowingly violate the Open Meeting Law. Either that or some are so unaware of the law that we can only assume ignorance.

The new amendment related to intentional violations falls into many of the complaints we file with the AG. The fact of the matter is there are town officials who want town business to be done behind closed doors and out of the public eye as much as possible.

And as much as the Attorney General's office has tried to put some bite into the Open Meeting Law, including a $1,000 penalty for a violation, they've done an injustice by watering it down by adding in this loophole ...

"Where a public body or public body member has made a good faith attempt at compliance with the law, but was reasonably mistaken about its requirements, or acted in good faith compliance with the advice of the public body's legal counsel, such conduct will not be considered an intentional violation ..."

So, if town counsel gives you bad advice, you're OK with violating the Open Meeting Law. Sounds like a lot of town counsels are going to be taking the fall for town officials looking for a loophole in the law. Makes you wonder how or if town attorneys will be held accountable.

The Open Meeting Law has a lot of legs to it and it can be confusing. We shouldn't assume every new town official, or even every veteran town official, knows every aspect of the changes made to the Open Meeting Law. Education is the key, but stricter penalties and hefty fines would also go a long way toward preventing further abuses of the law and ensuring that town government is indeed conducted in a public setting – with transparency.

There will be a public hearing held on the Attorney General's proposed regulation on Tuesday, July 17 in Boston. Copies of the proposed amendment to the regulation can be found at:

www.mass.gov/ago/openmeeting.

Written comments on the proposed regulation should be directed to Amy Nable, director, Division of Open Government, Office of the Attorney General, One Ashburton Place, 20th Floor, Boston, MA 02108 or by email to openmeeting@state.ma.us. Comments must be submitted by 5 p.m., on July 17.

We'll be sending comments to ensure the spirit of the Open Meeting Law is upheld, that's for sure.

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Cohasset Food Pantry provides food and other necessities to any Cohasset resident who demonstrates a need. New clients may call the pantry to arrange a meeting with one of the directors and complete the required paper work. Each client must provide two forms of identification such as a current Massachusetts driver's license, and one other legal document, showing proof of residence.

The pantry currently is in need of the following items:

Coffee, tea, fruit juice, canned fruit-no sugar added, pancake mix, maple syrup, school-size snacks, cereal, corned beef hash, beef stew, chicken/vegetable/beef broth, strawberry/raspberry jam, diced tomatoes, ketchup/ mayonnaise/relish, laundry/dish detergents, car soap and cleaning products. The wish list also includes fresh fruit and vegetables such as carrots, celery, green beans, lettuce, tomatoes, spinach, potatoes-white/sweet, oranges, apples, or any fruit in season.

This spring, the Food Pantry will be working with Pat Messing-Hague, a nutritionist who lives in Cohasset. Messing-Hague is assisting families by providing healthful recipes that are made by combining canned goods and fresh vegetables. Last month, clients received a box with all the ingredients to make a healthful vegetable soup.

Once again, the Food Pantry is looking for gardeners to join the summer project, "Plant A Row For the Pantry." Community members are asked to plant one row of vegetables for the pantry in their home or neighborhood garden. Last year fresh vegetables were received all summer long. It was so successful, it is hoped that more gardeners will take part.

Cohasset Food Pantry appreciates the continued support of family, friends and neighbors in the Cohasset community.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Honoring our true heroes

By Lt. Col. Benjamin T. Watson
Keynote speaker

In many respects these men and women, to the casual observer, appear quite ordinary. Yet they raise their right hand, swear an oath, and devote their lives to something greater than themselves.

I want to express my sincere thanks to Tom Wigmore, Glenn Pratt, and the rest of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post, and to the town of Cohasset for allowing me the honor of being here with you today and sharing a few words. Although I was not raised here, I was married here in St. Anthony's Catholic Church to a daughter of Gino DiGirolamo, and I have been a proud member of the Mealy Post for 17 years. I know that the town of Cohasset has always steadfastly supported our military forces with more than just words... with her sons and daughters... with the blood and treasure of this town. And so especially, on this day, I'd like to recognize any of our Gold Star families here with us; you above all honor us with your presence.

Well it is surely nice to have a day off today, and I know we've all got plans to enjoy it. Of all people, however, those of you who have taken the time to join us here, understand today's true purpose, and that purpose is to honor sacrifice. Today is not Veteran's Day, a day we honor those who serve and who have served in our military forces. Today is Memorial Day. Our nation sets aside one day each year to honor the men and women who have sacrificed their lives so that we might gather here today in freedom and enjoy the many rights and privileges of life in this great Nation of ours. Here today, under this our noble flag, we enjoy the freedom to assemble and to speak freely. This weekend, many of us exercised our right to attend a house of worship while many others did not, but the choice of whether and where to do so was ours to make. These freedoms are not universal, and they come at a cost.

In another time, another place, I might have noted that we sit here in both freedom and peace, but of all people, you here today are among those who understand that this is not a time of peace. Our country is at war as it has been many times before in our history. And during this time of war, there are men and women, who as we gather here and enjoy this day, are at the gates, and on the wall, and in harms way overseas, doing the dirty, violent, and dangerous work that great nation's require to defend their interests, protect their people, and shape a better future.

These brave men have had an impact on this world, and made a contribution to the security of our Nation that far exceeds that of the vast majority of Americans. These men volunteer to serve their country in its military forces, to defend our shores, and more notably to deploy forward and fight our Nation's battles overseas in an effort to ensure that Americans will not have to fight those enemies here at home. In many respects these men and women, to the casual observer, appear quite ordinary. Yet they raise their right hand, swear an oath, and devote their lives to something greater than themselves. They unselfishly serve under the star-spangled flag of this the greatest nation on earth. And I have borne witness time and again in the most austere locations, under the most Spartan conditions, and in the most trying of circumstances, to the fact that these men are capable of the most extraordinary heroism.

Where do these heroes come from? Well in my personal experience, they come from places like Kilgore and Tomball, Texas. They come from St. Louis, Missouri and Anderson, Indiana; Miami and Winter Park, Florida; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and Thornton, Colorado; they come from Ashland City, Tennessee, and they most certainly come from Cohasset, Massachusetts. They come from all over this great nation, and all walks of life, but are united by their unselfish love of Country, Corps, and, above all else, their brothers.

For three years I had the great honor of commanding the 3rd Battalion, 1st Marine Regt. And I can tell you that our recent experience in Garmsir District of Helmand Province, Afghanistan clearly illustrates a story being told and retold across Afghanistan: that where Americans go, and Americans fight, and American stay to support our Afghan partners in rebuilding a country racked by decades of war, that fundamental change is possible... that winning is possible. The Garmsir, Afghanistan that I left last year was entirely different than the Garmsir that we found when we arrived. The Taliban had been cleared from the population centers; thousands of children were attending school for the first time in years; the Afghan police patrolled the district from north to south and the army was making tangible gains in capability; people were represented in local government and were demonstrating resilience and a willingness to accept personal risk to invest in a brighter future.

Success, however, comes at a cost. I lost 14 men in Afghanistan that year, and I would ask for your brief indulgence to honor the memory of Sergeant Kenneth May, Cpl Jeffrey Johnson, HM3 Zarian Wood, Sgt Brandon Bury, Cpl Donald Marler, LCpl Derek Hernandez, Sgt John Rankel, Sgt Joe Caskey, HN William Ortega, Cpl Larry Harris Jr, Cpl Max Donahue, Cpl Kristopher Greer, GySgt Floyd Holley, and Cpl Matthew Thomas.

But among the many who returned home safely was a great young Marine corporal named Wade Wilson. A bright and charismatic machine gunner, he was everything that you looked for in a young leader of Marines. He always had a positive attitude and always had a good story or two to tell, and I looked forward to every chance I got to spend time with him. Well by the time we returned from Afghanistan, Wade had served his four years in the Marine Corps, deployed overseas twice, and had options. Wade could have left the Corps and gone home to his family, or he could have stayed in and transferred to a job that kept him from deploying... he'd earned that. But Wade Wilson transferred instead to the 2nd Battalion, 5th Marines, was promoted to Sergeant and deployed back to Afghanistan this spring. Last week, Sgt Wade Wilson was killed leading his Marines in Musa Qala, in Helmand Province. He was buried near his hometown of Leona, Texas and has been posthumously recommended for the Silver Star, our Nation's third highest award for valor. I have spent my entire adult life in the company of heroes; heroes like Sgt Wade Wilson.

So today we gather to honor the sacrifice of those heroes who have gone before us, fought for freedom, and defended our great Nation in far off places like Normandy, Iwo Jima, Korea, Vietnam, Iraq, Afghanistan and on other battlefields too numerous to mention, and given their lives so that we might gather here today. And in honoring them, I would ask you to recall the words from the third verse of America the Beautiful:

O beautiful for heroes proved
In Liberating Strife
Who more than self their country loved
And mercy more than life.

While many people admire the great athletes, the American Idols, and the founders of Apple and Facebook; they are not my heroes. My heroes are the men and women who fought for freedom, and returned home on their shields, their bodies draped by that star spangled banner; the men and women who are missing and have yet to return home; and those who returned from their service, but later succumbed to their wounds... men like Marine Lieutenant Norman "Mac" Todd, who died at home here in Cohasset in 1947 of radiation exposure from his service in WWII, and Paul Lawrence who died in 2008 as a result of exposure to Agent Orange in Vietnam. They are my heroes, and they are what today is truly all about. So ladies and gentlemen, enjoy this day, but please take a moment all to yourself, at some point today and give a silent prayer of thanks for those men and women who have left our shores, under this most beautiful of all flags, and sooner or later paid the ultimate price. To these brave men and women we say thank you, we owe you a debt that can never be repaid, and we dedicate this day, as a nation, to honor your memory, your service and sacrifice. We will never forget you. Semper Fidelis.

Our World Co-Founder Mary Larson details the amount of time and work that has gone in to making the Our World Museum the entity that it is today.

Charles Humphreys, lawyer for Our World Museum, discusses his understanding of the lease during Tuesday night's Selectman's meeting at the museum.

At the time, said Larson, the wing of the former Osgood School was a condemned portion of the building that "the library didn't want to use."

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness. The library trustees approached Larson's fellow co-chair, Leah Taylor Roy, about using the space for the museum; the Oct. 2000 Special Town Meeting approved leasing the wing to the discovery center. The agreement was for the town to lease the building to Our World for $1 per year until the museum became financially stable. Through private fundraising, the space was renovated and turned into Our World to the tune of $90,000.

Larson reported Tuesday night that the museum is self-sufficient. Despite some financial hurdles, including building the museum's accompanying playground for $150,000, Larson said that the museum has paid down half the debt it owes to the Hingham Institution for Savings and currently has money in both its checking and savings accounts with "no outstanding bills except the mortgage." The museum has gotten by on private donations, memberships and volunteers.

While discussing the museum's financial future, Larson said that goals include paying down debt, creating new exhibits, replacing the 10-year-old rug, upgrading the theater's projector, and perhaps expanding the outdoor playground. These items would continue to be fund the way the museum has always paid for things, said Larson: fundraisers, donations, memberships and gifts.

"The point I want to make is that we did this ourselves; we didn't come to the town for anything," said Larson. "We are self-sustaining... This will be done, at no trouble to you."

Mission

Our World's mission, said Larson, has been to promote children's learning of their greater place in the world, to "provide a nice place in Cohasset for South Shore mothers and their children to come, and to broaden people's horizons."

When selectman Martha Gjesteby asked what percentage of the children that come to the museum are from Cohasset, museum director Julie Laugelle said it's around 50 percent, and that many Our World members and visitors are from surrounding towns like Scituate, Hingham and Norwell. Laugelle added that besides mothers, many nannies, grandparents and stay at home dads also bring kids to the museum.

Meghan Whoriskey, director of the museum's Mothers' Council, spoke to the selectmen on what the museum means to her as a parent.

"There is such a support out there for the museum," Whoriskey said. "To have all of this in our town — it's so important to have our children explore through math, art, science and learn globally how children are different from here, but how we're all the same. It fosters growth and sets our children up for success... I grew up in town and have a connection here. It's really important to see all of this stay here."

The library trustees seem to have other plans. Those who attended Tuesday night's meeting seemed to share the understanding that once the museum's lease ends, so will Our World, freeing up the space for library usage.

Library trustee Carolyn Coffey reminded the selectmen that they are "aware the library, too, would love to be able to put this space to good use," adding that the library represents townspeople from a "young age to empty nesters." Coffey explained that the library has outgrown the space of its largest meeting groups, impacting the type of programming the library is able to offer the community. The library would also like to have access to the back parking lot.

Larson said that Our World already shares space with the library, as the library hosts its author talk series and high school homework night on the museum side of the house. "We believe in being good neighbors," Larson said.

Library trustees said, however, that they are confined in the current space allotted and have had instances when homework night clashes with a children's birthday party hosted by the museum.

Library trustee Patience Towle told the selectmen that during their winter meeting, the library trustees presented a plan for the library's expansion done by the architect the library hired. Optimal expansion, said Towle, requires the use of the Our World space.

Selectman Leland Jenkins asked Towle if the library takes over Our World, would they be willing to pay for the work that's been done on it? Towle responded "no."

Library trustee Agnes McCann asked the selectmen to refrain from voting the matter that night, but added, "The plan was always at some point to take over this space – it was always in the future – and the plans for the [museum's] indefinite future tonight surprised me greatly."

This was news to Larson, who responded, "If I'd been told what you're implying now, that you were going to take over in 10 years... how could I have asked people for money if it was all going out the window in 10 years?"

At that point the discussion became so heated that selectmen chair Paul Carlson used his gavel, which he ended up doing several more times throughout the evening. Larson then deferred to the discovery center's lawyer, Charles Humphreys.

"I hate to see something else turn adversarial," said Humphreys, explaining that according to the terms of the lease, if the museum's lease with the town is terminated, the museum can remove the improvements it made on the space. The selectmen are charged with renewing the lease – or not – at its expiration. But it's "not that simple," said Humphreys.

"The town has, in my opinion, an absolute moral obligation to continue with the lease for a 10-year period. To allow others to come in and say they want the space now puts the selectmen in an impossible position. They don't need that kind of pressure at this time."

Humphreys went on to say that the museum only found out that the library wanted to expand into Our World when Town Counsel contacted Humphreys and said, "'I understand your museum is defunct and the library's taking over,'" said Humphreys. "We're still here, alive and vibrant."

Whoriskey, meanwhile, told the selectmen that she believes that while the museum has a future – "The little ones are going to be here" – the library may not.

"In this age of technology, children at age two know how to use an iPad... We don't know how long the library is going to be here."

Whoriskey's comment elicited gasps from the audience, to which she added, "I'm just telling you – I'm a reading teacher – how difficult it is to get kids to read books."

Still, Whoriskey concluded, "We're all doing this for our children... It's a shame we can't all work together and make it work."

Library director Jackie Rafferty addressed Whoriskey's comment immediately, saying, "I do feel it's very important to let you know the library is going to go on for a very long time." Rafferty said that she was recently inducted to the state library hall of fame and said that people can borrow eBooks and print books from the library.

"I do a tremendous amount of research on this topic," said Rafferty. "Print is not going away; [technology and print] can co-exist together. Reading has increased in both formats."

The reason the library needs more space, said Rafferty, is because "we've never been busier. People of all ages are using the library more than ever... It's no secret we've outgrown our space."

Compromise

Efforts were made by audience members and selectmen to see if the museum and library could reach some sort of compromise.

Patrick Kennedy said, "It seems to me the lease terms are able to be renegotiated. Since there's a renewal, maybe there's a possibility of accommodating both party's interests."

Selectman Diane Kennedy asked Larson if, in the long term, the museum envisioned expanding and "leaving this confining space." Larson responded that she hoped to stay, and that the current 7,000 square foot layout was "actually the ideal size for a children's museum. Under 6,000 feet is too confining... under 7,500 is manageable." Larson added that the proximity to the playground, parking spaces and a central location in town make the location ideal.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski suggested that he meet with both parties to come to some kind of agreement. As the lease expires in September, the board has some time, said Milanoski, though he suggested a decision be made no later than July.

Larson said that the library had already met with the selectmen "without telling us," to which Towle responded, "We are elected town officials," causing Carlson to reach for the gavel once more to end the argument.

Larson concluded that "there is a lot of pressure to this... People haven't been respectful to us." She elaborated in a statement on Wednesday, "I was extremely grateful for the selectmen to take time and effort to come to the museum. It was my first opportunity to show them what was done, and I appreciate them going to the trouble. I spoke from my heart with all the knowledge I could share after 10 years of working extremely hard to give this to the community. It's a wonderful place; you could see how valued it is by the people who spoke.

"I have every confidence in the selectmen and acting town manager that they will listen fairly to the presentation, but that they will come to the fair and legal decision that is right. We have the option for 10 more years, have fulfilled every requirement of lease, and would like to be given the opportunity to meet our potential. We are staged for growth, and people have donated a lot of money to see that dream come true.

"I am more than happy to continue our working relationship [with the library], which has been wonderful," Larson concluded. "Sharon Moody [children's librarian] and Julie Laugelle have worked together beautifully, and we plan on continuing that."

Kennedy asked to meet with both parties along with Milanoski, as her professional background is in programming. She said she hopes to "find ways of capitalizing on the strengths of each organization."

As of press time, no word was given as to when both organizations would meet with the town manager, or when the matter would come back to the selectmen.

During the meeting, Allie Gilbert, a mother speaking in support of Our World, said that the museum has given her and other South Shore parents "a new lease on life." It remains to be seen whether or not Our World will be given a new lease.

Our World traffic, membership

When Our World opened its doors in 2003, it was projected that the museum would attract 30,000 visitors per year.

While museum director Julie Laugelle was unable to provide those statistics, she did say that there are 135 members, "with new people coming in every day." Many of these members also come to the museum on a daily basis, she said.

As far as foot traffic goes, Laugelle said that it depends on the day. "It depends on the weather, too. On rainy, cold wintry days, we're packed; on nice days, it's sometimes very little. But sometimes when you think it's beautiful out and we won't be busy, we're packed. No matter what the weather is, we're very steady."

Mary Larson, co-founder of the museum and president of its board, said that they estimate having between 15 and 50 visitors a day.

There are two different membership packages of varying costs. The basic family package costs $75 per year for the first two children and $10 for each additional child. The second level package is $125 and includes reciprocal membership to 110 other participating children's museums across the country.

For non-members, admission is $7 per child.

New water operator chosen

Town Manager, water dept. select new vendor

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After receiving several bids for new contracts to run the town's water plant, the Water Commission and interim Town Manager have come to an agreement and selected a new vendor.

The plant's current contract with American Water is up on June 30.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski told the Board of Selectmen Tuesday that following a proposal evaluation by a special selection committee, consisting of the three water commissioners and a member each from the selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget Committees, a top vendor was chosen.

After going out to bid for contract proposals, the Water Commission received several proposals for operation, management and maintenance of the plant. They received the last of the bids last Thursday, May 17 and held a meeting to review them the next day. The special committee reviewed both five-year contract proposals and proposals for two-year contracts with one-year extensions

Milanoski wrote in a document explaining the committee's review process, "Based on the technical review and the analysis of cost proposals, similar scope of work for both the two and five [year] proposals, the general distinction between the shorter and longer term contracts with a lower price and additional cost savings versus long term with lock-in price," the best proposal for the town's waterworks comes from the firm Woodard and Curran.

"In the end, a slightly shorter contract that offers both a lower cost and greater flexibility is more advantageous to the Town," wrote Milanoski.

The town manager told selectmen that the water commissioners have managed to save the Cohasset water ratepayers approximately $1.25 million over three years.

Woodard and Curran is a privately held, 650-person engineering, consulting and operations firm with a national clientele ranging from municipalities to colleges and food and beverage manufacturers.

Milanoski said in his report that Woodard and Curran's proposal "was ranked first well above the other proposals." According to minutes from the review meeting, the firm "was very detailed in their technical recommendation... and they proved to be the most detailed and specific due diligence report on Cohasset Water. Woodard and Curran's cost savings are $91,030 below the baseline. In addition, they provided no proposed restrictions on the future savings of the operations thereby allowing the ratepayer to benefit fully from potential future cost savings."

Water commission weighs in Speaking on behalf of his fellow water commissioners, chair Peter DeCaprio had this to say on the new operations contract:

"We received seven proposals from six bidders – four proposals for the two-year contract and three proposals for the five-year. The spread between the lowest and highest bids was substantial, in excess of $200,000 for each proposal, so I am very glad we received the number of bids we got. While we are disappointed that we didn't get any concession bids, the fact that we issued a concession RFP [request for proposal] drove interest in all of our proposals and resulted in the aggressive pricing we got– everyone knew of our interest in the concession, yet didn't know who would propose on it, or what the proposal would be, so competition clearly worked for us.

"While we were advised by the prior town manager [Michael Coughlin] and his operations manager to issue just one RFP, we ignored that advice and I'm glad we did – we wouldn't have gotten the result we got without multiple proposals in the market. Once our RFP's were in the street, we started getting immediate feedback. We took note of all of it, and then issued a series of amendments in April to both of our RFP's which had the desired impact – the amendments helped to drive interest in our contract even higher. Bidders that had initially claimed no interest resurfaced and submitted bids. The process worked as it should.

"We are very happy to have selected Woodard and Curran. They have a long and successful track record in their water systems operations group, and they bring a great deal of expertise to the table with respect to streamlining water operations and the automated controls surrounding water plant operations – they are the recognized leader in our area for SCADA system design and development, which is the system we use to monitor our plant's operations. They will also help us better utilize our GIS mapping technology, which will make our field personnel more productive.

"The focus of the department will now shift almost exclusively to water quality and capital, and they are not mutually exclusive. Our goal now is to improve water quality by lowering the levels of disinfectant by products in our water, and we are confident that Woodard and Curran will help us get there. We will make an immediate evaluation of our treatment process, and we hope with a small amount of judiciously applied capital, we will be able to make improvements to water quality.

"While we will save a great deal of money with our new contract, we believe we have even more room to reduce costs elsewhere in our operations. With our renewed focus on our production process and water quality, we also hope to simultaneously reduce the amount of chemicals we use and the amount of sludge we produce, while at the same time using less energy in the process. We have a number of ideas for increased energy efficiency, many of which we've gotten from Woodard and Curran."

Recent water woe

The water department recently dealt with a public health issue when E.coli bacteria was found in untreated water samples from Ellms Meadow, the only well station that supplies drinking water to the Cohasset system. The sample was taken on May 8; the water department was given preliminary notification on May 12 and waited for response from the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Following DEP guidelines, the water department notified the public on May 14. Since a boil water order was not given, the department did not have to notify the public within 24 hours, according to DeCaprio. Follow-up water samples came back clear, the water department reported on May 15.

Q &A on Social Host Law

It is well known that anyone under 21 who drinks or possesses alcohol in Massachusetts can be charged criminally. Anyone who furnishes alcohol to a person under the age of 21 can also be prosecuted. What is not known to most citizens of the Commonwealth is the fact that under the state's social host responsibility law, there are also serious consequences for parents who allow teens and their friends to consume alcohol in their homes. Parents may face imprisonment and fines under the law.

Can I be charged criminally if underage guests are drinking in my home?

Yes. The legal drinking age in Massachusetts is 21. It is against the law to allow a person under 21 years of age, "to possess alcoholic beverages on premises or property owned or controlled by the person." M.G.L. c.138, sec. 34.

What are the penalties for serving underage guests alcohol in my home?

You could face a fine up to $2,000, imprisonment for up to a year or both. You may also be civilly liable.

What if my underage child has a party at my home and serves alcohol to underage guests when I am not there?

Your child may be charged criminally for allowing underage guests to drink, whether he provided the alcohol or not. Even if you are not home you have a duty to prevent teens from drinking in your home.

What if my underage child is drinking at someone else's home?

You could still be civilly liable in this situation if you gave permission for your underage child to drink in someone else's home and he injures or kills a third party.

Will my homeowner's insurance policy cover a judgment against me if I am found civilly liable?

It may, but your insurance policy may not cover the full judgment.

CASE DISMISSED

CPC in the clear with the Open Meeting Law

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Mariner raised a question after a recent Board of Selectmen's meeting, during which five of the nine Community Preservation Committee (CPC) members attended and spoke on their Town Meeting warrant article, as to whether the committee violated the Open Meeting Law. According to the OML, a majority of the board constitutes a quorum; if a quorum is met, the board is prohibited from discussing official business unless a public meeting is posted.

The CPC did discuss committee business with the selectmen at their April 26 meeting, but were there to present their warrant article. One of the CPC's members, Leland Jenkins, is also on the board of selectmen and was acting as a selectman during that meeting, not as a member of the CPC.

CPC chairman Russ Bonetti wrote to the Attorney General's office and asked if his committee was in violation; an attorney wrote back and stated that an official complaint would have to be filed with the AG's office in order for them to investigate. Bonetti said the plan was to have the committee state that they were not in violation of the OML and then have someone contest it; they basically would have filed a complaint against themselves.

Bonetti reported to the Mariner last week that he spoke with Town Counsel on the matter. According to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, the committee did not violate the OML. DeRensis explained that committees do not have to post a meeting if they appear before another board, so long as deliberations do not take place.

The CPC was not on the selectmen's agenda that night, but members spoke up during a general discussion on Town Meeting warrant articles. CPC members did not take an official vote during the meeting.

Then Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr raised a similar concern during a selectmen's meeting at which a quorum of the Planning Board, which had taken a no confidence vote in selectmen at a recent meeting of their own, attended to protest the board's action to void their planning coordinator's contract. He told the board they could be in violation but the planning board members said they came as citizens.

Boys and girls notch wins

Girls eliminated, boys play today

The MIAA Tournament came and went quickly for the Cohasset girls lacrosse team, with a 17-3 win over Cape Cod Academy in the team's Tournament opener, followed by an 18-9 loss at Norwell on Tuesday.

The No. 20 seeded boys (6-10) opened with an impressive 18-5 win at No. 13 Georgetown and will head to No. 4 Newburyport today.

"We had them ready," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said of the road win. "Playing the Div. 1 schedule we played has our guys ready for just about anyone we see in Div. 3. We've been through everything this year. We've felt every emotion."

Flanagan's squad has dealt with injuries and other setbacks this season.

He sees it as a positive.

The Cohasset High baseball team is on a quest for the ages, a quest for a third consecutive Div. 4 State Championship.

That comes on the heels of a South Shore League championship.

The Skippers defeated Mashpee, 7-3, Sunday to secure a third South Shore League championship in a row and are now looking for a third consecutive Division 4 state title. The D4 South Sectional tournament is slated to begin today with Cohasset holding the No. 1 seed in the 16-team South field.

The Skippers will host No. 16 Millis (7-14) at 4 p.m.

"The kids are feeling pretty good about themselves," coach Pete Afanasiw told the Patriot Ledger following Sunday's road win.

Senior Jamie Faber ended his final high school regular season on a stellar note for Cohasset batting 3-for-3 with 2 RBI. He also pitched an inning of relief and recorded his 100th strikeout this season.

Starter Jamie Timothy worked 4 innings, surrendering 1 hit and no runs for

PRINT EXTRA

Cohasset's Gabriella Flibotte helped Northwestern University win their seventh National Championship in eight years, winning five draws for the Wildcats in an 8-6 win over Syracuse.

Flibotte is described by the team's website as a versatile defensive-minded midfielder who excels at causing turnovers. Flibotte has great speed. She was named to ALC All-Tournament Team after recording four caused turnovers, five ground balls and one goal over two games, including a career-best three caused turnovers vs. Florida in the championship game. She matched that in her next game with three caused turnovers while adding three draw controls and two ground balls in NCAA Tournament win vs. Notre Dame.

Lady Skippers net No. 2 seed

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset girls tennis team is ready to rock and roll in the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectionals

After rolling to a 16-2 regular season record, Cohasset earned the No. 2 seed in the 14-team field. Cohasset will open play against the winner the winner of Friday's Sturgis vs. Ursuline match at home.

Both should be challenging as No. 7 Sturgis has a 9-3 record, and Ursuline is 13-6.

The Skippers have been led by freshman Emma Davis, who recently won the Individual South Sectional Tournament.

But it isn't just Davis.

Cohasset has solid depth.

"Our whole starting lineup is back," Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan said. "All the pieces are there for us. We feel like we have the talent of having five No. 1's."

Meehan praised her captains and the program in general.

One of the great things about Cohasset is that they don't make cuts, and try their absolute hardest to get everyone into a varsity match.

In the last match against Mashpee, Meehan was able to get the final few players that hadn't played into the mix.

HALL OF FAME

Inductees announced

Two nominees voted in for 2012 class

The Cohasset High School Athletic Hall of Fame Committee is excited to announce that two team nominees have been voted into the CHS Athletic Hall of Fame Class of 2012 to be inducted on November 22 and 23, 2012. The individual members of the Second CHS Hall of Fame Class will be voted on June 19. Individual nominees may consist of athletes, coaches, school administrators, and boosters. For nominees who do not fall under the aforementioned categories, a "special nominee" category is available.

The 2012 CHS Athletic Hall of Fame Team inductees are:

1986-1988 Boys Soccer Team

Over a four year period, the Cohasset High School boys Soccer Team amassed a record of 71-12-8. They won four consecutive South Shore League Championships, four consecutive South Sectional Championships, and made it to the State Finals three times.

1985, 1986, 1988 Boys Basketball Teams

During an exciting five year span, the Cohasset Boys basketball team won three South Shore League Championships, an Eastern Mass Championship and two State Championships, including an amazing 25-0 unbeaten season in 1985.

Individual Nominations

The CHS Hall of Fame Committee is still accepting nominations for individuals until June 19. In order for a candidate or team to be considered a nomination packet must be completed on their behalf. Packets are available at his second victory this season. The senior also had 2 doubles and 2 RBI.

"We have very high expectations," said Afanasiw of Cohasset's tourney outlook. "But we're not taking anyone for granted. We're not looking past anybody."

In one of the bigger tests of the season, one game earlier, Cohasset edged East Bridgewater 1-0 last Thursday in a spectacularly pitched game against South Shore League MVP Casey DeAndrade.

The Skippers took the lead in the bottom of the first after Faber walked, stole second and came home when East Bridgewater bobbled the ball on a single to right by Jamie Timothy.

That was all the Skippers needed.

Faber, who had given up a single in the first inning, didn't allow another baserunner until DeAndrade doubled with one out in the top of the seventh.

No problem.

Faber responded by getting a liner to second and a hard grounder to short that shortstop Colin Gideon-Murphy locked on and made the perfect throw to first to end the game.

"That's one of the best games I've seen a kid pitch, from my team at least, over the last four or five years," Afanasiw said. "Two hits — one in the first, one in the seventh — speaks volumes, especially against that lineup."

Faber finished with 10 strikeouts, 2 hits and didn't walk a batter.

He had a little help in the second when Cohasset's right fielder made a spectacular diving catch on a ball tailing down and away from him to end the inning.

Afanasiw was pleased that his team was able to play error-free baseball.

"We played mistake-free baseball," he said. "That was important. They're not the type of teams to give away runs. I didn't think one run in the first inning would hold, but it did. I told the guys to get ahead and go get it."

Afanasiw felt that focus was huge.

"You go undefeated in this league," he said.

Faber, who was on the hill when Cohasset won the State Title last year, agreed.

"I was focused on winning for the team," Faber said. "I think playing I last year's championship game helped. There were bases loaded and no outs. I got through that and it has helped my confidence."

Faber finished the regular season with a 7-1 record and a 0.97 ERA. He's ready for the next challenge, and is proud of the EB win.

"This has been one of my most meaningful games," he said. "I had 17 strikeouts in Abington, but that was a blowout. This was against a high-caliber team.

"We're feeling the best we have all season," Flanagan said. "We're swinging the sticks well and showing some poise."

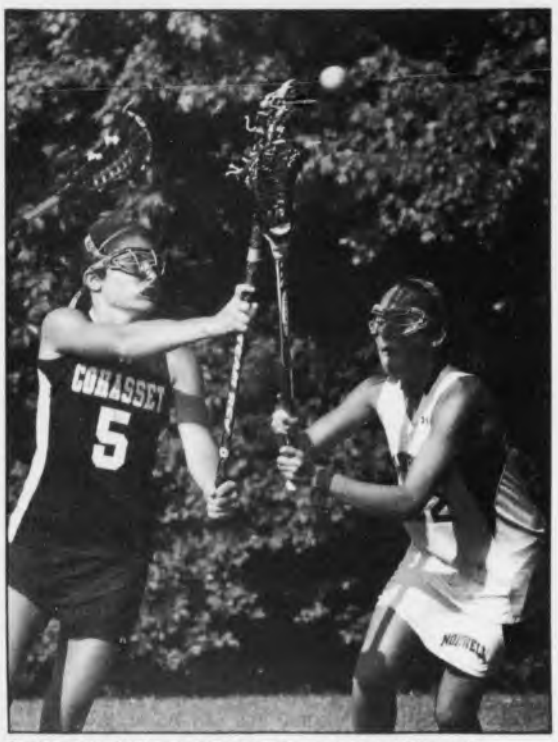
In the opening win, Charlie Neaves had four goals and three assists. Nick Tangherlini added four goals and four assists, while John Mills added four goals and two helpers.

"Ryan Conte did a great job," Flanagan added, and Ryan Gillis really pushed the ball in transit."

The Skippers aren't scared of Newburyport.

"We played them last year and knocked them out," Flanagan said. "We're not scouting. We go in eyes wide open, lace 'em up and play our game."

Again, he feels his team has seen enough to get by.



"We lasted well against Lincoln-Sudbury," Flanagan said. "Not many teams in D3 are like them."

No. 12 Cohasset (11-5-2) beat No. 21 Cape Cod Academy, 17-3, in the preliminary round but could not get past Norwell, despite a strong game from junior attack Hope Kissick.

"Norwell took advantage of our mistakes and took it to us," Cohasset coach MaryEllen O'Neil said. "It should have been a closer game."

The Skippers' defense was a key to their strong season, led by goalie Kylie Coffman and the quartet of Anna Seraikas, Sage Stebbins, Molly Fitzgerald and Megan Fitzgerald.

"We had a great season," O'Neil said. "We came from behind in several games. I was very pleased with how the team came together. We're a young team and we should have a lot to offer for next year."

Demystified

A special workshop for local business leaders featuring author & media expert Mike Blinder

June 26 & 27

Holiday Inn
929 Hingham Street
Rockland, MA 02370

A total of 6 sessions will be offered:
• Tuesday, June 26 - 7:30am, 2pm, or 6pm
• Wednesday, June 27 - 7:30am, 2pm, or 6pm

• Daily Deals is a marketing phenomenon.
• How does it work?
• How do businesses make money at it?

Author & Media expert Mike Blinder

Nationally recognized author and media expert Mike Blinder will walk through the basics of daily deals and 'demystify' the techniques others have used to make money and build a customer base. Learn about businesses that have experienced tremendous success using this marketing & sales tool. Learn how daily deals can help drive foot traffic to your location, gain new customers, create loyalty from these customers, elevate your brand and generate buzz for your business....at no cost, with guaranteed revenue and measurable results!

All sessions will be held at the Holiday Inn, Rockland and are free to business leaders. Space is limited.

LIFE AT CHS

Taking over the columnist duties

WHITNEY MALONE

Congratulations to the seniors for making it through four years of hard work and determination and good luck next year!

Hi everyone! My name is Whitney Malone. I am a junior at Cohasset High School and I will be taking over for senior Olivia Franklin, providing all of you with what's happening in Life at CHS.

I hope you all enjoyed the gorgeous weather over Memorial Day Weekend! Monday morning, members of the CHS Concert Band marched down to the harbor for the beautiful memorial service for our veterans, playing patriotic tunes, such as Yankee Doodle and Stars and Stripes Forever. The service ended with a combined playing of the Star-Spangled Banner by the High School Band and the Rusty Skippers.

Last week, the junior class voted on Student Council officers for the upcoming school year, electing Andrew Barrett as President, Charlotte Barszewski as Vice President, Anthony Nahill as Treasurer, and Ryan McCarthy as Secretary. Congrats to our new officers!

I would also like to congratulate my fellow classmates, Bobby Nahill and Andrew Barrett, on their proposal for next year's schedule for us upcoming seniors! The proposed schedule was submitted to the new Middle-High School principal, Carolyn Connolly, to be voted on Wednesday, May 30th at the school committee meeting.

Last night was Senior Class Awards Night. Many seniors were recognized for their admirable volunteer work and academic achievements.

Today, the seniors had their last Graduation rehearsal. While many CHS students, myself included, will be SAT testing Saturday morning, the seniors will be getting ready to walk across the stage of the Music Circus to receive their diplomas. The ceremony begins at 1:30 PM. Congratulations to the seniors for making it through four years of hard work and determination and good luck next year!

Students at CHS are counting down the days until June 18th – eleven to be exact! I'll keep you updated with Life at CHS until then, and will be starting-up the column again in September. I am very excited to write for the Mariner and I certainly welcome your feedback and ideas!

Whitney Malone will soon be a senior at CHS. She is the new Life at CHS columnist.

HOLLY HILL FARM

Outdoor yoga starts June 2

Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset. For more information about the farm and the non-profit education center, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, visit www.hollyhill-farm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Yoga on the Farm – A 12-week session of outdoor yoga begins Saturday June 2 from 8 to 9 a.m. with yoga instructor and Certified Holistic Health Coach Linda Storm. \Bring a mat and enjoy an hour of gentle Vinyasa style yoga, moving with the breath. All levels are welcome. There is an indoor space available if the weather does not permit outdoor yoga. Sign up for all 12 weeks or drop in for one class. Price for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members is $120 for 12 weeks, $12 for drop in, non-members $144, $15 for drop in.

Holly Hill Farm still has space available in summer programs for children ages 3 through 18. Children will have fun outside, unplugged from phones and screens, doing farm chores, exploring the diverse natural habitats of the 140 acres of the farm's property, learning about growing healthy organic food, cooking food from freshly harvested produce, growing food for Father Bills' in Quincy, and selling produce at the Cohasset Farmers market (and keeping a portion of the proceeds). Programs begin on June 4 and run through Aug. 24.

Whole Foods in Hingham is partnering with the Friends of Holly Hill Farm on Tuesday June 12 for fundraiser. Whole foods will donate 5 percent of all sales that day to the FHHF. The Friends of Holly Hill Farm, Inc. is the non-profit center based at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset, MA that is devoted to teaching about organic farming and sustainable agriculture. The Friends collaborates with over 25 schools on the South Shore and Greater Boston. This commitment to teaching ensures that children, adults and families take an active, hands-on role in growing healthy food and responsible stewardship for the environment.

View the tall shops in Boston Harbor

Cohasset Historical Society is planning an afternoon at sea to view the tall ships that will again visit Boston Harbor over the 4th of July holiday weekend. On Sunday, July 1, attendees will sailing the harbor aboard the yacht Marika admiring sailing vessels from all over the world. The group will leave Rowes Wharf at 2 p.m. for a 3-hour sail, returning at 5 p.m. Cost of the trip is $80 per person, which includes the narrated tour, stationery and passed hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar. This is a rain or shine event, but the yachts panoramic windows provide excellent viewing from inside its casually elegant cabin. The Historical Society extends an open invitation for this marine adventure. This seagoing afternoon would make a lovely family outing or special gift.

Since this is a fun and popular activity, it is suggested that reservations be made early by calling the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and sending a check, made out to Cohasset Historical Society to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

GIMME SHELTER

Stormy was living with a couple of Alpha females and needed a new home situation.
COURTESY PHOTO

Stormy is a quality guy

Stormy is not aggressive and would be happy in a home either on his own or with other friendly cats.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find a home for Stormy, a gray tiger male. Stormy was living in a home with a couple of Alpha females and his people thought it would be in his best interest to find a better home situation.

Stormy has settled in at the shelter and seems to get along fine with the other cats. He has befriended, HSAR's sweet little Coco and they cuddle up in a bed together. He is not aggressive and would be happy in a home either on his own or with other friendly cats.

He would like people to come and meet Stormy, as in the right home, he will be sure to provide you with quality feline companionship.

While you're at the shelter you can meet Stormy and all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you goes out to its many supporters.

Gimmie Shelter - Fundraiser for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue – is from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 17.

Live Music, Dancing, Food, Silent Auctions, Raffles. HSAR is a non-profit, no-kill cat shelter, serving Hull and surrounding communities for 12 years! Help HSAR to continue its mission and join the party! Tickets $20 at the door or on line @ www.hsar.org

This event will take place at the C-Note and will feature two bands, Closer Than We Appear and Cat Basket.

Blood drive in Cohasset today

INTERFAITH GROUP TRAVELS TO ISRAEL

Trip inspires tolerance and talk

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

Everyone knows the advice about avoiding religion and politics in social settings. It keeps the peace, and prevents unpleasant arguments. But it also means avoiding opportunities to learn, to advance our understanding of others' positions, and to grow in tolerance.

Seeing the need for these exact qualities and goals inspired several members of the Hingham Hull Religious Leaders Association to put together an interfaith trip to Israel. Seventeen folk from Emmanuel Church in Braintree, Second Parish of Hingham, and Congregation Sha'aray Shalom of Hingham spent their own money and almost two weeks time touring Israel. Several also broke off to spend a few days in Jordan. They arrived back here at the beginning of May.

"As clergy we all get along very well," said Rabbi Shira Joseph of Sha'aray Shalom. "We meet monthly and we're very inclusive. There are lots of ways to do ministry." She mentioned that the group has included members of Wellspring, No Place for Hate, and Friends of the Homeless, among others. The HHRLA is responsible for the interfaith Thanksgiving service, an interfaith 9/11 memorial, and an interfaith seder, during Passover.

"As clergy," Rabbi Joseph said, "we've been trying to model how to talk about things that are theologically difficult. We wanted to do more about hearing the voices of others, how you process information about difficult issues, and one big question is peace in the Middle East."

"We've been trying to stir discussion in the town about how to disagree respectfully," said Reverend Paul Sprecher of Second Parish. "Then one day when Shira and I were talking about Israel, she said that you can't really talk about it until you've been there."

"There's nothing like seeing things first hand to gather new insights," Rabbi Joseph said. She spoke from experience. She lived in Israel for eight months, has visited many times, and one of her daughters lives there and teaches in an joint Israeli/Palestinian school.

She suggested the idea of an interfaith trip, and the group themed it "Many Voices, Many Lenses". Over the last year, to get ready for the trip, they sponsored a one-man show by a half Jewish, half Palestinian actor, a talk by a city planner for Jerusalem, and an Israeli-born storyteller, all open to the larger Hingham community.

The trip encompassed Jewish and Christian holy sites. "If you'd had a trip exclusively from the temple, or from the Episcopalians, or from us, we'd have had a much different itinerary," said Reverend Sprecher.

Father Tom Mulvey of Emmanuel Church in Braintree is no longer a member of HHRLA, but since he lives in Hingham and was at St. John's, he joined discussions about the trip and decided to go with some of his congregants. He admitted he wasn't interested in learning about Israeli politics. "I can get political speeches here at Harvard," he said. "But I can't get a sense of what's there without going."

What struck him was how small the villages are, how close together, but how hard it is to get to them. The Wailing Wall also made a huge impression. He described that many Orthodox Jews tend to it, as they consider the wall the western part of the second temple, and that they would shoo away anyone attempting commercial business there. Seeing that, he recalled the passage from the New Testament where Jesus angrily cleared the temple grounds. "Was Jesus just clearing out the corruption?" Father Mulvey asked. "Perhaps that's too easy. Or was he steering, steadying the ship of faith, on its original course? We often forget that Jesus was not a Christian, not the way we're Christians, but a Jew."

His congregant Linda King of Braintree said she went, "...unsure of what an interfaith group would really mean. We discovered at each site that we weren't about who's right and who's wrong, but we asked, 'Why is this site so important to you?'"

Rabbi Joseph named several places the group visited, including Mount Nebo, Caesarea Phillipi, Mary's Well, and the Western Wall, and said, "In each of these spaces, the mission for us was the same: can you feel what someone else is feeling, or can you understand why someone would feel that way?"

"The respect we showed for each other made me think this was a mini version of what the whole Middle East needs to find peace," King said.

Kibbutz

Reverend Sprecher wanted to get of sense of Israel up close to see its complexity and nuance, and found some of that on a kibbutz. "It was fortuitous that we arrived right at Israeli Memorial Day," he said. "We were able to participate in the celebration of Yom Hazikaron — Israeli Memorial Day — with the kibbutzniks. The celebration was very moving. In this small community of about 200 alone, 12 have died defending Israel in the years since 1939. No family has been untouched by the losses of soldiers and civilians who died in the defense of Israel. A sobering end to a remarkable day!" he wrote in a blog post. He came away with a sense of how small Israel is, how small and interconnected.

Joan Carr of Hanover, a congregant at Sha'aray Shalom, had made numerous other trips to Israel. "I've gone with many other groups, but this was different because it was the first time I was seeing Israel with people who weren't Jews. I'd seen Christian sites, but never with Christians, so I'd hoped to see it from their perspective. I saw a lot of passion."

"I was thrilled to experience a physical connection to New Testament readings," King said. "I was there."

Another Episcopalian from Emmanuel, Sheila Smith, said, "Seeing the holy sites divided — like the Church of the Holy Sepulchre — that's burnt into my memory forever. My prayer is for peace and tolerance. Those people, they want peace for their children and peace for their land."

Carr mentioned that they heard both from a Palestinian journalist and the Israeli officer who was responsible for placing the wall between Israeli and Palestinian controlled territory along the West Bank. "Neither of them wanted it," Carr said, "but both see it as necessary and important." She said that both said terrorist attacks have decreased markedly, and that the Palestinian journalist said he can now put his children on a bus and go to a restaurant, because it's safer. "What's interesting, too, is that the wall is only a wall in about 5 percent of its length, where the really dangerous areas are. The rest is fence. I will say, because I've been there before, under different situations, that I felt totally safe. Before, there were soldiers with weapons out on the streets everywhere. This time, they were there only in a couple spots."

Several people said that the full impact of the trip would take a while to sink in. "As a group, we're going to keep getting together to discuss our feelings and experiences," Rabbi Joseph said. She added they would offer different participants as speakers to other groups and congregations, and are planning to teach a class in the fall on The Jewish New Testament, edited by Amy-Jill Levine, that would be open to anyone interested. "It will show us how to have a shared vocabulary of each others' faiths, even if we don't believe each others' faiths."

"We're in the middle of formulating the lecture/speaker idea," Reverend Sprecher said. "We want to maintain the momentum of respectful conversation."

"Not every community wants to get along," Rabbi Joseph said. "But in this community, people are willing to open up to questions."

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 11, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A recent spate of confusion regarding decision-making begins to clear up. But caution is still advised. Continue to check details. An old friend has important news.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're anxious to see your ideas move from concept to development. But trying to force the issue right now could backfire. Wait for movement to resume on the 11th.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your thoughts focused on the positive as you deal with an unexpected turn of events in a personal or professional relationship. This could be the start of a welcome change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Health matters take on added importance at this time. Deal with them before they interfere with your summer plans. A relationship that cooled off could soon warm up again.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While a few details involving upcoming decisions still need your attention, you fun-loving Felines can begin to spend more time enjoying your lively social life again.

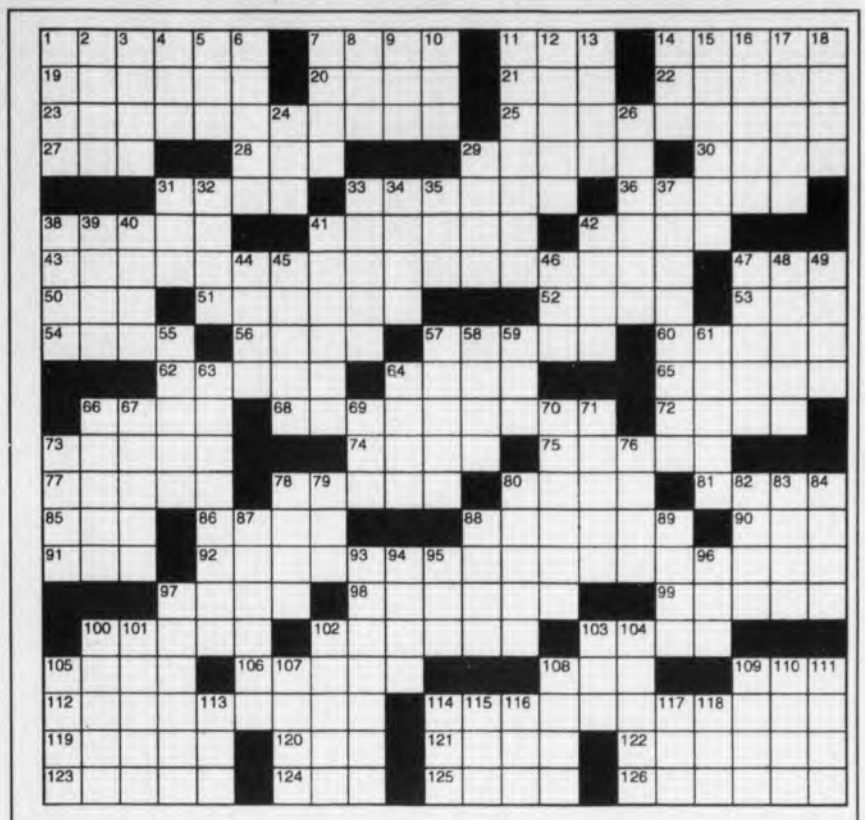
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That long-sought-after career change could require you to move to another city. Weigh your decision carefully before either accepting or rejecting the offer out of hand.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace situation can be awkward for Librans who prefer to keep their problems private. But you might have to "tell-all" if you hope to see it resolved in your favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your financial situation starts to improve this week, you still need to be cautious about money matters. Avoid major obligations, for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your overall aspects continue to brighten, allowing you to tackle long-deferred challenges. A change in travel plans could work to your benefit.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things seem to be slowing down for the usually restless Sea Goat. But wouldn't a bit of respite be just what you need right now? Activity picks up by June 17.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Personal relationships take a positive turn for both married and single Aquarians. Professional commitments, however, could be complicated by newly emerging events.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A decision you thought was final might be reopened as new facts are discovered. This could lead to a short-term problem, but might ultimately prove beneficial.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your keen interest in pursuing global events could lead you into a career as a politician or reporter.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host Coffee with the Authors at 9:45 a.m., on Tuesday, June 12, at the Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset. Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work. Featured authors will be William Landay for "Defending Jacob," Margot Livesey for "The Flight of Gemma Hardy" and Charlotte Silver for "Charlotte Au Chocolat."

"Defending Jacob" is a suspenseful novel about a family in crisis. Assistant District Attorney Andy Barber, happily married and secure in his job, is blindsided by the accusation that his 14-year-old son murdered his classmate. "The Flight of Gemma Hardy" is the story of a strong-willed orphan who triumphs over adversity, cruelty and loneliness. Livesey was born and raised in Scotland. Her story was inspired by the classic "Jane Eyre," but also draws from her own life. In her memoir, "Charlotte Au Chocolat," Silver recalls her childhood memories from her evenings at Upstairs at the Pudding, her mother's restaurant in Harvard Square.

Reservations are required, and tickets are $16 per person. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve a space or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

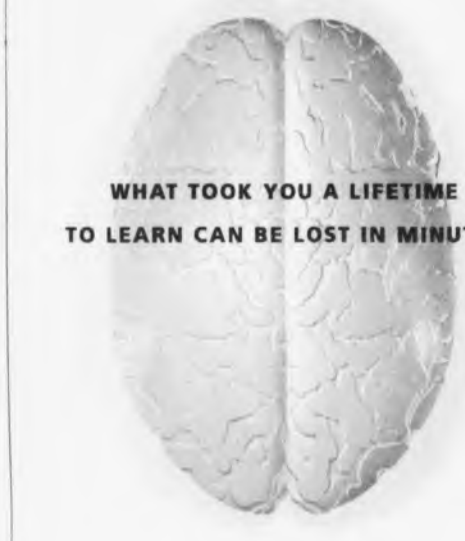
Book fair benefits library

On Monday, June 11th Buttonwood Books & Toys will be hosting a "Book Fair" from 6-8 p.m with 20 percent of the evening's profits going directly to the Friends of the Cohasset Library. The 20 percent donation includes all items in the store. It will be the perfect time to buy books on Summer Reading lists, Father's Day gifts, toys and so much more.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library provide funding for many of the programs at the Library including: the Homework Center, Cohasset Reads Together, all Children's Programming, all Adult Programming including author visits, writing classes, geneology classes as well as funding for all museum passes. There is also an Outreach Program to seniors living in Cohasset and at Sunrise and Golden Living Centers.

For more information about the Friends visit cohassetlibrary.org Buttonwood Books & Toys is located at 747 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) Cohasset.

Lobster rolls at Arts Festival



Enjoy the lobster rolls while perusing the showcased crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond at the South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common, Fathers Day Weekend, Friday, June 15 through Sunday, June 17.

Order lobster rolls early and consider treating the whole family or office staff to a toast to summer. First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is recommended; walk-ins welcome as long as supplies last. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls last year. Also, consider strawberry shortcake for dessert at the Second Congregational Church.

There are several ways to place lobster orders: Pick up an order form at the Parish House from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or e-mail firstlobster@verizon.net. Mail checks to First Parish Cohasset, 23 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m., on Thursday, June 14. Hours for order pickup at the Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset: Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

COHASSET HIGH GRADUATION

Seeking success: class of 2012

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The rain was falling last Saturday, rendering the early June afternoon as cold and gray as a New England day in February or March. But the late spring shower did nothing to dampen the spirits of 96 excited students and their proud parents and teachers who gathered together in the shelter of the South Shore Music Circus for the ultimate send-off: the graduation of Cohasset High School's Class of 2012.

Under the big top, Cohasset seniors resplendent in their graduation robes – white for the girls, the guys in blue – made their way forward to accept their diplomas, special awards and recognitions, and well wishes from their educators.

The ceremonies began with an a cappella rendition of the National Anthem by the Senior Class Chorus, conducted for the very last time by retiring music teacher Bryan Marks, who served the Cohasset community for 35 years. Also "graduating" from Cohasset schools after working in the district for 32 years was interim High School principal Dr. Michael Gill, who over the years also served as assistant principal, teacher and coach. Both educators were honored later on in the ceremony,

Trouble with tree topping

Arborist, tree warden suspect vandalism

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Call it "arborcide."

Two trees were topped at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street, and a local arborist and the town's tree warden are crying foul play. This is also the site of an incident that occurred over eight years ago, when two trees, a pin oak and red oak, were taken down after a misunderstanding over the maintenance of a traffic island. The following year, two replacement trees were mysteriously poisoned with the household plant killer Roundup, but a suspect was never identified. The two trees that were topped on Monday were replacement trees for two that had been destroyed.

The topping appears to be an act of vandalism for which there are no suspects, according to Massachusetts Certified Arborist (MCA) Gary Barrows, who noticed the trees looked strange as he was driving down North Main on Monday.

"I came around the corner, and it just caught my eye," said Barrows. "I turned around and couldn't believe it, that someone was this greedy and everything."

The two trees, one of which is a red oak located on the island honoring Vietnam veteran Capt. John Lyons, the other a pin oak located on town property next to Central Cemetery, have had significant portions chopped off the tops.

Almost half of the larger tree, the pin oak, is now gone, and the red oak on the island is missing a good six feet, Barrows explained. He added that it looked like someone used a pole saw to do the deed, and that it must

NEWS UPDATE

Chief report

Update on town's ongoing investigation

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Authorities have begun investigating complaints against Police Chief Mark DeLuca and interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Milanoski said this week that he approached state police to "investigate myself" as well as the union allegations against the chief.

"I was the one who initiated the whole process," the town manager said during the Tues., June 5 selectmen meeting. "I'm confident with how this is going to turn out but needed to clear the air."

Milanoski placed DeLuca on paid administrative leave on Fri., May 25 following multiple allegations made against the chief by the town's police union. These allegations include forgery, physical abuse and abuse of authority, according to the letter Milanoski issued to DeLuca the day he was suspended.

At last Tuesday's selectmen meeting, some audience members opined that Milanoski should be recused from the investigation. This was after selectmen chair Paul Carlson read a letter written by DeLuca to the selectmen, which implicated that Milanoski had interfered with a police disciplinary matter. The chief accused Milanoski of actions that "I believe could possibly lead to ethical, civil, or criminal sanctions," DeLuca wrote.

Under Cohasset's Town Manager Act, Milanoski is charged with overseeing an investigation against the chief and deciding the final outcome; Milanoski said last week that he would not conduct the investigation, but rather Town Counsel would, along with outside help, and that he would review the findings.

Carlson issued a statement during the meeting this week that explains how the

POLICE FIND MARIJUANA PLANTS

'Guerilla farming' for pot on town-owned land

On Wednesday (June 6), based on a tip, Cohasset Police Criminal Investigation Division (CID) detectives located and eradicated approximately 530 marijuana plants growing in five separate sites on town-owned land in the area of the town's reservoir at the end of Beechwood Street.

The marijuana plants were found to be in various stages of development with some approximately one week old and others approximately eight weeks old and nearing the flowering stage when harvesting occurs. Each mature plant yields approximately one-pound of marijuana. The street value of marijuana of this quality in Massachusetts is anywhere from $1800 to $2500 per pound police said.

The street value of marijuana of this quality in Massachusetts is anywhere from $1800 to $2500 per pound police said.

The grower(s) were practicing what is referred to as "guerrilla farming" which refers to marijuana cultivation away from the grower's own property and usually on public land so that if the plot is found, it will not be traceable back to the grower(s).

CID Detectives processed the grow areas and recovered physical evidence that will help to identify the suspects. The investigation is ongoing.

The plants were removed with the assistance of members of the Cohasset DPW. Cohasset's Deputy Chief of Police William Quigley stated that, "this was a well hidden and sophisticated marijuana growing operation that would have netted the grower about 500 pounds of marijuana worth a couple hundred thousand dollars on the street."

Woman attacks boyfriend in parking lot

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police have charged a 29-year-old Hull woman with assault and battery after witnesses reported seeing her jumping on and clawing her 31-year-old Braintree boyfriend at Shaw's Plaza last Wednesday (May 30) around 2 p.m. Police said they received multiple 9-1-1 calls about the incident. They said an off-duty Scituate detective was able to separate the couple until officers arrived. Police placed the woman under arrest. They said the dispute was over money.

Near tracks

The engineer on a Greenbush train on Memorial Day called MBTA dispatch to report a black Mazda was parked too close to the tracks. The car was parked near Woodside Cemetery for the observances held there. Police checked it out and found traffic was not impeded.

Break-in

A 46-year-old Surry Drive resident reported to police on Tuesday (May 29) that she had discovered a garage window had been damaged and thought it was related to a strange noise her daughter had heard previously. Police said the screen was cut and tampered with but no entry was made and nothing appeared to be missing.

There have been break-ins in that general area and police are continuing to ask residents to report anything suspicious.

Parking lot

A 61-year-old Cohasset woman reported that her 2011 Audi sedan had been damaged in the parking lot at Cohasset Plaza while she was shopping at Stop & Shop last Tuesday (May 29) around 11:30 a.m. Police said there was a large dent in the bumper and noticeable scratches. It appeared another vehicle was backing up when it hit the Audi. The incident was out of the view of the surveillance cameras, police said.

Failed to yield

A 51-year-old Hull woman in a 2001 Mercedes Benz was cited for failure to yield on a state highway after she pulled out from lower King Street to make a left onto Route 3A last Wednesday (May 30) at around 8:30 a.m. into the path of a northbound 2007 Ford Focus, police said. A 21-year-old Scituate man was driving the Ford Focus. Police said the woman failed to yield to northbound traffic. There were no reported injuries but both cars had to be towed.

Money missing

A 47-year-old Hingham man, who is a local contractor, told police he lost $8,000 that he had in an envelope in his back pocket last week. He told police he had been working on a job in Minot and had the envelope with the cash but when he went to purchase supplies for the job at Hingham Lumber the envelope was gone. He had stopped earlier at a convenience store to make a purchase and that was the last time he saw the money, police said. The money was in a Citizens Bank envelope and was payment for the work he was doing in Minot.

Bike found

Police have added an abandoned 26-inch mountain bicycle to their collection of unclaimed bikes at the police station garage. Please call the police or stop by if you are missing a bicycle.

Deer struck

Police said a truck struck a deer last Thursday (May 31) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). The truck and the reporting party left the scene. The deer, which was in the road, was removed.

Alzheimer's search

The Cohasset K-9 unit joined others from Weymouth, Hingham, and the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department along with the State Police helicopter and Scituate police to help locate an elderly man with Alzheimer's who had wandered off in the Hatherly Road area of Scituate last Thursday (May 31) around 11:42 p.m.

A massive search ensued. The man was located at the funeral home in Cohasset where he once worked. He had apparently roamed over there. A Cohasset officer had the information that he used to work there and checked the facility for him.

Obama protesters

Protesters from the Lyndon LaRouche Political Action Committee have been seen around Cohasset and other area towns. Last week police told them they could not block the sidewalk in the village. They were also in front of the post office a few weeks ago.

The group that has been displaying a poster of President Obama with a Hitler-like moustache has been handing out literature on the European debt crisis. They have also been in Hingham where a resident confronted them outside CVS on South Street. The woman, who called the Hingham Journal and was offended by the depiction of the President, said she quizzed them about World War II and Hitler and was very distressed that they knew very little about that part of history, she said.

The group's literature states they are not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee. LaRouche is described as a political economist in the literature. In the flyer, the current debt crisis is compared to 1923 in Germany.

Advice given

Police explained to a local landlord seeking advice on how to go about an eviction process last week that it was a civil matter and that he should check with his attorney.

Borrowing car

Police investigated a report from a concerned calier about a man who was attempting to enter an older tan motor vehicle in the town parking last Friday about 4:40 p.m. The caller said he was trying the doors to the vehicle. Investigation revealed that the man had permission to borrow his friend's car but the locks were not working properly.

Five arrested

Police arrested five local teens last week for being minors in possession of alcohol on Friday at around 11 p.m. Police said an officer on patrol saw a girl walking on South Main Street near the Scituate line who appeared to be intoxicated and was carrying a bottle of liquor. When the officer turned around, the girl disappeared into the woods, police said. A few minutes later, the officer observed a 2002 GMC Envoy approaching; the girl came out of the woods and got into the car, police said.

The officer pulled the vehicle over, which had a broken taillight. He could smell the odor of burnt marijuana in the vehicle and observed a 30 pack of beer in plain view. The girl had an open, 1.75 liter bottle of vodka. Police found a glass bong used to smoke marijuana but did not find the drug.

The teens charged were three 18-year-olds and two 17-year-olds. The operator of the vehicle was also cited for defective equipment (taillight).

Vandalism

The custodian at the middle high school reported to police at 7:28 a.m. on Saturday (June 2) there was a broken window at the school near the loading docks. Police said the window was on the west side of the building and that someone had thrown a rock through it.

Assist other PD

Police checked a parking lot near where an Abington woman works for her car on Sunday at the request of the Abington Police Department, which was looking for the woman in relation to an investigation. Her vehicle was not there, police said.

investigations are being conducted. Leading the investigations: attorney Peter Berry of Deutsch Williams, Town Counsel, and Richard Sjoberg of Sjoberg and Associates, a professional private investigator with experience in police matters.

So far, said Carlson, the investigators have met with Cohasset Lt. Detective Greg Lennon and state police Detective Capt. Frank Hughes; Hughes will refer the allegation against Milanoski and some of the allegations against DeLuca to the Attorney General's office.

"We do not know how long the Attorney General's office will take to consider these allegations, or that she will decide to act on them, but we have asked for a quick turnaround so as not to delay our own investigations," said Carlson.

Berry and Sjoberg will investigate other allegations against DeLuca and are to report back to Carlson by the week of June 18. "We will then decide how to proceed.

"Since this matter is very sensitive, I will not be making any other statement at this time," Carlson wrote, adding that town counsel told him not to discuss the matters with the other selectmen while the investigation is underway.

DeLuca is being represented by attorney Jack Collins of the Mass. Chiefs of Police Association. Collins has not yet contacted Town Counsel or the town manager's office, said Milanoski on Wednesday. Collins told the Mariner last week that he expects the selectmen's counsel will be contacting him.

Collins did not touch on the union allegations when he spoke to the Mariner last Thursday, but rather said the "reason" he got involved in the case was because DeLuca believes his removal "stemmed from the chief's comment at town meeting that he's opposed to having the police station go dark. He thinks, and other people are telling me, this is retaliation," said Collins.

DeLuca's attorney said, by way of summary, that his client thinks his suspension never would have happened if not for town meeting and his "not going with the party line."

Cohasset's police union president, Patrick Reardon, told the Mariner on the day of DeLuca's suspension that the matter had nothing to do with the chief's stance on the dark police station. The union allegations, said Reardon, are "separate, unrelated matters that have nothing to do with the station going dark."

DA weighs in on 'leaked' FMLA doc

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Coughlin said in an email to the Mariner that he found it strange that the matter had been investigated, because neither him nor his attorney had contacted the DA's office.

A matter concerning former Town Manager Michael Coughlin has come up again.

During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, a letter from the District Attorney's office dated May 24 was shared by acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Milanoski stated that the former town manager "had some documents presented" that Coughlin said "were released by the town."

What Milanoski was referring to was when Coughlin, who was removed as town manager in March without cause, was in the process of being suspended, the then town manager applied for a medical leave. The leave of absence, under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act, allows an employee 12 weeks of protected, unpaid leave. If Coughlin had been given medical leave, he could not have been fired as long as he was on leave. However, the employee must have worked for the employer for at least 12 months. Since Coughlin had only been on the job for six, his attorney Douglas Louison said at the time, "the town won't honor his request."

Coughlin was not awarded leave, but the matter was confidential; when the news of the FMLA (Family Medical Leave Act) document he filed appeared on a local news website and blog, Coughlin claimed that someone had leaked the document; he said at the time that he believed it was a town official.

In a letter addressed to Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon of the Cohasset Police Department, Greg Connor, chief of financial crimes in the Norfolk DA's office, opined that in researching the matter, the office did not find a criminal violation.

"Please be advised that this office will not devote Grand Jury resources to this matter, nor will the State Police CPAC unit conduct any further investigations," Connor stated in the letter. "The main reason is that there does not appear to be a criminal violation in the materials you have forwarded to this office."

Connor added that he spoke with the chief of police (Mark DeLuca, who is currently on paid administrative leave due to union allegations, which are currently being investigated) as well as Town Counsel.

Coughlin said in an email to the Mariner that he found it strange that the matter had been investigated, because neither him nor his attorney (Douglas Louison) had contacted the DA's office.

"We didn't know that the town had looked into it," Coughlin said in a phone call. "Neither myself nor my attorney were neither contacted by the town nor district attorney's department; one would think that, for an objective inquiry, they would have contacted the alleged victim in this, the person whose personal information was released."

Louison brought the matter up during a public hearing on the former town manager in February. Coughlin filed a request for a medical leave of absence just days before his suspension, which Louison said was prematurely leaked to the press. The attorney furthermore called the selectmen's decision to remove Coughlin after a mere six months "disgraceful."

The selectmen did not comment on the DA's letter after Milanoski read it. The town manager confirmed that the selectmen were the ones who sought the DA's opinion on the matter.

Plans for regional dispatch, dark station

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We have physical things we have to do to the building, no matter what happens."
Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski

The acting Town Manager and Board of Selectmen discussed options for the police station when it goes dark for a period of time starting next month.

Cohasset's dispatch will move to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham in early July. The town was supposed to join in the regional dispatch center shortly after Memorial Day, but now it will be after the Fourth of July; acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski blamed the delay on a phone system issue at the town's public safety building.

Cohasset's public safety facility will soon get a facelift, as approved by Town Meeting, which voted to appropriate $100,000 in renovations to the building. This includes $80,000 to replace windows and doors and mitigate basement flooding, and $20,000 for security upgrades. Since the dispatchers will no longer be in the building and the station will be dark at times, the police station lobby will be turned into a safe room that will have a video monitor linked to the SSRECC, Milanoski explained.

The town manager stated that whether the station is dark at times or not, these repairs are necessary, have already been approved by Town Meeting, and will be implemented.

"We have physical things we have to do to the building, no matter what happens," Milanoski said.

The town manager also shared that he is applying for a grant that will help fund the technology upgrades. The grant is due by June 22; while Milanoski does not yet know the dollar amount the police department could receive, he stated that it's a "significant sum."

Norfolk County Register to hold Cohasset office hours

Although the Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions...

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host scheduled office hours in the lower level meeting room at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 27.

The Register and his staff will be on hand to answer questions or concerns about any Registry of Deeds matter. The Register will have information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act as well as computers and printers that can be used to confirm the status of a mortgage discharge, print out a deed or demonstrate how the Registry's website works. No appointment is necessary.

This is a community outreach program sponsored by O'Donnell to make it convenient for residents who may have a Registry question, an interest in understanding the recording process or difficulty traveling to the Registry building in Dedham. Although the Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions, give general information, provide Homestead Declaration forms, take a document for recording or confirm that a document has been recorded.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted through its Customer Service Center at 781-461-6101, or by email at registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org. The Registry of Deeds website is www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Raising town fees in fiscal 13

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski brought forward proposed fee increases for town services in the next fiscal year, which starts on July 1.

"We're just trying to cover our costs for operations," Milanoski said.

The selectmen reviewed the proposed increases, which include raising the price of a one-day liquor license to $50, and the beach sticker for senior citizens to $35.

The age of what is considered a senior has also been bumped up; seniors will be those aged 65 and over, as opposed to age 60.

The fee, however, is a much larger increase, from $15.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby expressed concern that this might be too large of a jump. Selectman Diane Kennedy worried that the one-day liquor license could negatively impact organizations and nonprofits that put on community fundraiser events. Milanoski said that the selectmen have the right to waive the fees in certain circumstances.

The entire list of fees is available for the public to review in the selectmen's office at Town Hall; the list will also be posted on the town website early next week and will be discussed and voted on during the next selectmen's meeting. The board is hoping the community will weigh in before they vote to approve the fees.

Harbor dredging update

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said Tuesday that he has been working with Cohasset's harbormaster, Lorri Gibbons, at potential re-dredging options for the harbor.

Gibbons helped orchestrate a meeting with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and learned that there are federal funds available for initial testing and surveys of the harbor, said Milanoski, "that should get us through the permitting process."

The town manager said he and Gibbons are also working with the state's Seaport Bond Council on this matter and that he appointed the harbormaster as the point person for all harbor-related activities moving forward.

Harbor properties still for sale

Some prime Cohasset real estate is now on the market.

Homeowner Peter Roy is selling the 9.4-acre Oaks Estate in Cohasset, along with several nearby businesses along the harbor.

The total asking price for the properties is $45 million — down $10 million from the former price. The Oaks Estate is a 45-room mansion that includes four outbuildings, a deep-water port and giant outdoor chess set. The 24,000-square foot mansion is selling for $22.2 million.

The other harbor properties on the market? The Cohasset Harbor Inn, Atlantica and Olde Salt House Restaurants, and the Mill River Marina, a total of 109,000 square feet. These buildings are collectively selling for $22.7 million.

The Roys have owned the Oaks Estate for over two decades.

Federal grant to enhance public safety

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti said a U.S. Department of Justice grant would be used to enhance inmate re-entry programs designed to keep inmates from committing new crimes after completing their jail sentences.

The Edward J. Byrne Justice Assistance Grant will allow Norfolk County Sheriff's Office to hire a vendor to provide three full-time staff positions for one year. The additional personnel will focus on helping inmates find employment when they finish their sentences. They also will coordinate the work of the NCSO's volunteer mentor program, which uses specially selected community members to help released inmates remain faithful to their substance abuse programs and other responsibilities.

Noting that the average length of sentence at the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham is 141 days, Bellotti said it is imperative that corrections programs address the root causes of a person's criminal behavior before they return to freedom.

CHS grads awarded Pilgrim Arena scholarships

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hey there Cohasset. How is everyone this week? I know that I am looking and feeling a bit moldy and damp but I am happy to see some warmer temps in the upcoming days.

June is a busy month for so many with graduations, Fathers Day, end of the school year and getting ready for summer, make sure to enjoy those small moments too, they help to create the best of memories that last a lifetime!

Pilgrim Arena Scholarships

Cohasset residents Madeline O'Grady and Isabel Robinson are among 15 recipients of $8,000 Pilgrim Arena Scholarships awarded this spring.

The 2012 Pilgrim Merit Scholarship Awards are being made in honor of the late Blanche Taylor of Scituate, who passed away in the spring of 2011. Since Pilgrim's inception, Blanche Taylor, who was also a board member, worked full time as treasurer. In addition to her many duties, she helped oversee the growth of the scholarship program.

Madeline is heading to M.I.T. and Isabel will attend Columbia University. They are both Cohasset High School gradates.

This year's scholarships bring the total amount the Pilgrim Arena has awarded over the years to more than $1.1 million.

The recipients and their families were honored at a special reception recently at the arena on 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham. The Pilgrim Arena awards scholarships annually to graduating high school seniors. The winners are selected by the Scholarship Committee of the board of directors at the arena, which is a non-profit ice skating facility.

Splish, splash!

Splish splash....The Cohasset Swim Center is open weekends in June from 12-6. The pool will open full time on June 23rd.

Check out www.cohassetswimcenter.com for more information.

UMass-D

Adrian Lucas from Cohasset received a bachelor of science in accounting at the UMass-Dartmouth undergraduate commencement on May 27, 2012.

Connecticut

The following Cohasset students achieved dean's high honors, a recognition for students who have earned a grade point average of at least 3.78, for the 2012 spring semester at Connecticut College: Caroline Collins, Class of 2015; and Abigail Faulkner, Class of 2014.

RPI

Cameron D. R. Cope, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cope of Northampton, formerly of Cohasset, graduated with a bachelor of science degree in information technology and Web science from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y., Class of 2012. Cameron, a member of the Rensselaer Society of Engineers, has accepted employment as a systems administrator with Brightcove of Boston, where he will begin work later this month.

Syracuse

McCauley Braun of Cohasset, a communication and rhetorical studies major in the College of Visual and Performing Arts, has been selected to serve as an Orientation Leader for Syracuse University's incoming class this fall.

Orientation Leaders are a select group of 44 student leaders. Highly visible during Opening Weekend, Orientation Leaders are ambassadors of the university who work with faculty and staff members to help new students, family and friends have a smooth and seamless transition into Syracuse University. OLs accomplish this by planning events for first-year, transfer and commuter students; being peer-mentors during pre-orientation programs; serving as "Goon Captains" during move-in days; engaging new students in events and activities during Syracuse Welcome; helping new students learn about SU's history and traditions; facilitating discussions about student success in college; and designing and implementing community service initiatives with first-year students.

Bowdoin

Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, held its 207th commencement exercises Saturday, May 26, 2012. The following Cohasset students were among the graduates: Mark Flibotte, government and legal studies major with a minor in economics; and McKenna Teague, history major, English minor.

Trinity

Chloe Koines of Cohasset graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., on Sunday, May 20, 2012, majoring in public policy and law.

Colgate

Molly C. Kirk from Cohasset graduated recently with a bachelor of arts degree in English and women's studies from Colgate University. Molly was one of 661 students to graduate with the Class of 2012, representing a graduation rate of 89.7 percent, which is among the highest in the nation.

URI

At the University of Rhode Island's 126th commencement on Saturday and Sunday, May 19 and 20, 2012, almost 3,000 undergraduate and 738 graduate students became the university's newest alumni.

The following Cohasset residents were among the students who received their undergraduate or graduate degrees: Andrew Devitre, received a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies; and Danielle Hajja received a DPT degree in doctor of physical therapy.

Assumption

Maura Swords of Cohasset graduated on May 12, 2012, from Assumption College with a bachelor of arts degree.

Providence

Maura Regan, a resident of Cohasset, was among more than 900 students from Providence College who received undergraduate degrees during the college's 94th commencement exercises on Sunday, May 20, 2012. Maura received a bachelor's degree in history.

DVDs

The Red Carpet Pre-Prom Gala CHS 2012 Event was beautiful on May 25th this year and it was all captured on DVD for a keepsake to have forever. Each DVD is $20 and also available are copies of the CHS Graduation, held on Sat, June 2nd for $20 as well. To order a copy of one or both of these, please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197 or email your request to shaun galvin@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to Shaun Galvin, P.O. Box 526, Hingham, MA 02043.

Garden tour

Next Thursday, June 14, gardens will be open to those enjoying the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's final session of "Four Seasons in the Garden." All participants will gather at Lightkeepers at 9:30 am for a lecture on aspects of the late spring garden and various other gardening topics. A full lunch and garden visits will follow. For more information or tickets, contact judyd617@comcast.net or Lee at 781-383-0361. Darilynns, Buttonwoods Books, Windsor Tea Room and Kennedys Garden Center are selling tickets at $40 before June 14 and $45 on the day of the event

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Lobster rolls tradition continues

Still time to place orders for popular treat

COURTESY PHOTO

Enjoy the lobster rolls while perusing the showcased crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond at the South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common - Fathers' Day Weekend, Friday, June 15 through Sunday, June 17.

Order your lobster rolls early and consider treating your whole family or office staff to a toast to summer. First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended; walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls last year! Consider Strawberry Shortcake for dessert at the Second Congregational Church.

There are several ways to place your lobster order: pick up an order form at the Parish House on Monday - Thursday 10 a.m. – 3 p.m.; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or e-mail:first-lobster@verizon.net.

Mail your check to First Parish Cohasset, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 14th.

Hours for order pickup next week at the Parish House, 23 N. Main St.:

- Friday, from 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.
- Saturday, from 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.

Arts Festival on Cohasset Common

Festival hours are 2 to 7 p.m., Friday, June 15; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, June 16; and noon to 5 p.m., Sunday, June 17.

South Shore Art Center's 57th annual Arts Festival on Cohasset Common will take place Friday through Sunday, June 15 to 17. The Arts Festival has become a Father's Day weekend tradition – greeting summer with something for everyone: Art exhibitions, handmade crafts, music, and summer fare, including lobster rolls and strawberry shortcake provided by local churches.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival will be the Main Exhibition Tent, featuring hundreds of artists in a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work. The KidsTent will showcase a Young Artists' Exhibition and offer children the opportunity for hands-on creativity. Musical entertainment will range from bluegrass to jazz to the Infractions and South Shore Bay Band.

In addition to the art exhibitions, almost 90 exhibitor tents will be spread out throughout Cohasset Common with studio artisans selling jewelry, ceramics, fine art, photography, clothing, home and garden products and more.

On Saturday evening, June 16, the Art Center will host a Jazz Reception featuring a silent auction; guests will be able to attend just the jazz reception or continue the evening at private dinner parties with artists throughout Cohasset and Scituate. For reservations to the Jazz Reception and the Festival on the Town dinner parties, call the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Festival hours are 2 to 7 p.m., Friday, June 15; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday, June 16; and noon to 5 p.m., Sunday, June 17. A free trolley will shuttle visitors from parking on Sohier Street, Cohasset. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.ssac.org, or call 781-383-2787.

CHS grads awarded Pilgrim Arena scholarships

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings

Hey there Cohasset. How is everyone this week? I know that I am looking and feeling a bit moldy and damp but I am happy to see some warmer temps in the upcoming days.

June is a busy month for so many with graduations, Fathers Day, end of the school year and getting ready for summer, make sure to enjoy those small moments too, they help to create the best of memories that last a lifetime!

Pilgrim Arena Scholarships

Cohasset residents Madeline O'Grady and Isabel Robinson are among 15 recipients of $8,000 Pilgrim Arena Scholarships awarded this spring.

The 2012 Pilgrim Merit Scholarship Awards are being made in honor of the late Blanche Taylor of Scituate, who passed away in the spring of 2011. Since Pilgrim's inception, Blanche Taylor, who was also a board member, worked full time as treasurer. In addition to her many duties, she helped oversee the growth of the scholarship program.

Madeline is heading to M.I.T. and Isabel will attend Columbia University. They are both Cohasset High School gradates.

This year's scholarships bring the total amount the Pilgrim Arena has awarded over the years to more than $1.1 million.

The recipients and their families were honored at a special reception recently at the arena on 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham. The Pilgrim Arena awards scholarships annually to graduating high school seniors. The winners are selected by the Scholarship Committee of the board of directors at the arena, which is a non-profit ice skating facility.

Splish, splash!

Splish splash....The Cohasset Swim Center is open weekends in June from 12-6. The pool will open full time on June 23rd.

Check out www.cohassetswimcenter.com for more information.

UMass-D

Adrian Lucas from Cohasset received a bachelor of science in accounting at the UMass-Dartmouth undergraduate commencement on May 27, 2012.

Connecticut

The following Cohasset students achieved dean's high honors, a recognition for students who have earned a grade point average of at least 3.78, for the 2012 spring semester at Connecticut College: Caroline Collins, Class of 2015; and Abigail Faulkner, Class of 2014.

RPI

Cameron D. R. Cope, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cope of Northampton, formerly of Cohasset, graduated with a bachelor of science degree in information technology and Web science from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y., Class of 2012. Cameron, a member of the Rensselaer Society of Engineers, has accepted employment as a systems administrator with Brightcove of Boston, where he will begin work later this month.

Syracuse

McCauley Braun of Cohasset, a communication and rhetorical studies major in the College of Visual and Performing Arts, has been selected to serve as an Orientation Leader for Syracuse University's incoming class this fall.

Orientation Leaders are a select group of 44 student leaders. Highly visible during Opening Weekend, Orientation Leaders are ambassadors of the university who work with faculty and staff members to help new students, family and friends have a smooth and seamless transition into Syracuse University. OLs accomplish this by planning events for first-year, transfer and commuter students; being peer-mentors during pre-orientation programs; serving as "Goon Captains" during move-in days; engaging new students in events and activities during Syracuse Welcome; helping new students learn about SU's history and traditions; facilitating discussions about student success in college; and designing and implementing community service initiatives with first-year students.

Bowdoin

Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, held its 207th commencement exercises Saturday, May 26, 2012. The following Cohasset students were among the graduates: Mark Flibotte, government and legal studies major with a minor in economics; and McKenna Teague, history major, English minor.

Trinity

Chloe Koines of Cohasset graduated from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., on Sunday, May 20, 2012, majoring in public policy and law.

Colgate

Molly C. Kirk from Cohasset graduated recently with a bachelor of arts degree in English and women's studies from Colgate University. Molly was one of 661 students to graduate with the Class of 2012, representing a graduation rate of 89.7 percent, which is among the highest in the nation.

URI

At the University of Rhode Island's 126th commencement on Saturday and Sunday, May 19 and 20, 2012, almost 3,000 undergraduate and 738 graduate students became the university's newest alumni.

The following Cohasset residents were among the students who received their undergraduate or graduate degrees: Andrew Devitre, received a bachelor of arts degree in communication studies; and Danielle Hajja received a DPT degree in doctor of physical therapy.

Assumption

Maura Swords of Cohasset graduated on May 12, 2012, from Assumption College with a bachelor of arts degree.

Providence

Maura Regan, a resident of Cohasset, was among more than 900 students from Providence College who received undergraduate degrees during the college's 94th commencement exercises on Sunday, May 20, 2012. Maura received a bachelor's degree in history.

BC High honors

The following Cohasset students achieved honors for the third quarter of the 2011-2012 school year at Boston College High School

High Honors: Michael Edward Fegreus, Class of 2013; Andrew Stephen Fontaine, 2013; Blair Patrick McGowan, 2013; Trevor Stephen Schramn, 2013; Zachary Richard Strecker, 2013; Mark Lee Brown, 2014; Justin Christopher Fein, 2015; and William Tanner Gildea, 2015.

For High Honors, a sophomore, junior or senior must have at least a 3.80 quality point average and all grades C+"or higher. Freshmen need a 3.6 quality point average and all grades C+ or higher.

Honors: Robert Joseph Hillman, Class of 2013; Michael Robert O'Brien, 2013; William Theodore Patsos, 2013; Zachary James Coggins, 2014; Charles Bernard Blackington, 2015; and Conor Patrick Sheehy, 2015.

For Honors, a sophomore, junior or senior must have at least a 3.20 quality point average and all grades C- or higher. Freshmen need a 3.165 quality point average and all grades C- or higher.

DVDs

The Red Carpet Pre-Prom Gala CHS 2012 Event was beautiful on May 25th this year and it was all captured on DVD for a keepsake to have forever. Each DVD is $20 and also available are copies of the CHS Graduation, held on Sat, June 2nd for $20 as well. To order a copy of one or both of these, please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197 or email your request to shaun galvin@yahoo.com. Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to Shaun Galvin, P.O. Box 526, Hingham, MA 02043.

Garden tour

Next Thursday, June 14, gardens will be open to those enjoying the Community Garden Club of Cohasset's final session of "Four Seasons in the Garden." All participants will gather at Lightkeepers at 9:30 am for a lecture on aspects of the late spring garden and various other gardening topics. A full lunch and garden visits will follow. For more information or tickets, contact judyd617@comcast.net or Lee at 781-383-0361. Darilynns, Buttonwoods Books, Windsor Tea Room and Kennedys Garden Center are selling tickets at $40 before June 14 and $45 on the day of the event

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Lobster rolls tradition continues

Still time to place orders for popular treat

Enjoy the lobster rolls while perusing the showcased crafts and fine artists from New England and beyond at the South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common - Fathers' Day Weekend, Friday, June 15 through Sunday, June 17.

Order your lobster rolls early and consider treating your whole family or office staff to a toast to summer. First Parish, adjacent to Cohasset Common, has held its price for the all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips at $13 for several years.

The lobster rolls are so popular that pre-ordering is highly recommended; walk-ins will be welcome as long as supplies last. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of 1,200 lobster rolls last year! Consider Strawberry Shortcake for dessert at the Second Congregational Church.

There are several ways to place your lobster order: pick up an order form at the Parish House on Monday - Thursday 10 a.m. – 3 p.m.; call Diana Kornet at 781-383-6576; or e-mail:first-lobster@verizon.net.

Mail your check to First Parish Cohasset, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Preorders will be accepted until 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 14th.

Hours for order pickup next week at the Parish House, 23 N. Main St.:

- Friday, from 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.
- Saturday, from 11 a.m. - 7 p.m.
- Sunday, from 11a.m. - 3 p.m.

Something for everyone at May Arts Night

May Arts Night is an annual Osgood School tradition where the entire student body is encouraged to come and be creative. The night's activities included children experiencing all types of art including painting, drawing, and creative expression.

The South Shore Ballet put on a fantastic performance for the students and Jodi Craft really jazzed up the crowd with the students joining in for some Zumba! Mr. Dykas, the physical education teacher, drew a huge crowd participating in his legendary dance moves like the cha cha slide.

Students were also able to try out the musical instruments of all kinds.

Dels Lemonade provided their fantastic treats for all to cool off after all the dancing!

Special thanks to the May Arts Night Committee including Heather Nicholls, Kathy Bergers, and Patrick Olsen — the night was a huge success!

Time to 'tri' again

Sixth annual Cohasset Triathlon coming to town

By Erin Dale
tdale@wickedlocal.com

It's almost time to lace up those running shoes, ready those bicycles, and get ready to jump into the waters at Sandy Beach. The sixth annual Cohasset Triathlon is a mere two weeks away.

This year's event will see over 850 athletes descending upon the town, including celebrity competitors Senator Scott Brown, Olympic medalist Gary Hall, Jr., and father-and-son team Dick and Rick Hoyt, who together have competed in over 1,000 races, including last year's triathlon. Of these competitors, 175 are Cohasset residents. The race kicks off on Sunday, June 24.

Last year, Olympic triathlete Jarrod Shoemaker took top honors; this year could prove just as exciting, with contenders like Hall racing around Cohasset. Hall also has type 1 diabetes, which is the cause the Cohasset Triathlon was founded to support.

Race founder and director Bill Burnett is pumped for the event, which will feature "the largest contingent of Cohasset athletes on the starting line" in the race's history.

"We're starting to feel that buzz around town," Burnett added. "It's awesome. We are gearing up for a tremendous day race for the community, the local businesses, and our local athletes. This race promotes an active healthy lifestyle, which is great for our younger generations to see and experience."

The buzz for this year's triathlon started early. When registration opened on the triathlon's website on Dec. 1, 2011, a record was shattered, as the race experienced the fastest sell-out in its history.

Registration was full within 40 minutes of sign-ups going live, Burnett reported. Not only was this the fastest sell-out for the local triathlon — a national record was shattered as well. Of "any sprint-distance triathlon, we're the fastest to sell out in the entire country," said Burnett. "To be the fastest sprint distance triathlon in the country to sell out is something we all should be very proud of."

While Burnett is proud of the race's success and all the funds and awareness that have been raised for type 1 diabetes – "We've raised close to $900,000" cumulatively, said Burnett – the triathlon's director said he'd like to emphasize how much the event gives back to the Cohasset community as well.

The race also supports the Cohasset Food Pantry and Sandy Beach Association. Burnett said that any local businesses that donate to the food pantry will gain access and sponsorship at the triathlon. Several town businesses have stepped up so far, said Burnett.

The race director also said that the event could always use more community help.

"We're always looking for volunteers," Burnett said. "This is a really strong community effort. All of our race coordinators are Cohasset residents."

The director explained how the triathlon has grown exponentially since its inception six years ago. In 2006, Burnett, an All-American swimmer, got the idea to start a triathlon in Cohasset.

"I've been a resident for 10 years," said Burnett, "and I'd done many triathlons before; I like to stay fit... Back in 2006, I talked to a couple friends, and all of this kind of came together."

Burnett said a friend, whose son was afflicted with type 1 diabetes, inspired him to select that disease as the race's chief cause.

The first race was held in 2007, which Burnett said was a challenging first year. While the race had 500 athletes that first year, a participant died during the event.

"It was a tough year," Burnett recalled. "But we came back strong the next year, and now it's completely evolved."

All in all, the triathlon director said that he is happy with how the race has grown and hopes the Cohasset community will continue to show support.

"It blows me away, all the support we're getting from people in the community," Burnett said. The local love for the race, he added, "is second to none; I love how the event brings the community together to showcase the incredible place we call home... To me, the success of that isn't just me; I feel like everyone is pitching in to make this thing awesome."

What would make the event especially awesome this year? "I want people to get excited about it and be on the streets watching the athletes," said Burnett. "Obviously, I want more and more people... Cohasset is a special place that I am proud to call home, and share a little bit of it with the outside world."

For more information on the upcoming Cohasset Triathlon, including a chart of the race, see an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Famous racers rave over Triathlon

- "Bill Burnett and his team in Cohasset execute one of the best triathlons in the region. The event is safe and competitive. As an athlete myself, I thank Bill, his sponsors, and the Town of Cohasset for supporting the event that promotes an active healthy living lifestyle." – U.S. Senator Scott Brown
- "As a swimmer representing the United States National Team for 16 years, I attended and participated in many events and met many event directors. None have impressed me more than Bill Burnett and his team at the Cohasset Triathlon. Their 'fastest-to-sell-out' triathlon is a result of warm hospitality, admirable organization and a festive atmosphere." – Olympian Gary Hall, Jr.

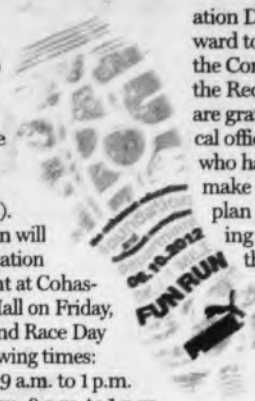
Family Fun Run is this Sunday

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner



This Sunday, June 10th, the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) adds "Running" to the three "r's" of education, as part of the 1st Annual Family Fun Run. The CEF supports reading, writing, arithmetic and all worthwhile needs of the Cohasset Public Schools. This First Annual event, sponsored by title sponsor, PUMA, is presented by the CEF and the Cohasset Recreation Department. More than 200 runners are expected for the 5K, and the Tot Trot is nearly sold out.

The 5K race begins at 1 p.m., the 1 mile Walk/Run begins at 2:15 p.m. The Fun Fair will be open from 1 to 4 pm. There will be a Penniman Farm Petting Zoo, Face Painting, a Dunk Tank, children's games and more. Mr. Dykas will be holding a Dance Party at 2:30 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by the Rusty Skippers and Jim Armstrong and the New City Cowboys. Fun Fair and post-race refreshments will be available thanks to: b.good burgers, Del's Lemonade and Nona's Ice Cream.

This event does specifically support the CEF and the Cohasset Recreation Department, yet it is through community support, like that of Pilgrim Bank, that this fundraiser is taking place. It's a chance for the town to come together and have some fun and celebrate the beginning of summer.

There is still time to register, in person only, for the 5K Race (on-line is now closed). Registration will be at Recreation Department at Cohasset Town Hall on Friday, Saturday and Race Day at the following times:

- Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Saturday , 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.
- Sunday, 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Bib and T-shirt pick-up are the same times as listed above.

Getting your packet early is the best way to ensure that participants receive their desired T-shirt size.

The race is rain or shine (fingers crossed for shine!)

Garden club tour to feature seven gardens

The garden tour presented by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset on Thursday, June 14, will highlight seven Cohasset gardens. The day will begin at Lightkeepers at 9:30 a.m. with a lecture. Participants generally arrive between 9 and 9:30 a.m. to enjoy a hot drink and to socialize. How to landscape in Cohasset, using native trees, shrubs, groundcovers, perennials and annuals will be discussed. Conservation, as it affects gardening and the gardener, dovetails nicely into the use of native plants. Other topics to be covered will be how to cope with invasive species, and how a gardener can keep himself and his family healthy in the garden by both positive choices and by knowing what to avoid.

Included in the ticket price will be lunch, anticipated by all who enjoyed the chef's earlier efforts in the bloom-filled environment created by her.

Tickets are $40, if purchased prior to June 14. On the day the price is $45.

along with fellow retiree Lauren Cook, a teacher at Osgood elementary school who taught for 15 years in Cohasset and 22 years total (see sidebar for full list of district retirees). The teachers received standing ovations, cheers and resounding applause from the students, parents and community members in attendance.

Following the song and a greeting from Dr. Gill, senior class president Kyrel Jaundoo addressed the crowd, jokingly opening his speech with "my fellow Americans," to the audience's amusement.

Jaundoo's speech recalled growing up through Cohasset schools over the past 12 years. "How the years fly by," he said, touching upon fond memories from elementary school. "Look at us now — the same snotty-nosed faces are now full of facial hair and Sephora products." But unlike those carefree childhood days, the class president continued, "there are no more re-dos or make-ups… Success awaits us. Are you ready to reap the benefits of working hard and getting what you want?

"I challenge all of you today to trust yourselves," Jaundoo continued. "Trust your inner strength. We are about to take the world, Skippers. Be proud of yourself for carrying you the entire way. Let's be proud of what we've accomplished; the true test has yet to come."

The class president closed his speech with a quote from comedian Conan O'Brien's address to Harvard grads in 2000: "Success is a lot like a bright, white tuxedo. You feel terrific when you get it, but then you're desperately afraid of getting it dirty, of spoiling it in any way."

"I challenge you to be successful," said Jaundoo, "and to not be afraid to get dirty along the way."
